Chamberlain 'Peace' Jeered In Clash With Lloyd George

Rather Bow to Franco Than Precipitate World War, Premier Says.

Chamberlain Upheld.

By Joseph Driscoll.

London, June 23.—In one of the most dramatic scenes in the House of Commons in recent years Prime Minister Chamberlain and David Lloyd George, Prime Minister of the World War, crossed swords tonight on whether Great Britain should wage war against Gen. Franco to halt the repeated attacks on British ships in Spanish government ports, where two more ships were sunk yesterday.

The wartime premier argued that Britain should undertake reprisals against Gen. Franco and risk the war, which it could win easily. The peacetime premier replied that there was more than Franco to reckon with, and there was a real risk of plunging Europe and perhaps the world into a general conflagration which would be disastrous to civilization. He proposed to continue his policy of nonintervention in Spanish affairs.

Cabinet Shaken.

The prolonged and bitter debate shook Chamberlain's cabinet to its foundation, but at the end—after extraordinary demonstrations by gallery spectators—the man from Birmingham was still head of the government.

However, it is becoming apparent the sinking of British ships is not increasing the prestige of the government, and if Franco, Premier Mussolini or Chancellor Hitler, or whoever is responsible, persists in such adventures, he may eventually force Chamberlain out.

Chamberlain observed Tuesday that as long as the Spanish war lasted attacks on British ships in Spanish ports were to be expected. Following the sinking of two British ships yesterday, the Labor and Liberal Parties joined forces tonight to compel an emergency debate and to demand that the government make use of the powerful royal navy and air force against Franco.

Britain Offers Aid To End China War

London, Friday, June 24 (U.P.).—Great Britain is ready to act as mediator to end the conflict between China and Japan, it was learned today.

The government's readiness was reportedly revealed by Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax when he appeared before the foreign affairs committee Thursday night in a private session.

Lord Halifax reportedly pointed out that the undeclared war had developed in such a manner that it might be possible, with the assent of both Japan and China, for Britain to negotiate a peace.

Maryland Waterspout 5 Miles Away

The thin vertical line between two telephone poles is the waterspout, one of the largest reported in the Chesapeake Bay area, which swirled across the Susquehanna Flats section of the bay yesterday near Aberdeen. The spout passed within 5 miles of Aberdeen, from where this picture was made, but collapsed before reaching land. The column was hundreds of feet high. The phenomenon was accompanied by an electrical storm with high wind and torrential rain which uprooted trees and put telephones out of commission.

Japan Invokes Act Mobilizing War Materials

To Force Substitutes' Use, Control Prices and Distribution.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, June 23.—The Japanese government announced today further tightening of the nation's economic belt to meet the needs of the undeclared war with China.

The retrenchment program is expected to be put into operation July 15 by implementing economic clauses of the national mobilization law.

This law, passed by Parliament March 26, places the life and property of the lowliest citizen as well as the greatest corporation in government hands during "time of war or national emergency."

The government already has invoked sections requiring police registration of all adults and empowering examination of reports of any business.

The new program, called "mobilization of materials," was announced as "giving priority to the supply of arms, ammunition and export materials."

The government's announcement declared "the ultimate end of the current incident (the Chinese-Japanese war) still is very distant."

Included in the program were:

Foreign trade—Further curtailment of imports, except war supplies and material necessary for exports.

Prices and money—Control of commodity prices to halt the current upward trend and promotion of thrift among the people by which an estimated $2,320,000,000 would be saved in 1938.

Other measures—Control of dis-

Doctor Sought Here for Md. 'Creek' Death

Anesthetic Overdose Is Theory; D. C. Conductor Claims Alibi.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Prince Frederick, Md., June 23.—Investigation of the murder of Mrs. Esther Lewis was pursued in Washington last night as police sought a doctor for questioning.

Meanwhile, the middle-aged Capital Transit Co. conductor arrested yesterday was grilled here again today. Police said he would remain in custody.

Meanwhile in Washington Detective Sergt. Jeremiah Flaherty, interviewed several friends of the woman. He said he was trying to uncover clews which might lead to the murderer and announced that he would continue his investigation today.

Officials started the search for the doctor as they turned to the theory that the 31-year-old mother of six children died from an overdose of anesthetic. The conductor, after a total of 10 and a half hours of questioning, continued to deny having any knowledge of Mrs. Lewis' death. He declared:

"I can account for every minute of my time from 2:30 p. m. last Thursday until police came for me yesterday, thank God."

"If police would just check up on this thing as I've asked them to do, God knows they could eliminate me from any suspicion, and it seems to me there are enough police on the case to have checked long ago," he told a reporter from his jail cell.

The questioning today followed seven and a half hours of grilling last night at the North Beach jail.

When police took the man back to his cell, Capt. Edward McK. Johnson, of the Maryland State police, who is in charge of the police investigation, said "we are unable to change his story."

"We are still considering the

Barbara to Jail Count in Fight For Son if He Enters Britain

By Frank Kelley.

London, June 23.—A warrant for the arrest of Count Kurt Haugwitz-Reventlow, should he attempt to land in England, was issued in London today at the request of his wife, the former Barbara Hutton, who is fighting to retain custody of their 2-year-old son, Lance, and bring up the child according to her own ideas.

Police and immigration officers kept a close watch at channel ports and Croydon Airdrome for the 42-year-old Danish nobleman, but he remained in Paris for a "family conference" with his father-in-law, Franklyn Hutton, Mrs. Hutton and his mother, who arrived there late last night.

Authorities refused to disclose the charge on which the warrant for the count's arrest was based. The warrant was granted yesterday afternoon on the application of Sir Patrick Hastings, the countess' lawyer, after she had visited Bow Street Police Court to give sworn testimony before a magistrate.

Magistrate T. W. Fry remained at Bow Street Court all day today ready to deal with the case. It had been expected the count would return voluntarily from Paris to answer the allegations contained in the warrant. No reference was made in court to the case, however, and at 5 o'clock Magistrate Fry went home.

It is understood the charge lodged against the count is not one of an extradictable offense. If he decides

Vote Inquiry Narrowed to 2 Questions

By Robert C. Albright.

Two pointed questions were prepared yesterday for submission to every Senatorial candidate in an effort by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee to stamp out the use of Government money or official influence in primaries and elections.

As phrased tentatively by Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, subject to committee approval today, the questions were:

"Do you know of any use of Government funds by anyone in your own behalf or in behalf of others?"

"Does any Government official have any connection with your campaign, formally or informally, or is any Government official helping you in any way?"

Supplementing the routine forms sent out in election years by the committee, seeking data on violations of the corrupt practices act the additional questions suggested by Chairman Sheppard strike directly at the use of Federal funds in political campaigns, as widely charged in the closing days of Congress.

Sheppard was authorized to prepare the questionnaire at the initial meeting of the Senate group last week, when a resolution was adopted warning Government bureaus to keep "hands off" political campaigning and admonishing all candidates that "improper conduct" would be fully investigated and prosecuted.

To Meet This Morning.

The tentative questionnaire will be laid before the full committee at an organization meeting this morning, when the group will outline its plans for the summer and decide on staff requirements.

Concident with the launching of the Administration's $3,753,000,000 spending-lending program, the strong stand of the committee was designed to serve as a deterrent to political use locally or otherwise of Federal relief or regular appropriations.

Other matters on the committee's agenda for today were:

Decision on whether to employ a permanent committee counsel or to engage legal aid on a temporary basis when evidence is uncovered for action of the committee.

Selection of a chief investigator whose name probably will be made public, and assistant investigators who will serve in an anonymous capacity.

9 Persons Drown In Western Flood; Baby Is Missing

Havre, Mont., June 23 (AP).—Nine persons drowned and a baby was missing tonight in cloudburst floodwaters that surged into north central Montana rivers out of normally dry coulees and gulches.

Farmers evacuated their homes in the valley flats of the Milk River, swollen by the Coulee torrents. The towns of Malta and Harlem built bulwarks against the advancing flood stream.

Searchers found the bodies of eight flood victims in Gravelley Coulee, near Laredo, 12 miles south of Havre. Homes and buildings in the Coulee were carried from 8 to 10 miles by the sudden flood that trapped the victims.

Slaying Evidence Banned in Harlan

London, Ky., June 23 (AP).—The slaying of a company-paid deputy sheriff and the "belling" of a mine camp doctor were touched upon today by a Harlan County coal operator testifying as a defense witness in the Harlan anti-union conspiracy case.

Federal District Judge H. Church Ford sustained Government objection to details of the incidents on the ground the witness, William H. Seinknecht, could offer only hearsay testimony.

Shearer, Gable to Lead 'Gone With the Wind'

Hollywood, June 23 (AP).—Norma Shearer and Clark Gable will play the leading roles in "Gone With the Wind," it was learned at Selznick International Studio today.

Both are under contract to M.-G.-M. Studios, which will release the picture. Production is scheduled for next December.

Maintenance Of Way Cost Cut Sharply

Reduce That Expense 21 Per Cent; Lay Off 250,000

By Edward T. Folliard

America's railroads, now in a desperate financial plight, have been compelled to reduce sharply their expenditure on maintenance of way, a major railway safety factor.

In April, 1937, the amount spent on maintenance of way and structures—which means rails, crossties, ballast, bridges, tunnels, buildings along the right of way, signal apparatus and labor—was $42,104,234. Last April the amount was only $33,149,544, a reduction of more than 21 per cent.

Railroad experts, contemplating these figures, privately admitted their concern. At present, they said, rails and roadbeds were in good shape and there was not much to worry about. But obviously, they added, such a retrenchment policy could not long continue without the danger of serious consequences.

250,000 Workers Laid Off.

More than a quarter of a million railroad employes have been laid off in the last year. On July 15, 1937, the number of employes on Class 1 railroads was 1,174,434. By May 15 last the number had fallen to 904,897.

Of those laid off, two-thirds were employed on maintenance of way and structures and on maintenance of equipment. Generally, the number of railroad workers is the lowest in 40 years.

Train accidents in 1937, due to mechanical defects or improper maintenance of way equipment, were 32 per cent less than in 1928. There has been no suggestion that Sunday's wreck of the Olympian, which plunged through a flood-weakened bridge in Montana, was due to carelessness or poor equipment. Nevertheless that disaster, with its toll of 40 dead, has emphasized in the minds of railroad men the danger of too drastic economies now or in the future.

Wage Cut Sought.

The records of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Association of American Railroads show that the roads were buying heavily of equipment when the business slump began last year. Some idea of what this slump did to railroad revenue may be judged from the fact that car loadings in the first 23 weeks of 1938 were 25 per cent less than for the same period in 1937.

The railroads, 30 per cent of which are now in receivership or

Clipper to Carry 100 Is Designed; Is 300 Feet Wide

Seattle, June 23 (AP).—The Boeing Aircraft Co. disclosed plans today for a plane twice as big as the newly-built 42-ton Clipper which some engineers called the "last of the little airplanes."

The plans have been submitted to Pan American Airways in response to an invitation to design a ship capable of "carrying 100 passengers 5,000 miles non-stop, at speeds up to 300 miles an hour."

Officials said the ship would weigh more than 100 tons and have a wingspread of approximately 300 feet, twice the span of the present Boeing Clipper.

Six propellers would operate from the leading edge of the wing, with motors mounted within the wings.

Bill Gives U. S. Holmes Mansion

2,000 Sugar Employes Strike in Philadelphia

Philadelphia, June 23 (U.P.).—Nearly 2,000 employes struck in three sugar refineries today after months of negotiation had failed to bring agreement on a new contract between the companies and the United Sugar Workers Union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate.

Pickets patrolled the gates to the Franklin, McCann and Pennsylvania sugar refining companies. The union said the companies refused to grant wage increases and a closed shop.

District Calls on Ickes To Act at Once on 15 Urgent PWA Projects

Monopoly Quiz Holds No Peril For Business, O'Mahoney Says

Proposing a "constructive objective" study of the entire economic system, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, said last night he knew "of no reason why business should be alarmed" at the forthcoming legislative-executive investigation of monopolies.

O'MAHONEY.

"I think business is as much interested as Government in developing the facts," Senator O'Mahoney, sponsor of the resolution authorizing the inquiry, told The Post in an interview.

O'Mahoney May Be Chairman.

"I see here an opportunity for a constructive objective study of the entire economic system. I know of no obstacle in the path of such a study. I have had numerous indications of a growing desire on the part of business and commercial leaders to co-operate in working out a national system. The investigation will speak for itself."

O'Mahoney, who is expected to be named chairman of the group, said his own objective for the investigation is "self-Government for business" under law. In a speech earlier at the National Press Club he asserted:

"The educated democracy of America will teach the world how to preserve democracy in government and in business."

Only One Member Needed.

With 11 of the 12 members of the committee already designated (three Senators, three House members and representatives of the Justice, Treasury, Labor and Commerce departments and the Securities and Exchange Commission), organization of the investigation awaited only appointment of a representative of the Federal Trade Commission.

No date has been set for the first full committee meeting, but informal conferences have been going on between members. The committee has authority either to sit and hold hearings as a group or to separate itself into separate units. Despite the even balance of representatives of Congress and the executive departments (six from each), Senator O'Mahoney denied likelihood of "controversy within the committee."

Borah Declines Comment.

REA Charges Raid by Bond And Share Co.

By William V. Nessly.

"Outrageous" raiding of Rural Electrification Administration projects by subsidiaries of Electric Bond & Share Co., is charged by John M. Carmody, REA administrator, in messages made public yesterday.

Using the terms "jungle activity" and "antisocial behavior," Carmody said in one telegram to C. W. Grosbeck, president of E. B. S., that "this sort of conduct reflects on every decent private utility."

At the same time there was circulated by the Committee of Utility Executives a list of PWA grants and loans, as of April 12, for municipal power plants that would compete with existing private systems. Preceding the list was reprinted Senate Majority Leader Barkley's statement to the Senate June 2, that he was authorized by the President to say it was not intended to allocate funds for such purpose until the municipality "has in good faith" made an offer to purchase the existing private plant "at a fair and reasonable price."

Conflict With Harmony Reports.

Issued without comment by the utility executives, the statement served to direct attention to the utilities' charges of unfair Government competition with private enterprise.

Both the Carmody telegrams and the utilities' statement were in sharp contrast with recent reports

Stock Upturn Sets Records In Fourth Day

2,403,270 Shares Change Hands; Value Rises 15 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 23.—Wall Street's "bull" field day swept into its fourth session today in one of the swiftest share market spectacles business-hungry brokers have enjoyed in months.

Here were some of the results:

Equities of some of the country's leading concerns had added $1 to $5 or more to quoted values.

Changing hands were 2,403,270 shares, the biggest day's business since last October.

The 60 stocks in the Associated Press compilation averaged $1.20 higher, at $44, best since last March 5.

Ending their fourth day of violently rising prices, the 60 stocks in the average had advanced nearly 15 per cent in value, one of the swiftest upsurges in so short a space of time in modern exchange history.

Buying spread from stocks into some of the smaller commodity markets. There were again sharp gains in futures of metals, hides, rubber, cocoa and sugar. Cotton advanced as much as 45 cents a bale. Wheat and corn at Chicago, however, were narrow.

Some of the big share price gains of the day, $2 to upwards of $5, included American Smelting at $44.50 a share; Westinghouse Electric, $87.25; American Telephone, $140.50; U. S. Steel, $50.75; Santa Fe, $31.12.

Television Catches Death Fall, Startles Technicians in Studio

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 23.—A mobile television transmitter picked up a street scene of life and death today—the plunge of a young woman from a Rockefeller Center skyscraper—speeding clear images of her fatal, 11-story fall to a Radio City studio screen before which a little group of technicians sat in shocked silence.

By a tragic accident, Miss Marian Perloff appeared in the strangest experiment television has ever recorded. A transmitter was being used to make test shots in the Rockefeller plaza area and was feeding its images by cable to the studios.

O. B. Hanson, chief engineer for the National Broadcasting Co., by portable telephone had just directed Ross Plastid, who was at his camera atop his motorbus in the street below, to make a shot of the front of the R. C. A. Building.

Complying, Plastid turned his lens back toward the plaza.

"When I turned my camera," he said, "I saw a falling body. My camera picked her up as she passed the sixth floor and I followed her down."

Hanson's group, waiting before the screen in the studio, had turned attention elsewhere momentarily, and missed the first part of this extraordinary scene.

"The first we knew that anything had happened," he said, "was when we heard a sound like a Construction on All 3 Could Start Before '39, Hazen Says.

The Recovery Drive.

PWA yesterday allotted $61,342,346 more in the current spending-lending drive, while the Army engineers swelled the flow of Federal funds to local areas by allotting $20,000,000 for rivers and harbors work. PWA Chief Ickes called for a permanent PWA. Page 2.

Senator O'Mahoney said of the inquiry into monopolies that "business is as much interested as Government in developing the facts," and that there was no reason for business to be alarmed.

For the fourth successive stock exchange session market leaders surged upward in the speediest dealings in months. The ticker tape once was six minutes behind.

Charles V. McLaughlin, acting Secretary of Labor, reported that between April and May 300,000 persons lost their jobs in private industry and regular governmental employment. Page 7.

D. C. Projects Urged.

The District Commissioners yesterday formally submitted for approval a list of 15 "urgently needed" projects to Secretary Ickes, PWA Administrator.

District building sources disclosed that three of the projects have already received approval from the PWA examining division. These are a municipal court building to cost $1,500,000; juvenile court, which will be erected in Judiciary Square at a cost of $550,000, and a ward building for Gallinger Hospital at a cost of $750,000.

Commissioner Hazen yesterday expressed hope Ickes would act immediately on the District projects, totaling $18,150,000.

Bill Slated for Signature.

In a letter to the PWA administrator, Hazen said "it is our understanding that the three dockets have full approval of PWA and that funds will be advanced as soon as the President signs the Senate bill."

President Roosevelt is expected to sign the bill. The "parent" PWA already has been signed, as has been the enabling act for the District, which gave the local government parity with the States in PWA spending.

Under the terms of the enabling act the District will pay back to the Federal Government 55 per cent of the loan in 25 years and the remaining 45 per cent will represent an outright grant.

Under the terms of the old enabling act the District operated on a 70-30 basis.

Plans Under Way.

Hazen assured Ickes construction could start on each project prior to January 1, 1939.

He said specifications for the municipal court are substantially completed. The plans for the Juvenile Court can be taken up immediately and completed within three months. The same holds true for the Gallinger ward building.

It was revealed yesterday it would be impossible to include funds for a main library in the PWA list at this time. A move was under way to have the Commissioners include this project in the list, but instead a sum of $300,000 was requested for library improvements.

Limitations provided by the PWA

Ickes Urges A Permanent PWA Program

$61,000,000 More Allotted; Secretary Favors Continuous Fight on Slump.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes urged yesterday that a permanent Public Works Administration be established to pull in the slack and produce employment at the first sign of business recessions.

The idea was advanced while PWA, now rated as a temporary, emergency agency, swung into the second day of President Roosevelt's lending-spending program.

It allotted $61,342,346 in loans and grants to finance State and municipal construction of schools, bridges and other projects. This brought the two-day total of such allotments to $139,156,974.

Five Huge Projects.

Five million-dollar projects were included. They were:

Tacoma, Wash., $2,700,000 grant for a $6,000,000 two-lane highway bridge over Puget Sound; Toledo, Ohio, $1,484,775 grant for $3,299,500 of waterworks improvements; Chicago, $1,262,636 grant for a $2,783,636 highway viaduct approach, 109 feet wide, to relieve traffic on Michigan avenue; Mineola, N. Y., $1,192,500 grant for a $2,650,000 courthouse; Middletown, Conn., $1,040,130 grant for $2,311,400 of hospital buildings.

The Army Engineers swelled further the flow of Federal funds to local communities by allcting approximately $20,000,000 additional for New York on 86 rivers and harbors projects. The engineers last week allotted $112,000,000 for other rivers and harbors improvements and flood control works.

Big Waterway Asks.

Largest of yesterday's allotments was $3,385,000 for work on the Missouri River from its mouth to Fort Peck, Mont. Other allotments included:

New York and New Jersey channels, $1,364,000; Inland Waterway, Cape Fear, N. C., to Winyah Bay, S. C., $1,141,300; Great Lakes to Hudson River Waterway, New York, $1,000,000; Casieu River and Pass, Louisiana, $1,000,000; Detroit River, Mich., $1,000,000; Sacramento River, Calif., debris restraining dams, $1,000,000; Onancock River, Va., $25,500; Chincoteague Bay, Va., $$25,700; James River, Va., $600,000; Lafayette River, Va., $12,000.

Ickes told reporters that because PWA had studied many projects, it had 3,000 of them ready to go "the moment Congress and the President gave us the signal." If PWA were made permanent, he said, it could be ready for similar quick action in any future depressions.

Jobs Open to All.

"The way we have started this program convinces me that we should always have a backlog of projects," he said.

Discussing his method of selecting projects, he said he took "good ones" as they came along. Although he said he did not intend to concentrate too many projects in any one community, he expressed belief that the location of projects did not make much difference, so far as the effects on business are concerned.

PWA projects, he said, stimulate business generally, regardless of where they happen to be located.

As for his employment policy, he said:

"The effect of this program, or any future program," he emphasized, "is to give employment . . . But there is nothing in the legislation requiring us to take labor directly from relief rolls. Anyone who wants work may apply for employment on a PWA project."

Ickes emphasized that applicants must act quickly to get requests for loans and grants approved within the 98 days remaining before application lists are closed.

Lonergan Escapes New Deal's Purge

A further curtailment in the left-wing New Deal "purge" plans for the State primaries was indicated yesterday when Democratic political circles learned that Senator Lonergan, of Connecticut, one of the foes of the President's court bill, was going to escape Administration reprisal.

Both Postmaster General Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Attorney General Cummings, whose home State is Connecticut, have given assurance to Senator Lonergan's friends that they will give no aid to a rival candidate.

Building Allowed For Holton-Arms

Following a lengthy executive session yesterday the District Zoning Commission granted a variance in the regulations to the Holton-Arms School to permit construction of a third-story addition to one of the buildings on the school grounds.

Recently the school was granted a permit for the addition, but the commission revoked approval when a group of residents near the school complained the addition was a violation of the zoning regulations.

Central Business Men Approve Chest Policy

Approval of the Community Chest policy of permitting contributors to designate the agencies to which their contributions shall go was voiced at yesterday's meeting of the Central Business Men's Association at the Harrington Hotel. Francis St. Austell, secretary of the Chest Speakers' Bureau, gave an address.

President W. J. Milehan and Arthur Clarendon Smith led the association in the indorsement of the designation idea, President Milehan declaring it to be "one of the finest things ever done to clarify the giving situation to the contributing public."

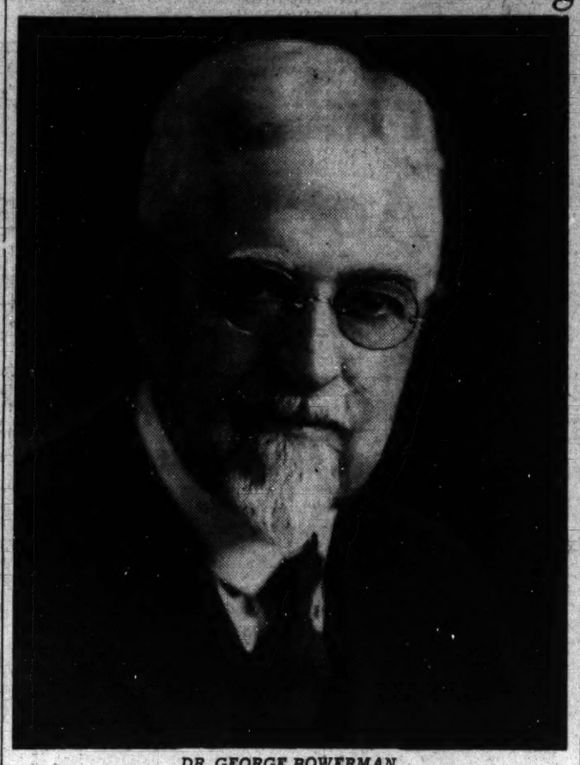
Dr. Bowerman Proud of Trend Here Toward 'Robust' Reading



DR. GEORGE BOWERMAN.

Circulation Has Increased More Than 1,000 Per Cent Since He Was Named Head of Public Library 34 Years Ago.

By Christine Sadler

When Dr. George F. Bowerman was named head of the Washington Public Library in 1904, the annual circulation of books was 276,000 volumes—of which 81 per cent was fiction. This fiscal year the circulation will pass 3,000,000 volumes—and fiction will account for but 46 per cent.

Dr. Bowerman is proud of the increased circulation and the trend toward "robust" reading.

He says:

"We have tried to make it possible for Washingtonians to read books of opinion and information, books that present every side of every subject of discussion."

Dr. Bowerman will be 70 in September, and is eligible for retirement. By special extension granted by the President, however, he will remain until the new central library building for which he has worked has been started.

Money for plans for the new library, to be erected on the site now occupied by the National Hotel, on Pennsylvania avenue, is contained in the 1939 budget. In addition, three new branch libaries have been planned for Conduit road, Anacostia and Tenley.

Dr. Bowerman relies on counting his accomplishments in terms of "brick and mortar."

"All the thrill in my work," he declares, "comes from the realization that with knowledge the human spirit is released. Reading frees man. It does not regiment him."

Biography, travel and books on vocational subjects are "coming to the front" in Washington, according to library records. An increasingly large proportion of the circulation is among school children.

A native of New York, Dr. Bowerman is connected with numerous civic and educational organizations. He is much in demand at Washington gatherings. He keeps track of his many appointments by writing notes to himself. One under the glass top of his desk admonishes, "Drink Water," but it's been there so long it has just about lost its force. "I think I'll take it out and write in in red," he said.

When he retires, Dr. Bowerman hopes to find time to read all he wants to. He considers himself fortunate in having a job that fits in so well with what he likes to do. "My hobby—reading—and my work are all of the same piece," he explains.

On Monday—Charles Schrom, chief of the Washington Fire Department, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

On Capitol Hill

DITTER.

Recalling that just one year ago yesterday President Roosevelt had ordered executive departments and agencies to set aside 10 per cent of their appropriations as an economy move, Representative J. William Ditter (Republican), of Pennsylvania, declared that inquiry reveals no economies realized and no net balance in the reserve account.

On the other hand, he said, the Treasury statement yesterday showed an increase of more than 7 per cent over last year in general departmental expenditures, an increase from $4,181,433,048 to $4,475,591,401. The increase, he declared, "concludes another chapter in the New Deal's book of broken promises."

President Roosevelt, he continued, "has accumulated, since 1933, five successive annual deficits aggregating $17,681,000,000; and we now face a prospective deficit approaching $5,000,000,000" for this fiscal year. Then he quoted from a speech by Mr. Roosevelt in 1932, in which the latter said:

"It is my pledge and promise that this dangerous kind of financing shall be stopped and that rigid governmental economy shall be forced by a stern and unremitting administration policy of living within our income."

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, sage, gray former chairman of the Senate's District Committee, last night joined the Congressional exodus that is leaving the Capitol a deserted shell.

Capper said he will head back to his native Kansas "to have a look at the wheat crop." He wants to look into reports that wet weather and accompanying rust have cut his State's bumper grain prospects down to nearly normal size.

He doubts there will be a special session.

Of the President's fireside chat tonight, he said:

"I hope it will have a reassuring note. The country is growing restless at continual proposals of new reforms, and I think the last Congress provided enough of them. Our big job now is to get people back to work in private business and all this 'reform' talk doesn't help."

Southern Senators will wield greater power in important committee rooms during the next session of Congress, the Associated Press said.

This became apparent when it was indicated that Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, would accept chairmanship of the Senate Commerce Committee, vacated by the death of Senator Copeland, of New York. Southerners then will head seven of the thirteen top committees.

Westerners hold four major posts while the Northeast is represented by two, Chairman Wagner (Democrat), New York, of the Banking Committee and Chairman Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts), of the Naval Affairs group.

Southern committee chairmen, all Democrats, are Senators Glass of Virginia, appropriations; Smith of South Carolina, agriculture; Byrnes of South Carolina, audit and control; Harrison of Mississippi, finance; Sheppard of Texas, military affairs, and McKellar of Tennessee, postoffices and post roads.

The Westerners, also Democrats, include Senators Pittman of Nevada, foreign relations; Wheeler of Montana, interstate commerce; Ashurst of Arizona, judiciary, and Thomas of Utah, education and labor.

Bailey continually has criticized administration spending policies.

Roosevelt Off To Washington From New York

By the United Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., June 28.—President Roosevelt left here at 10:07 o'clock tonight by special train for Washington.

Thomas Corcoran, one of the President's advisers, rode to the station with the Chief Executive. He said he came to Hyde Park "just for a rest," and added that he was going on the train only as far as New York.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., June 23.—President Roosevelt today approved a bill setting up a civil aeronautics authority to regulate nonmilitary aviation.

The measure was one of 55 on which the President took action before he started work on his fireside chat to be delivered to the Nation at 9:30 p. m. (E. S. T.) tomorrow from Washington.

Of the 55, Mr. Roosevelt signed 48 and vetoed seven, bringing the total of measures approved to 126, and those disapproved to 18, between his arrival Monday morning and his departure for the Capital tonight.

5 Members and Administrator.

The aeronautics authority, to have five $12,000 members and a $12,000-a-year administrator, takes some of its regulatory functions from the Bureau of Air Commerce and others from the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The President said before he left Washington that he intended to appoint the authority members and the administrator before leaving July 7 on a trip to the Pacific Coast.

Among other bills signed was one authorizing the Maritime Commission to purchase vessels for operation "on essential routes" and fixing ship building subsidies which are to represent the differences in cost of building ships in this country and abroad.

A third bill would increase the number of naval officers from the present 6,531 to 8,249 over a period of five years. The increased cost was estimated by the Navy Department at $300,000 the first year and $2,500,000 after the fifth year.

Bankruptcy Laws Revised.

Also signed was a bill revamping many sections of the bankruptcy laws. Another will permit joint Senate-House committees to cite witnesses for penalties when they refuse to answer questions—a power separate Senate and House committees already have.

The bill revising the 1938 bankruptcy law was declared by its sponsors, Representative Chandler (Democrat), Tennessee, and Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, to promote "rehabilitation of business rather than liquidation."

The new law is intended to prohibit agreements fixing fees in bankruptcy proceedings, to prevent concealment of assets and to provide for studies to determine whether a person or corporation went into bankruptcy deliberately.

All the bills vetoed were of minor nature concerning individuals.

The President still has about 175 bills on which he must act by early next week.

Retirement Deferred.

President Roosevelt signed at Hyde Park yesterday legislation revising the Navy and Marine Corps promotion system. The signature meant immediate advancement for several hundred navy officers above the rank of junior grade lieutenant and a smaller number in the Marines.

The measure, enacted in the closing hours of Congress, increased the authorized number of commissioned Navy officers by 1,031, bringing the total to 7,562. The authorized number of Marine officers was increased 211 to 1,503.

Aside from the promotion of officers who otherwise would have had to wait months for advancement, the immediate effect of the legislation will be to retain in service for a year longer 68 officers who were slated for retirement June 30 because they had not been selected for advancement.

Also directly affected were 675 Navy and 105 Marine officers who had failed of promotion but were retained in service. They will have another opportunity to advance.

The new legislation revises a promotion system in effect since 1916. Under the old system boards of senior officers selected annually those "best fitted" for advancement. Officers who failed of selection after a maximum of years in a rank had to retire ultimately.

Three Categories.

Under the revision, officers considered for promotion will be rated best fitted, fitted or unfitted. Those in the second category will be given a further chance at advancement instead of being marked for retirement.

The new authorized totals were reached by providing that commissioned officers should number 5½ per cent of the authorized enlisted personnel instead of 4¾ per cent for the Navy and 4 per cent for the Marines.

The added cost for both services was estimated at $386,000 for the next year. It will rise gradually to $3,000,000 in 1942.

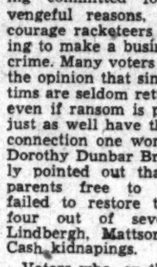
The Gallup Poll

War Debt Revision or Cancellation and Law Against Ransom Pay Favored by Public.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, June 23.—As Franklin Pierce McCall awaits the electric chair for the kidnaping and murder of five-year-old Skeegy Cash in Princeton, Fla., American public opinion believes that this country should have a law such as Canada has, making it a crime for anyone to pay ransom to a kidnaper.



George Gallup.

The anti-ransom proposal put before voters in a nation-wide Institute survey, is highly controversial since it runs counter to the instincts of parents to save their child no matter what the cost. Yet the survey found that opinion on the issue is remarkably clear-cut, with a majority of nearly 2 to 1 in favor of the law.

Men and women in every state were asked:

"Do you think it should be against the law for a family to pay ransom to a kidnaper?"

The vote was:

Yes	67%
No	33

This one-sided result indicates that the American public has been so deeply stirred by recent kidnapings that it is willing to go to almost any length to stop the crime.

The most typical comment of voters favoring an anti-ransom law is that "it will take the profits out of kidnaping."

One voter declared that while the law might not stop kidnaping committed for sadistic or vengeful reasons, it might discourage racketeers from attempting to make a business ou of the crime. Many voters also expressed the opinion that since kidnap victims are seldom returned anyway, even if ransom is paid, we might just as well have the law. In this connection one woman columnist, Dorothy Dunbar Bromley, recently pointed out that leaving the parents free to negotiate has failed to restore the victims in four out of seven cases—the Lindbergh, Mattson ,Levine and Cash kidnapings.

Voters who, on the other hand, oppose an anti-ransom law declare that such a measure would be difficult to enforce because parents would not co-operate. A typical statement of this viewpoint came from one housewife who said: "How can you make it a crime for a mother and father to try to get their stolen child back?" A few pointed out that public sympathy for the parents of a kidnap victim is so great that any legal action against them for paying a ransom might meet with wide disfavor.

Canada's law against payment of ransom was passed several years ago after the kidnaping of a wealthy Ontario brewer named Labatt. The statute has given rise to much discussion. Some observers claim that it is responsible for the fact that kidnaping in Canada is practically nonexistent. Others declare, however, that this proves little about the effectiveness of the law since the Dominion is seldom troubled with kidnapings anyway.

War Debt Revision Favored by Public

The return of Ambassador Kennedy from England to confer with President Roosevelt brings up anew the question of settling England's war debt to the United States.

His talks with the President come at a time when the trend of American public opinion is toward revision of the debts. Last March, for the first time, a majority of voters in an Institute survey favored reduction or cancellation of the sums owed us by foreign countries, instead of trying to collect in full.

	Feb. 1937	March 1938
For Full Collection	54%	47%
For reduction	37	42
For cancellation	9	11

Thus it seems clear that, two months ago at least, any move to revise the debts would have found the public in an increasingly receptive mood. The Institute is now conducting a new survey which will measure the voters' current attitude toward the debt issue.

Read the Gallup Poll in Sunday's Post and know what the average U. S. voter thinks is the cause of the present depression.

Conant Defends Hiring of Radical

Cambridge, Mass., June 23 (U.P.).—Harvard's appointment of a Communist and the dismissal of two liberals from the faculty were defended today by James Brya. Conant, president, at the university's annual alumni meeting.

Failing to name Franville Hicks, Communist, recently appointed an extra-curricular tutor, and Alan R. Sweezy and John R. Walsh, liberal economics instructors, who were given two-year concluding appointments, he said:

"To yield on the question of independence before threats from any quarter is to start down the road which ends in lack of freedom as surely as if the university were to be taken over by an arbitrary and corrupt government."

Sinews of War Ready for U. S., Johnson Says

Capital and Labor Praised for Part in Defense Program.

Capital and labor have given "whole-hearted support" to War Department efforts to gear industry into national defense plans, Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson said yesterday.

"At no previous period in our peace-time history has America been more alive to the problem of supply preparedness," Johnson told the 56 graduates of the Army Industrial College in his commencement address.

"Today, America knows that to win a war the marshaling of munitions has become coordinate with the mobilization of men."

He added that there was every reason to believe that "our capitalistic system will prove competent to take care of our war needs without any revolutionary changes."

Primaries' Trend Features Success Of Incumbents

By the Associated Press.

Analysis of primary election results in 11 States indicated yesterday that the "ins" are having marked success in winning renomination.

Only one Senator and three House members have been defeated for renomination so far this year.

The losers were Senator Herbert E. Hitchcock (Democrat), South Dakota, and Representative Louis M. Long (Democrat), Illinois, Charles N. Crosby (Democrat), Pennsylvania, and Michael J. Stack (Democrat), Pennsylvania.

In these States all Senators and Representatives who sought renomination were victorious: Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Oregon and North Carolina. Gov. Martin, of Oregon, however, was defeated.

The primary voting thus far has resulted in heavy casualties among House members aspiring to senatorial nominations. Six of them tried, but only Representative Scott W. Lucas (Democrat), Illinoise, made the grade. The others were Frank W. Hancock, jr. (Democrat), North Carolina; Fred H. Hildebrandt (Democrat), South Dakota; J. Mark Wilcox (Democrat), Florida; Otha D. Wearin (Democrat), Iowa, and Lloyd Thurston (Republican), Iowa.

Hoover Writes, Why Can't I? Turrou Pleads

Restraining Order on Spy Case Stories Continued, Decision Reserved.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 23.—Former G-man Leon G. Turrou today offered magazine articles signed by J. Edgar Hoover to prove his contention he is privileged to publish what he uncovered about foreign spies in the United States.

He attached the articles to an affidavit opposing the Government's application for a temporary injunction to restrain the New York Post from publishing Turrou's articles on the current spy hunt, which he directed until his resignation Monday. Eighteen individuals were indicted as spy suspects.

Case Without Precedent.

"There exists no pledge, no agreement, no rule, no statute and no regulation which forbids publishing any of the facts acquired by me in the course of my investigation or facts testified to by me as a witness before the Federal grand jury," Turrou's affidavit stated.

The affidavit denied Turrou would publish anything that would hinder the Government's investigation. Turrou said he had been advised the case was without precedent.

After a long debate on freedom of the press, contempt of court and obstruction of justice, Federal Judge Murray Hulbert reserved decision. A temporary restraining order was continued.

The Post had planned to start the series today. Syndication of the articles in other newspapers was held in abeyance pending the outcome of the case.

Cites Hoover's Acts.

Assistant United States Attorney John W. Burke said "He (Turrou) obtained this information while in the employ of the United States. He doesn's own it. He has it in his care, but he hasn't the right to sell it, to reveal it."

Simon H. Rifkind, counsel for Turrou, replied: "Talk about trying the case in newspapers and giving away clews and leads and information—I have here a book of clippings from every newspaper in this city, and I would like to make it an exhibit in this case. One of the most prolific sources of the news contained in these clippings is J. Edgar Hoover, who was Mr. Turrou's chief.

Burke said: "A grand jury investigation is in progress. Mr. Turrou is in possession of vital information which he proposes to sell to newspapers in all parts of the United States . . . If this information is published it will result in untold damage."

Before the hearing began, Turrou said: "I have signed confessions from all four defendants in custody—the evidence against them is so overwhelming that they cannot escape. They are self-confessed spies and they have already involved many others."

Windsor Spends 44th Birthday at Riviera Chateau

Antibes, France, June 23 (AP).—The Duke of Windsor spent his forty-fourth birthday quietly today in his new Riviera home, remaining within the grounds throughout the day.

He walked with his dogs, took a swim and aided the duchess in making alterations in the home, the Chateau de la Croe. The duke received a long-distance telephone call from London, which was reported to have been from his mother, Queen Mary.

In London the birthday of the duke, who abdicated as King only 18 months ago, went virtually unnoticed. One newspaper mentioned him in its society column—using just seven words and giving equal space to Prince Jaime, second son of former King Alfonso of Spain, who was 30.

League to Lose Nicaragua and Honduras Soon

By the Associated Press.

The republics of Latin-America are gradually drifting away from the League of Nations.

The State Department had information yesterday that Nicaragua would leave the League next Monday and that Honduras would depart July 10.

Guatemala quit Geneva May 26 and Chile and Salvador have given the customary two years' notice of withdrawal. Paraguay left last year, and some years ago Brazil and Costa Rica did the same.

Persons close to the State Department say the "good-neighbor" policy of the United States is one of the principal causes for the trend.

They reason that the Latin-American nations, fearing the colossus of the north," joined the League in the hope it would be a counterweight to the tremendous power of the United States.

Eat Corn Bread And Be Fertile, Il Duce Orders

Milan, June 23 (AP).—Premier Mussolini's Popolo d'Italia answered Italians' complaints over coarse bread today with the assertion it was better for health and manly vigor. The new bread is made—by government order—with flour containing 20 per cent corn flour or other substitutes because of Italy's diminished wheat crop and self-sufficiency program.

Not only is it more nourishing, the paper stated, but it produces greater energy for reproductive purposes and is, therefore, important to the welfare and destiny of the race.

Reich Makes All Liable to State Service

Widespread Plan Designed to Create Reserves With Idleness at Ebb.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 23.—Every German man and woman, regardless of age, class or occupation, was made liable today to undergo a period of service to the state.

Field Marshal Goering, commissar of the Nazi four-year economic independence program, will be in charge of the widespread plan, motivated by a desire to create reserves for state services now that unemployment has fallen to almost nothing.

Goering and the labor office officials appointed to carry out his decrees are to be in charge of the job assignments, which will be suited to individual abilities and which are to be undertaken under proper contract with the government at payment equal to that of a person's usual work, which will remain open until the temporary state service is finished.

Nature Not Revealed.

The exact nature of the service to be performed was not revealed in a labor office communique, which declared that "details will be announced soon." The plan becomes effective July 1.

That Jews also would be included in the sweeping measure was indicated in the use of the word "Staatsangehoerige" (dependents of the state), which would include Jews, instead of "Staatsbuerger," meaning first class citizens, which the Jews are not.

Idleness Cut to 330,000.

The statement said:

"Because of the lack of available labor market reserves, due to the great reduction of unemployment, there is no possibility of covering quickly and adequately the great need for workers, especially in important tasks whose fulfilment brooks no delay.

"The chief of the four-year plan (Goering) has therefore deemed it necessary to create the requisite legal basis for ordinances shortly to be made public."

It was said unemployment had been reduced in May to about 330,000 persons, some of whom could not work because of infirmities, and the number of employed persons had jumped to about 20,500,000—leaving no reserves for state services.

Norris Proposes Revision of Wage And Farm Plans

By the Associated Press.

Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, Roosevelt supporter, called yesterday for revision of two key Administration programs—wage-hour regulation and the crop control system.

Describing the wage-hour program as "inadequate," Norris said the initial 44-hour work-week would not be effective in reducing unemployment.

He outlined a program under which a 30-hour work-week would be a country-wide standard. A special board would be set up, however, to grant exemptions where such a standard would cripple an industry. Wages, Norris said, could be left largely to collective bargaining.

"The present farm program undertakes to reduce production," he asserted in an interview. "This cannot be the solution in the long run."

He suggested that some way might be found to increase foreign markets for farm products, and, at the same time, presserve the "ever normal granary" features of the present program.

Blum Attacks Ban on French Export to Spain

Mussolini Will Get What He Wants, Give Nothing, He Warns.

By John Elliott.

Paris, June 23.—A savage attack on the Daladier government for hermetically closing the French frontier to shipments of munitions to the Spanish republican government was made by former Premier Leon Blum in an article in the Socialist organ, "Le Populaire," this morning. He accused both the French and British governments of making "an illusory and precarious settlement" with Premier Mussolini in the matter of Spain which, in the long run, will render the international situation "more troubled than ever because of the disappointment and rancor it will leave behind."

This is the first time the Socialist leader has come out in the open with an attack on what is nominally, at least, a popular front cabinet. Though credited with being the author of the non-intervention policy it was Blum, who during his brief second premiership in March opened the French frontier to the passage of supplies to the Barcelona government to offset shipment of war material to Gen. Franco by the Germans and the Italians.

In his article today, Blum called the new government's action a "disastrous mistake" and said if the French government persists in it, Mussolini will obtain what he wants—recognition of the Ethiopian Empire and a loan on the London market—while putting off the withdrawal of the Italian Legionnaires until Franco has won the war.

"If a French control of the frontier is imposed in advance what interest has Mussolini in establishing an international control?" asked Blum.

Gravity of Opium Situation Is Cited

Geneva, June 23 (AP).—The League of Nations Opium Advisory Committee adopted a resolution today asking the league council to call the "gravity of the drug situation in the Far East to the attention of the governments concerned."

The motion referred to a similar resolution passed by the committee in 1937, but stated the situation had become much more serious since.

All members approved with the exception of Japan, which abstained, although it had voted for the 1937 resolution.

Loyalists Halt Valencia Drive Of Insurgents

Defense Lines Withstand Assaults on Both Fronts in Eastern Spain.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France (at the Spanish Frontier), June 23.—Spanish government dispatches tonight said the insurgent offensive on Valencia, former provisional capital, had been broken.

They reported that on both wings of the front in eastern Spain, below Castellon de la Plana and Teruel, government defenses had withstood insurgent assaults.

From the coast the line ran from below Castellon de la Plana inland 46 miles to Mora de Rubielos and thence 8 miles south to Sarrion.

In the south, in Cordoba province, the insurgent campaign in the Penarroya sector slowed to a halt in a blistering heat wave.

Insurgents under Gen. Jose Varela took a strongly fortified position outside the town of Sarrion, which they said dominated the surrounding battleground for some distance.

Fighting under a clouded sky and in enervating heat, Varela's troops were said to have beaten off government counterattacks, although a line of militiamen held firm on the outskirts of the town.

Insurgent dispatches reported new government activity east of Lerida, where work crews were said to be rushing fortifications in expectation of a renewed insurgent drive into Catalonia.

Bund Chief Links Jews With Reds As 'Foes of U. S.'

New York, June 23 (AP).—Jews were coupled with Communists today by Fritz Kuhn, fuehrer of the German-American Bund, who asserted "all Jews," without exception, were enemies of the United States.

Kuhn made his denunciation before the Joint Legislative Committee on Law Enforcement, investigating alleged Nazi activities.

Kuhn said "all Jews are Jews first, before they are Americans," and added his associates wanted the same rights in America as the Jews. He said he hoped to see everyone in this country give the "openhand," the Nazi salute.

The Bund leader asserted both major political parties in the United States are controlled by Jews. He told the committee the Republican Party is controlled by the house of Warburg, the Democratic Party by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and both banking houses were under the domination of the House of Rothschild.

Auditor Approves Free Meals Plan For Playgrounds

Free lunches for "necessitous school children" will be served throughout the summer, District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan stated yesterday.

Mrs. Mary Steele, WPA women's director, who is in charge of 250 women engaged in the free lunch projects, yesterday submitted a revised form of the project to make it conform to the free-lunch bill passed last week by Congress.

The bill provides $189,500 for free lunches. Under the conditions of the project any school child who during the recent school term was provided free lunches will continue to receive the lunches at the District playgrounds, provided he is "necessitous."

However, if a child did not receive lunches in school last term, but is now "necessitous," he will be furnished lunch. Children not in school last year are ineligible.

London, June 23 (AP).—The state visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to France was postponed until July 19 because of the death early today of the Queen's mother, the Countess of Strathmore and Kinghorne. The visit had been scheduled for June 28. The 76-year-old countess died in London with the King and Queen at her bedside.

Twins Born Three Days Apart in Minnesota

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Roberta Jeanne Hanson (left), who was born last Saturday, was given a sister when the stork returned with Rose Marie (right) three days later. The twins, born four weeks prematurely, and Mrs. Art Hanson, wife of a WPA painter, are "doing nicely," the attending physician said. The twins are the Hanson's first children.

Roosevelt Signs New Maritime Help Measure

Act Sets Up Labor Body, Will Sponsor Shipbuilding Program.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday approved a new legislative attempt to build up the American merchant marine. The bill he signed at Hyde Park is designed to help expand the commercial fleet to complement the larger Navy.

Naval officers had told Congress 500 new merchant ships should be built in the next 10 years, at an estimated cost of $1,250,000,000, to serve as naval auxiliaries.

Liberalizes 1936 Act.

The act liberalizes many provisions of the 1936 maritime act which substituted direct construction and operation subsidies for the former system of indirect aid in the form of ocean mail contracts.

The most controversial provision will set up a new maritime labor board to try to end labor disputes. The board will lack powers to force arbitration, but can mediate if both sides wish.

Among those mentioned as possible appointees to the three-man board are Robert Bruere, a Labor Department conciliation commissioner; Dr. Louis Bloch, of San Francisco, a Maritime Commission economist; Charles W. Sanders, chief of the ship personnel division of the Commerce Department's Bureau of Marine Inspection, and Prof. Raymond Walsh, formerly of Harvard University.

Rate Fixing Provided.

Most of the new act was suggested by Joseph P. Kennedy, former chairman of the Maritime Commission and now Ambassador to Great Britain.

Congress turned down Kennedy's request for authority to buy or build ships abroad whenever domestic costs were found too high by the commission. Instead it granted the commission power to reject domestic bids found "excessive, unreasonable, or collusive" and authority to negotiate with domestic ship yards for lower construction costs.

Authority of the Maritime Commission to fix rates for all shipping was expanded. Formerly it could determine maximum rates only.

Steamship Clerks End Puerto Rico Strike

San Juan, Puerto Rico, June 23 (AP).—A strike against the Puerto Rico Steamship Line by the C. I. O.-organized Clerks Union, was settled today in the office of Acting Gov. Garrido Morales. The company agreed to reinstate clerks pending consideration of their case.

Chinese Girl Says Husband's Father Spoiled Marriage

MILDRED LEW.

A Chinese bride whose American ways annoyed her father-in-law yesterday in the United States District Court asked $50,000 of him for alienating her husband's affections and another $50,000 of her father-in-law and mother-in-law jointly on similar complaint.

Mildred Lew, 21, of 1511 Eastern avenue, Baltimore, Md., stated that she married Norman Lew, son of Charles Lew Wah, well-to-do Chinese of 606 Fifth street northwest, on June 6, 1937.

Her husband's father, she charged in her suit, developed an intense dislike for her because he believed she lacked respect for Chinese customs.

Youthful Yacht 'Pirates' Seized at Mexican Port

Santa Cruz, Calif., June 23 (AP).—Three high school boys who sailed off in Lew K. Foote's $25,000 yacht Tira without his permission and kept going for 2,000 miles, probably will have to explain to Juvenile Court, authorities here said today.

Dispatches from Mexico City said the yacht was detained at uerto Vallarta on the western Mexican coast. The boat was taken from a wharf here 28 days ago.

A.F.L. Man Attacks Dock Union Ruling

New York, June 23 (AP).—Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association (A. F. L.), today accused the National Labor Relations Board of prejudice in certifying the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (C. I. O.) as bargaining agent for longshoremen in 31 Pacific Coast ports.

He also charged the board with lowering wages, "breaking down" working conditions and trying to "turn control" over to Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. maritime leader, whom he described as "a known Communist."

Va. Court Fines D. C. Woman $5 in 'Jim Crow' Case

Virginia's "Jim Crow" law was invoked in Arlington County yesterday for the first time in more than a decade against a bus passenger who refused to sit in a section set aside for colored persons.

Judge B. M. Hedrick, in county court, fined Christine Bryson, colored, 34, of the 5400 block of Bell road northwest Washington, $5 when conductor of the Arlington-Fairfax Auto Railroad testified that the woman refused to move from a front seat to the rear of the car.

Jeers Greet Chamberlain's 'Peace' Defense

British

Clement Attlee, leader of the Labor Party, suggested the British might well demolish Gen. Franco's navy and also destroy the Italian airdromes in the Balearic Islands.

Chamberlain reminded his critics they were touching on subjects which might bring them nearer that "dangerous borderline which divided peace from war."

Here the debate was interrupted by a spectator in the Strangers' Gallery, who arose and shouted at the prime minister: "You are encouraging Franco to murder British seamen. We seamen need protection."

He was immediately hustled out by two attendants, with two other demonstrators.

No Sympathy for Owners.

The prime minister, resuming his speech, said his government's policy was to preserve peace and keep the Spanish conflict from spreading into a European conflagration. Expressing lack of sympathy for British ship owners who were gambling for high profits and risking seamen's lives to run Franco's blockade, Chamberlain cited the case of one ship owner who had started with two ships and now operated 23.

He asked why Britain should go to war to protect a speculator's profits any more than to protect Britons who fought with either Spanish faction.

Taking up Lloyd George's challenge that the British should blockade and bomb Majorca, Chamberlain said:

"In his seventy-sixth year he would plunge this country into war."

"In my opinion," interrupted the white-haired Lloyd George, "it would stop war and it would stop the bombing of ships.

"I am perfectly certain it would stop it, especially if, as the prime minister says, they are Franco's forces and we would not be attacking a great power."

Chamberlain retorted:

"He says that if we bombed the airdromes in Majorca—and he says that they are Italian airdromes in Majorca—we should not be involving this country in war. He cannot have it both ways."

"Nor can you," shouted a heckler.

"I say," Chamberlain continued, "that is the way to start a European war. We are not going to take that risk."

The prime minister thereupon dared Maj. Attlee to "put his cards on the table" and say with whom he proposed to wage war.

"I say there is not the slightest risk of a general war," replied Attlee. "I pointed out that it was merely Gen. Franco. I do not believe that Gen. Franco would declare war on Great Britain."

Deliberate Attacks.

The prime minister asked:

"Does he believe it would stop there? Is there any responsible member of this house who would say it is safe to reply on such hypothesis as that?"

Chamberlain admitted the two British ships sunk yesterday appeared to have been attacked deliberately. Therefore, he said, he was protesting once more to Burgos and demanding an explanation.

Winston Churchill, who thinks of himself as the potential prime minister, sided with Lloyd George and Attlee. He said no other great naval powers—the United States, Japan, Italy or Germany—would have endured the attacks which Britain has suffered meekly.

"If we were at war with a European state," Churchill continued, "and we had command of the sea, and if the United States sent food ships to our country, and if these ships were bombed by long-range aircraft from the European state, would we, on the position taken up by the government at the present time, hold that they got no more than they deserved for pushing their noses in?"

Two More Hecklers.

As Churchill resumed his speech, there were two more shouts from the Strangers' Gallery: "Social credit is the only remedy." Again the demonstrators were hustled out.

A labor motion, equivalent to a vote of censure, was defeated by 275 to 141.

There is dissension in the British cabinet on the Spanish issue, and a little group of militant "young Turks" is insisting that Chamberlain use Britain's armed forces against Franco and if need be against Franco's allies.

Railroads Cut Maintenance Of Way Costs

Rail

trusteeship, moved this week to bring about a show-down on their proposal for a 15 per cent wage cut to save $250,000,000 a year. They asked for a joint conference at Chicago June 28. The Railway Labor Executives Association asked to put off the conference until July 20.

The association sent a letter to H. A. Enochs, chairman of the Carrier's Joint Conference Committee in Philadelphia, advising him that negotiations between labor and management on the individual rail properties were not completed. It said further that the representatives of the brotherhoods would meet with the representatives of the carriers on June 28 if necessary, but suggested the postponement in view of the unfinished negotiations on individual lines.

Meantime, Senator Henrik Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, suggested that the railroads dispose of 300,000 obsolete freight cars for scrap and replace them with new ones to be financed by the Government.

Shipstead, in submitting his program to Secretary of the Interior Ickes, estimated that wornout freight cars would bring $100 each as scrap, and said the money could be used as a down payment on $700,000,000 worth of new equipment.

Secretary Ickes said he would investigate to learn whether the Public Works Administration legally could participate in such a program.

"It sounded, on the face of it, like a very good proposition," he said.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation made public figures showing that 56 railroads now owe it a total of $381,733,211.

The RFC reported that it had made loans aggregating $573,558,739 to 82 carriers, but that $188,825,528 of this had been repaid.

Twenty-six of the borrowers, the RFC said, have made full repayments, including the New York Central, which borrowed and repaid $27,499, and the Pennsylvania, which borrowed and repaid $28,900,000.

The report showed that the Southern Railway had borrowed $19,610,000 and repaid $2,264,336.

The RFC made public correspondence in which S. R. Prince, general counsel of the Southern, said that this road, despite the present depressed state of revenues, sees better days ahead. While it will fail to earn the full amount of its fixed charges for the year 1938, Prince said, it can confidently expect to do so in 1939 and thereafter.

Prince urged favorable action on the road's application for authority to borrow $14,000,000 from RFC to finance the purchase of new equipment.

The records of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Association of American Railroads show that the roads were buying heavily of equipment when the business slump began last year. Some idea of what this did to the railroads can be judged from the fact that car loadings in the first 23 weeks of 1938 were 25 per cent less than for the same period last year.

Nitroglycerin Explosion Kills Seven, Hurts Four

Hobbs, N. Mex., June 23 (AP).—Seven men were killed and four injured seriously near here late today when a nitroglycerin charge, with which they were preparing to "shoot" an oil well, exploded prematurely. Among the dead was George A. Kaseman, president of the Albuquerque, National Trust and Savings Bank.

Bridges Says U. S. Faces Inflation, Asks Moderation

Pittsburgh, June 23 (AP).—Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, predicted tonight America is on the road to "disastrous inflation" and that only a "moderate" policy of accepting the good parts of the New Deal and junking the bad can save the country.

He told the National Retail Credit Association that "pump-priming won't work. If you prime a leaky pump it grows steadily worse. You have to fix the pump."

Bridges likened the New Deal to "an 80-mile-an-hour driver who endangers the lives of others on the road," and the "old guard Republican politicians" to an "equally dangerous 20-mile-an-hour driver."

He said the national debt has grown to alarming proportions, that he was a "friend of social security" but utterly opposed to the use of security reserve funds to pay current Government expenses, and added he was opposed to the Roosevelt reciprocal tariff agreements.

regarding time limits eliminated from consideration:

Any monumental building for which plans and specifications are not already well advanced.

Any building for which a site is not available.

Any building so complex as to require many months for preparation of plans.

Other Projects.

The remaining projects listed as urgently needed are:

Development of the new Municipal Center, north of Pennsylvania avenue, between Third and Sixth streets northwest. For this a sum of $2,520,000 was requested. Under the terms of the 1939 District appropriations act, $1,500,000 is provided for erection of the first unit to house the Police and Fire Department.

A new building for the Glenn Dale Sanatorium to cost $800,000.

Expansion of facilities at Gallinger Hospital to cost $675,000. This would include a ward to house 200 tuberculosis patients, quarters for resident physicians and nurses and a new heating plant.

A new fire alarm system and new building to house the system. This would cost $1,000,000.

Expansion of the school system, including a new high school, junior high schools and grade schools. For this the Commissioners requested a loan and grant of $3,841,375.

Improvements at the District Jail to cost $1,600,000. A sum of $125,000 has been provided in the appropriations act to begin this work.

Modernization of the sewer department at a cost of $1,483,625, and a sum of $300,000 for work on the Lorton Reformatory.

A District of Columbia National Guard Armory to cost $2,750,000.

Plans have been submitted for an armory to be erected at the terminus of East Capitol street, near Nineteenth street.

All of the projects except the armory are to be constructed on land to which the District has title or jurisdiction. The armory would be constructed on a site part of which has been acquired by the National Park and Planning Commission.

Monopoly Quiz Is Supported By O'Mahoney

Monopoly

on the committee's probable procedure or objectives.

But Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, third Senate member, expressed hope that the committee will confine itself to an examination of weaknesses in the antitrust laws.

"It was my view that any investigation dealing with monopolies, trusts and combines in restraint of trade, should have been made entirely by Congress," said King. "An entirely different setup has been provided.

"I do not know what the committee will do nor do I care to speak for them. All I can say is I hope the investigation will be for the purpose of determining whether the antitrust laws are adequate to meet present business and economic conditions, and if they are found to be inadequate, that legislation will be recommended for the purpose of strengthening them."

O'Mahoney, who will remain in Washington all summer to work with the group, said the agenda for study will be developed within the committee itself and he preferred not to air his views on procedure.

"I want to get results," O'Mahoney said. "We will get the facts, examine them and look for a remedy. The objective study which the President recommended in his message, is going to be carried on."

Charter Bill Discussed.

Before the National Press Club, O'Mahoney touched on the Borah-O'Mahoney Federal incorporation bill, which both the Idahoan and O'Mahoney believe offers a positive remedy for anti-trust violations. But O'Mahoney denied this bill was his main interest in the investigation. He declared that if they had so desired, the bill would have been passed last session by both Senate and House "by use of devices with which you are all familiar."

The bill would regulate interstate and foreign commerce by prescribing the conditions under which corporations may engage in interstate commerce under charters issued by the Federal Trade Commission.

O'Mahoney told the Press Club the term "monopoly investigation" was a misnomer—that "this is much broader than a study of monopoly."

"A New Era."

"It is a study," he said, "of what is happening to the United States and to the world—of whether or not the educated opinion of America can preserve democracy in the modern, concentrated economic situation in which we live. We are livin gin a new era and we don't know it."

Citing statistics on the growing concentration of population and bank deposits in the cities, and control of corporate assets by less than one-half of 1 per cent of all corporations, he said "it is clear the time has come to do something about this thing. Business leaders realize it."

"Economic freedom is lost," he said, "No man is economically free when he cannot by his own efforts support himself and his family. And when economic liberty is lost, political liberty is in danger. . . .

"Those who desire some action are not seeking to overthrow our form of government . . .

"This investigation is an invitation to put our best thought together in order to develop a national rule . . . It offers an opportunity for co-operation and if I understand aright, the opportunity will here be given to business and commercial leaders to have a voice in what the remedy shall be."

REA Charges Raid by Bond And Share Co.

Power

of greater harmony being developed between Government agencies and private utilities.

Carmody's blast at Electric Bond & Share was prompted by a reported "raid" on a new REA line by the Florida Power & Light Co. The REA head said farmers of Clay, Union, Bradford, Putnam and Alachua counties had tried for ten years without success to get the private company to give them service. He said the company demanded each farmer pay from $100 to $1,300 to build the line.

"Three weeks ago," Carmody wired, "after a year's preparation, a farmers' co-operative project financed by us began to stake lines. Immediately your company followed stakers, erecting company poles and running service into farms unasked and without service contracts. Your company's belated attempt to smash this project is outrageous."

3 Other Firms Cited.

In a second message to Grosbeck, Carmody said he had learned of four other cases in which "farmers are currently having their hopes of electric service destroyed by Electric Bond and Share companies."

He named other companies as Mississippi Power and Light Co., Western Colorado Power Co. and Kansas Gas and Electric Co.

Of the Western Colorado Power Co., he said:

"Your company is reported to have told sponsors (of a co-operative project) the area belongs to the utility and the utility will serve such portions as it chooses.

"I do not think you will contend," he added, "there is any part of America which belongs to a private utility in any such feudal sense."

Couch Notified.

Carmody told Grosbeck that he had wired Harvey Couch, former RFC director, and president of the Arkansas Power & Light Co., another Electric Bond & Share subsidiary, complaining of the Florida case and adding:

"Specifically, it is reported to me that the Florida Power & Light Co. is following the co-operative staking crews and actually erecting poles where the co-operative staked, stringing wire and running service to houses of co-operative members who say they do not want this belated service from the company.

"Frankly, I thought this kind of jungle activity ended sometime ago. I do not know what you can do about it but I feel this is a reflection on every decent utility enterprise in America."

Carmody continued, to Grosbeck: "REA has not only stuck to serving unserved farmers but insists that projects must be so developed that if not raided they will be self-liquidating. Such raiding as is now reported in Florida, similar to that already practiced by your company in North Carolina, not only denies service to many farmers but by taking cream destroys the feasibility of projects on which the Federal Government made loans in good faith."

"The President's Promise."

There was no explanation of the objective of the utility executives committee in issuing its list of PWA-aided municipal plants that were to compete with private systems.

Headed "The President's Promise," the statement reprinted Senator Barkley's assurances, made to the Senate at the time the Administration was seeking, successfully, to prevent inclusion in the spending-lending recovery bill of a ban on use of PWA funds for municipal plants in competition with private enterprise.

Barkley was quoted as saying of the President:

"In other words, it is not his purpose to allocate funds from these appropriations to set up competing publicly-owned utility plants without giving to the privately-owned utility plant an opportunity to sell its property at a reasonable price to the public which desires and is authorized to engage in the construction and operation of such a plant under the laws of the State where located."

Then followed a list of 54 municipal power projects in 21 States for which the PWA already had made grants of $28,770,256 and loans of $26,141,500, a total of $54,911,756.

However, none of the PWA allocations to date in the new spending-lending drive has been for municipal power plants.

Florida Raid Denied.

Miami, Fla., June 23 (U.P.).—Bryan C. Hanks, president of Florida Power & Light Co., tonight denied a charge his company was attempting to destroy a co-operative rural electrification project in five North Florida counties.

"Our company has not attempted, nor have we the desire to smash any rural electrification project," he said, "misunderstanding probably arose from the fact his company recently erected 15 miles of lines southwest of Palatka in North Florida."

Cox and Payne Trade Attacks On Radio Issue

Representative Urges That Commissioner Retire From U. S Body.

By the Associated Press.

Representative Cox (Democrat), Georgia, and George Henry Payne, of the Federal Communications Commission, engaged yesterday in an exchange of sharp criticisms.

Cox said Payne virtually charged that other members of the commission were responsive to improper influences exercised by what he termed 'lobbyists.'"

Cox said "restoration of confidence in the communications commission and the proper discharge of its statutory functions would be aided if Commissioner Payne were separated from the commission and the chairman of the commission, Frank R. McNinch, and the commission be given as free a hand as possible in the performance of their labors."

Cox's remarks appeared in the final issue of the Congressional Record. Payne replied in a formal statement:

"Congressman Cox's attack is so obvious an attempt to befog the issue of radio reform that it deserves little notice. The question of veracity I am perfectly willing to leave to those who know Cox and those who know me.

"He has made an invidious attempt to shake an official in his strivings to protect the public. He has built his whole case upon misrepresenting what I said. He, Cox, is trying to make out a case for monopoly and abuse in radio. I am sure he will fail."

Payne repeatedly had urged a Congressional inquiry into the radio industry, but the House rejected such a proposal shortly before adjournment.

Cox and Payne exchanged their statements while the Communications Commission prepared to consider the question of promulgating regulations governing the use of radio stations by political candidates.

Wrong Man Sent To Jail for Attack; Judge Frees Him

Chicago, June 23 (AP).—Thomas McCall, 39, was free tonight—and adjudged innocent—to re-enter the engraving business he left six months ago to serve a five-year prison sentence on a rape charge.

He was convicted last August 15 of raping Miss Virginia Austin, 25, an artist from New York, in a hotel. McCall maintained his "confession" was obtained under duress.

Later, Robert Nixon, 18, colored, accused of slaying five women, confessed, detectives said, raping Miss Austin. Nixon denied this at a hearing for McCall, but today Judge John C. Lewe examined three letters in which Miss Austin told a friend she believed her attacker was colored.

In an immediate and swift new trial, McCall was found innocent.

possibilities both of murder and suicide," he added. "The next move is now up to Dowell."

Arthur W. Dowell, the State's attorney, who also is a filling station proprietor, was in Baltimore during the day attending a tobacco growers' convention. He arrived here early tonight and said he planned further questioning of the conductor who is held without charge.

The gray-haired man had voluntarily come here yesterday to identify the body of the Mexican woman who was an expectant mother after it was found Monday floating in Lyons Creek at the Calvert-Anne Arundel County line.

Met Her on Car.

The conductor, who lives with his wife, daughter, son-in-law and granddaughter in Clarendon, Va., vigorously denied that he had confessed being the father of Mrs. Lewis' unborn child. Dowell had been quoted as saying that the man had made the confession. The Virginian also denied ever having relations with the woman.

The last time he saw here was about 1 p. m. Thursday when she was in a "very jolly" mood, he told the reporter. He talked with her a few minutes then.

He met her when she used to ride his car which went to Cabin John, Md., where the woman lived before moving to 1824 H street northwest about a year ago. She got off about 8 o'clock from her job and she rode the car.

"We just got to talking and we got to be very good friends. She was a likeable kind of girl, poor soul."

The man was still being held without charge by the police tonight. When asked why he did not hire a lawyer to help him out, he replied, "I have nothing to worry about and need no lawyer."

Details Activities.

In establishing an alibi, the man said that he went to work at 2:31 p. m. Thursday and worked till 7:40 p. m. and was home by 8:20 p. m. That night he played casino with his wife, mother-in-law, wife's aunt, daughter, son-in-law, granddaughter and foster son at home until he went to bed at 11 p. m.

The following day, he said, he went to the office for his check at 9 a. m., but was home by 1 p. m. He left again at 4 and was at work at 4:55 p. m. He then worked until 1 a. m. after which he went home.

On Saturday he was at work early because the peak load of traffic comes earlier in the day. He reported at 11:21 a. m. and worked until 1 a. m. Sunday after which he was home by 1:40.

The man's wife, who was "dumbfounded" by police taking her husband away, said at their home that they had been married more than 20 years. He was a "good husband" who was fond of his home, spending most of his time there. He had been with the company for 20 years. He was working on the lily pond when police came for him.

"Pathetic," Says Priest.

She knew that her husband was acquainted with Mrs. Lewis, understanding that they became acquainted about two years ago when there was an accident on her husband's car and Mrs. Lewis was a witness.

Meanwhile, a Catholic priest said that the deceased woman, who was left alone with six children after the death of her war veteran husband two years ago was "really the most pathetic person I have ever known."

The Rev. Louis Miltenberger, pastor of St. Martin's Church, became acquainted with the woman after the death of her husband and helped her.

Plans were being laid tonight by the Veterans Bureau for a Washington undertaker to bury the woman by the side of her husband in Arlington Cemetery.

to remain out of England, there is no legal process to compel his appearance before a British magistrate.

It is understood Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow intends to apply for an order making her child a ward in chancery. Under such an order young Lance could not be taken out of England without formal permission from the court, and neither his mother nor his father could claim his custody.

Except for two brief walks in the garden behind her luxurious home in Regent's Park, the countess stayed indoors today. Two uniformed patrolmen and two plain clothes officers from the Albany street station mounted guard outside the gate.

Shortly after 8 a. m. W. M. Mitchell, from the London law firm of Clifford-Turner & Co., arrived at the house and conferred with the countess.

This afternoon, Lord Horder, the king's physician who attended the countess after the birth of Lance, visited her for an hour and a half.

Before his arrival, the countess strolled on the terrace to watch the baby playing on the lawn. Lance was accompanied by his nurse and detectives hovered nearby.

So close was the guard maintained at the mansion even Lord Horder had to give proof of his identity before being admitted. Visitors arriving in cars and taxis had to show yellow passes or their personal cards, in order to pass through the iron gates.

Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai, naval minister, meanwhile, declared Japanese bombings of Canton were a military necessity. He called the metropolis of Southern China "one of the best fortified cities in the world."

He asserted, however, the government would "consider with sympathy" proposals for creation of neutral zones.

Shanghai, (Friday) June 24 (AP).—Chinese armies wading knee deep through Yellow River flood waters were reported today to have recaptured two cities from which major Japanese forces had been compelled to retreat.

Three hundred miles to the south floods in the Yangtze River basin, heightened by unfavorable weather, combined with stubborn Chinese resistance to hinder the Japanese joint land and naval drive up the river for Hankow, Chinese provisional capital.

The Chinese reported they had recaptured large areas east and south of Chengchow, junction of the strategic east-west Lunghai Railway and the Peiping-Hankow Railway.

The defenders said they recaptured Chungmow, on the Lunghai 25 miles east of Chengchow, and Hushih, 30 miles south of Chungmow.

At Taiho, according to Chinese reports, the invaders landed additional forces.

Coincident with these developments, reports came from Tokyo that the Japanese were planning a renewed drive against Sian, Shensi province capital in the northwest in order to cut the so-called "Red" link connecting Outer Mongolia and Kansu Province with southwestern China.

[The Japanese Domei News agency reported from Hsinking, capital of Manchukuo, the Japanese and Soviet Russian forces again clashed on the Manchu-Siberian border and Gen. Ushakoff, director of the Far Eastern Political Bureau of the Soviet Ministry of Interior, was captured, the United Press said.—Editors note.]

vide the country into zones, and authorize each member of the committee to hold hearings and direct studies in his own section.

Discussion of proposals to require candidates for the Senate to make bimonthly reports on expenditures and contributions to their campaigns.

Outgrowth of a compromise on the resolution of Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland (who had asked a separate investigation into political use of relief funds), the committee last week decided to follow the "spirit as well as the letter" of additional authority voted its members.

They have $80,000 to make both their regular investigation of corrupt practices act violations in campaigns and the supplementary inquiry into the use of Government funds. Chairman Sheppard said the group would "have to economize" and might decide on employment of temporary counsel as one means of saving.

Already several complaints have reached the committee, but the chairman said they had not been examined and would be laid before the committee unopened. Besides Sheppard, members of the committee are Senators O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; Walsh, of Massachusetts; Harrison, of Mississippi (Democrats), and White, of Maine (Republican).

The group will prepare recommendations for legislation placing statutory bans on the use of Government money for political purposes, for submission to the next Congress. Three separate efforts to write such prohibitions into the spending-lending bill failed in the Senate.

Lehman And The "Purge."

In announcing his candidacy for the Senate seat left vacant by the death of Senator Royal S. Copeland, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman has thrown a large stone into the already far from placid pond of Empire State politics, with the ensuing ripples running all the way from Albany to Washington.

On the one hand the Governor's announcement has created the possibility that the American Labor Party, which is strong in New York, may put a separate ticket in the field this fall, thus transforming what was expected to be a two-cornered race, with the Democratic-Labor Party coalition enjoying the advantage, into a three-cornered race in which that advantage may be destroyed. On the other hand, Gov. Lehman has placed the Administration on the horns of a dilemma, but with potentially salutary results.

Time was when Herbert Lehman was Franklin D. Roosevelt's "good right arm." But that was before the New York Governor began to manifest a growing hostility to certain aspects of the New Deal. The rift in the Lehman-Roosevelt friendship developed into an open split when the Governor took a strong stand against the Administration's court-packing plan. Indeed, in the opinion of many, the Lehman letter on this subject, both for its content and its timing, gave the court plan its coup de grace.

Having been cast into the New Deal's outer darkness by such lese majesty, Gov. Lehman should now be marked out as a potential victim of the "purge" decreed for all office-seeking opponents of the court-packing plan. But, as it happens, an Administration attack on the Lehman candidacy for Senator would, in all likelihood, meet with even greater failure than did the New Deal's intervention in the Iowa situation. With respect to New York's Senatorial primaries, therefore, the Administration may decide that discretion is the better part of valor.

But such an attitude, if adopted in the case of New York, as it probably will be, is worthy of imitation with respect to other parts of the country. The Administration's purge plan is not only wrong and vicious in itself but it also has boomerang possibilities. This is proved by the attitude taken by Congressman David J. Lewis in his fight with Senator Millard Tydings for the Maryland Democratic nomination for Senator. Instead of seeking Administration indorsement, Mr. Lewis has now definitely stated that he wants none of it. Ardent New Dealer though he is, he wants no Hopkins letters or Farley accolades or the blessings of other stalwarts of the Administration. For he is shrewd enough to see that such indorsements would in all probability hinder rather than help him in his campaign.

Outside The Ropes.

As in the 1800's when Hazlitt made his energetic journey to the hinterlands beyond London to witness an exhibition of the "Fancy," the incidentals rather than the actual fisticuffs comprised the most intriguing aspect of the Louis-Schmeling fight. At least for stay-at-homes.

London having been mentioned, it may be remarked first that the British press gave the match precedence even over the death of Queen Elizabeth's mother. Indeed, one Fleet Street editor devoted six entire pages to accounts of the Brown Bomber's 124-second victory. The tone used generally throughout England may be safely presumed to have been brighter than that running through the columns of Nazi publications.

In Germany the fight—as everything else, apparently—had been given a distinct political significance. No better proof is needed than the fact that of the 12 Berlin sportswriters who forecast the outcome, 11 predicted "Unser Max" would win by a knockout despite the short odds given him on the basis of reports from the training camps. Surprisingly, one dared suggest that it would be only a decision victory. Whether treason was the charge brought against this recklessly impudent journalist is as yet unreported.

Nearer the Bronx, there was the prominent politician who was known to have a $125 ringside ticket but failed to put in an appearance. It is assumed he had planned to make a spotlight entrance between rounds, but the fight ended before he could make a start. Others who missed the spectacle were the tenants of apartment buildings bordering the stadium who were kept on the roofs by police armed with nightsticks. They are suing for reductions in rent.

And there was the shipbuilder who had 800 guests in ringside seats, having previously dined them at the Waldorf—will he join the 10-per-cent-plus school of thought concerning armament contracts? Finally there were the dusky riots reported from various cities throughout the land, not excluding Washington. College students could have found in them several good pointers for football celebrations, and campus cops might learn a good lesson in mob control from the lips of the New York City police commissioner, who, commenting on the Harlem roistering, said: "It's their night; let them have their fun."

National Economic Committee.

With the appointment of five of the six Administration representatives the "Temporary National Economic Committee," created by the last Congress in its closing days, gets formally under way. Three members from each of the two Houses of Congress having been named already, the only remaining vacancy in the council of 12 is the spokesman for the Federal Trade Commission.

The committee has been created in response to the President's message of April 29 making recommendations relative to the strengthening and enforcement of the antitrust laws. Largely for this reason it is being referred to as a monopoly investigating committee. But the terms of reference are so broad, and the scope of the inquiry so enormous, that the official designation of "Temporary National Economic Committee" seems more in order. While its authority will terminate at the expiration of the next Congress, that allows the new organization over two years in which to complete its work.

Exactly what that work will be cannot as yet be defined. In the opinion of Representative Michener (Republican), of Michigan, who filed a minority report opposing establishment of the committee, no similar body "ever created by the Congress has had such vast inquisitorial power." Of the committee's extensive authority of investigation within its time-limit and its $500,000 appropriation there is no doubt.

Several of the Congressional members of the body, however, have given assurance that no campaign against business as such will even be considered. In his message of April 29, the President defined the "basic purpose" of the program as designed "to stop the progress of collectivism in business," which is a large order. Mr. Roosevelt prefaced this, however, with the assurance that the inquiry "is not intended as the beginning of any ill-considered 'trust-busting' activity which lacks proper consideration for economic results."

The clearest intimation of the line which the inquiry seems likely to follow is found in the Borah-O'Mahoney bill, introduced in the Senate last November, but not pressed to a vote by its sponsors in view of the President's subsequent call for a monopoly investigation. Senators Borah, O'Mahoney, and King compose the three Senatorial representatives on the new National Economic Committee. It is reasonable to assume that the first two will want to use their own comprehensive bill as a guidepost to direct the line of the committee's inquiry.

The Borah-O'Mahoney bill, which runs to 31 printed pages, is a very extensive and far-reaching legislative proposal. In essence it provides for enlargement of the Federal Trade Commission, from five to nine commissioners, and for the licensing of all corporate business by the commission. In addition to bringing all business "among the several States" under Federal supervision the licenses would be worded so as to eliminate child labor, guarantee employe organization and prohibit "unfair methods of competition."

The keystone of the Borah-O'Mahoney bill is the provision for Federal licensing and registration of corporations, which its sponsors believe to be entirely Constitutional. It is argued that with such licensing the Government would hold an effective club over monopolists, and over all those who in NRA days were called "chiselers." Thus it might permit the great majority of business to be self-governing and free from piecemeal regulatory practices. In part the proposal aims at providing a simplified substitute for the clumsy blue eagle set-up, with the ordinary courts relied upon for enforcement.

Whether or not the investigations of the new National Economic Committee will shape up to an indorsement of the Borah-O'Mahoney bill, the latter at least indicates the sort of eventual recommendation which the committee can be expected to make to Congress. And it does this the more clearly because of its general consistency with the President's message of April 29.

In its early stages, however, the National Economic Committee will be fully occupied in assembling the data on which its eventual conclusions must be based. The equal division of membership between representatives of the legislative and executive arms of government will be helpful in the accumulation, as well as the analysis, of the enormous wealth of pertinent material. The dual organization, in short, should make for a more effective approach to a most complicated problem.

But since that problem necessarily involves the whole conception of the Federal form of government it would have been wise to have named some outstanding jurist as a member, and perhaps as chairman, to hold the scales between the evenly-balanced representatives of Congress and the Administration.

The Hague Philosophy.

No matter what the verdict may be, the suit brought against Mayor Hague and other Jersey City officials by the American Civil Liberties Union and the C. I. O. has contributed to a better understanding of certain subversive influences threatening the guaranteed liberties of the American people.

During five and one-half days of testimony, Mayor Hague defended policies that have denied the rights of free speech and free assemblage to law-abiding as well as lawless citizens, while steadfastly maintaining that he is an upholder of all that is truly American and genuinely patriotic. One cannot read his testimony, naive, contradictory and often evasive as it is, without being convinced of the sincerity of his views. He firmly believes in the righteousness of his crusade against so-called reds and undesirables who threaten to "invade" the municipal domain over which he rules.

The trial has offered unique opportunities for the exposition of the authoritarian theory of government by a man who probably does not know the meaning of the phrase. But the mayor of Jersey City is all the more menacing because his philosophy of government is emotional instead of being reflective and logical. Apparently he is unable to grasp the fundamental distinction between a firm policy designed to preserve community peace and order and repressive tactics entailing suppression of free speech and freedom of assemblage.

"When I discovered that I was being confronted with the civil liberties and with all the other isms that goes with the civil liberties," he explained on the witness stand, "I realized that I was confronted with a serious problem." But his attempt to solve that problem was ridiculously simple. When asked, for example, how an American official should handle Communists, he replied, "Suppress them." Asked to state the proper means for doing so, he said, "We are denying them the right to hold public gatherings because of the dangers of violence and bloodshed."

As similar treatment has been meted out to other persons on the mayor's list of "undesirables," the right of free speech, indeed the right of entry into Mayor Hague's citadel of "Americanism," has become only a privilege to be withheld or bestowed at the will of city officials.

One of the high lights of the mayor's testimony is his account of the ease with which exclusion from public halls can be effected. With patent pride, he announced that his long fight for repeal of prohibition had made him a "favorite among the liquor interests" who own most of the halls available for public speaking. These men often "have business at City Hall." And that being the case, the mayor made it clear that no force was needed to acquaint them with the desires of the city administration and ensure compliance with official wishes.

One could hardly hope that a political boss living in such an environment would appreciate the difference between his own peculiar definition of Americanism and the kind the Constitution seeks to preserve.

There are sometimes exceptional conditions under which lawless actions force lawless counter-action upon communities deprived of the protection ordinarily afforded them by the constituted authorities. But no such condition prevails in Jersey City, where the constituted authorities are engaged in seemingly lawless suppression of constitutionally guaranteed rights. To countenance or condone such action is to forsake the basic democratic principles upon which our Government is founded.

An Important NLRB Ruling.

The National Labor Relations Board has recognized the organization headed by Harry Bridges as the bargaining agency for the longshoremen in Pacific Coast ports.

The geographical area embraced by the union, while very extensive, covers a fairly homogeneous group of workers ready to act in concert. This is shown by the way in which labor troubles have spread from port to port along the West Coast. The NLRB was therefore justified in ignoring contentions that the appropriate bargaining unit should be limited to those working for a particular employer at a particular port. Such an arrangement would have afforded opportunity for numerous localized disputes to arise, interfering with the handling of goods and the movement of ships elsewhere.

But power cannot be divorced from responsibility. Now that their union has been named the exclusive bargaining agency, as the NLRB was empowered to do under the broad terms of the Wagner act, Mr. Bridges and his followers have the responsibility for maintaining peace after contracts are signed with the shipping companies. They have been given the opportunity to show how well they can maintain discipline in the ranks and will no longer be able to find ready excuses for breaches of contract.

Wight On Horns.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Can't something be done about these loud automobile horns which are shattering the nerves of thousands of people? (I have often wondered why the manufacturers have not been murdered before now.)

The sensation experienced by most persons having a loud horn blown near them unexpectedly is similar to that experienced by anyone being slapped firmly in the face with the open palm. The horn-blowing morons do not seem to realize this.

I am a poor wight unfortunate enough to have to live in Washington and, adding to this misfortune, I have to drive around in Washington's traffic horror. I have a horn on my car (not a loud one) yet I doubt whether I blow it on an average of once each month.

Murder has always been against my conscience, so I cannot shoot these people who are so inconsiderate as to put thousands into hospitals due to nervous troubles resulting from this loud horn blowing. I am a dumb cluck who can only string sentences together and who can't do anything about it. Can't some of you men of action do something about it? Some of you men of action might persuade the police to jail some of these horn blowers on charges of disorderly conduct. (Unfortunately, unnecessary horn blowing is not a capital offense.) E. C. P.

Not Bar Association.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of June 23 you carry a United Press story on page 2 concerning Robert H. Jackson's defense of a labor attorney in disbarment proceedings. The story was sent out from this office.

In the second paragraph of the story as printed in your paper, it is stated: "Disbarment proceedings were instituted against Lamb by the American Bar Association." This is an error and I would like this opportunity to correct any unfortunate inference that may have arisen as a result of the publication. The original news release did not state that the proceedings were instituted against Mr. Lamb by the American Bar Association, and at no time has the American Bar Association, either officially or unofficially, through its committees or through its officers, played any part or had anything to do with the disbarment proceedings.

The disbarment proceedings were initiated by a committee of three lawyers appointed by the court at the conclusion of the trial in August, 1937.

In fairness to the American Bar Association, as well as the National Lawyers' Guild, I ask that you publish this clarifying statement.

Grrrrr!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I, through your column, extend my sympathy to "Non-Dog Lover" of June 15 and to those with whom he (or she) comes in contact?

He has given us a glimpse into his soul and the sight is revolting. The impossible has been done. Frankenstein has been outdone and the product is "Non-Dog Lover."

Truly, he should walk the streets crying, "Unclean, Unclean," as did the lepers, for he is as loathsome.

His statements concerning the dog are brain-children of a distorted mind. "Non-Dog Lover" is not to be criticized; he is to be pitied!

DOG LOVER,

Atlanta, Ga., June 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is comment upon the letter of "Non-Dog Lover."

What a pathetic spectacle; what a revelation of the outlook of the writer! What unmistakable evidence that he is suffering from a realization of the superiority of the dog! Anyone who is burdened with such a deep sense of mediocrity should be pitied. His fiendish attitude is just an attempt at self-protection.

M. G. K.

Washington, June 22.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your contributors who stress pro-love and anti-love of dogs miss the meaning of the writers who started the discussion. Love or non-love of dogs is not involved. It is nuisance or non-nuisance.

I am a registered nurse and give my time and mind to sick and often fretful patients in our hospital for a stretch of 12 unbroken hours. When night comes, I am often worn to the last expenditure of energy. But next door to my room, directly under my window, are a lot of crying, whining, yelping puppies, with mother dogs and other dogs punctuating the chorus of their progeny by incessant barking at every noise in the alley. Just across the alley is a baying dog of huge dimensions whose monotonous bark is as nerve-racking as it is meaningless. This dog chorus keeps up its sleep-destroying work until far into the night, and then, in the early hours of the morning, when tired nerves need a final relaxation in sleep, the double dog sounds begin in their fury.

I protest not against dogs, but against dogs that are thus a nuisance, not to say an annoyance, to people who must suffer as I must suffer, without help from law or the pleas of reason, for we have tried both. What sort of citizenship is it that by pleasure in "pet dogs" will drive tired people who need sleep to almost madness? It is this sort of inconsiderateness which we are writing about. The matter of loving God's creatures or not loving them is not involved. A screech-owl is God's creature, but who wants one under his window, breaking the stillness of night by its blood-curdling, tremolo notes?

I ask only that dog owners be as considerate of the people who live in the neighborhood where dogs are kept, as they are of the dear dogs which they seem to prize so highly.

Immunity From Spies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wonder how many American heads of families would allow guests to enter the precincts of their homes knowing that they would occupy themselves in spying upon the household?

It has cost this country well over 1,000,000 American dollars to gather the information resulting in the trial of a lot of conspirators who never should have been permitted to put foot here. It has been charged that the defendants in the espionage cases now being tried in New York were acting on behalf of the German government. It is also a matter of common knowledge that the circular letters we find in our letter boxes carrying an offer to prove that our President is engaged in criminal activity with Communists and Jews, is German propaganda.

It is manifestly unfair to spend the money wrung from us by oppressive taxation in combating German espionage when we can get absolute immunity by the inexpensive method of instructing our consular representatives to refuse visas to citizens of those countries which are plotting against our peace and security.

The Thomas Jefferson Memorial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Belated protest from the Central Labor Union against the press for, as they say, opposing the Jefferson Memorial in this age of deficits, interested me greatly. They forget the newspapers simply reflected the objections—reasoned I hope—of an overwhelming number of protesting readers (who protested according to their convictions just as the C. L. U. is now doing) against continuance of deficit squandering; against more of the drops and splashes that cause the deficit bucket to overflow.

During the campaign to defer the memorial the arguments chiefly heard were against spoiling a park site as a locale for such a work, which argument still remains the most valid and reasonable, regardless of "incentive to children to read the life of Jefferson." Is that incentive expected to dry up unless a memorial is built posthaste? If the union has suddenly gone esthetic, the more reason the memorial should not be given the status of a piece of made work.

"What the stonemasons want is a chance to work," is one valid reason given. Well, what I want is to see them get and keep that chance on a sound, permanent basis. I speak as one who in the past has given and in the future will give, them plenty of work, would be doing so at present if I recognized policies in government to encourage me to take a chance. And you can multiply my case to a point that would shrink and dwarf this piece of made-work to insignificance.

The C. L. U. in another argument for, comes up with a strong argument against, this project. "It would help create work for many skilled and unskilled men both in Washington—and in other cities."

The one thing not needed is further drafts on labor in other localities; the fruits of this have already created a problem here. But why go on? E. G. E.

Washington, June 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Central Labor Union's censure of the newspapers of Washington for their stand on the Thomas Jefferson Memorial is unwarranted.

At no time has any newspaper opposed a suitable and appropriate memorial to Thomas Jefferson. What they have all opposed and what every civic-minded person has opposed is the senseless destruction of the present natural beauty of the Tidal Basin when 50 better sites are available.

Unfortunately the short-sighted are too readily carried away by the fetish called "making work." Every pork barrel "project" and even instruments for destruction—armaments—are indorsed on the ground that they "make work." Carried to a logical conclusion earthquakes and volcanoes should also be commended, because they too "make work." But at best all this sort of work is merely sporadic and temporary. And it is often worse than useless.

Meanwhile millions of permanent jobs could be available in the established public services, nearly all of which are undermanned. All across the country there is a shortage of policemen, mail carriers, school teachers, park attendants, street cleaners, garbage collectors, nurses, etc., etc. At the same time that millions are appropriated for new park construction, the grass is turning brown in every park in Washington and the lawns are unweeded and unkempt for lack of enough maintenance funds for watering and tending.

If organized labor were more truly alert to its own best interests, instead of indorsing these forced and sporadic make-work projects, which make profitable contracts for politically favored contractors and a few crumbs of temporary wages, it would demand an increase in all of the established public services. This would not make profits—but would make permanent jobs.

THERESA H. RUSSELL.

Washington, June 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The action of the present Administration in dedicating a memorial to Thomas Jefferson is an admirable manner in which to honor a great American who is looked upon as the patron saint of democracy.

But why must the Congress concern itself with building another white mausoleum? Surely, if Jefferson was the man the Democrats claim he was, his trust in the party today would suffer a severe relapse and his ire would be boundless at the sight of suffering and starving citizens while the Government is spending thousands of dollars to erect a practically useless white building in his honor.

Indeed, the Jefferson whom the Democrats champion would grind such a proposal under heel into the oblivion proper to its practicability. He would propose that such money should be spent only by dedicating a trust to aid the poor or perhaps a hospital to lessen their physical suffering or for some other purpose of sufficient worth to warrant such expenditure in these days of recession.

The Post Impressionist

"Out."

NOT long ago I happened to pass her house and suddenly I remembered her, how she looked, the way she lived, and facts about the unusual and intensely varied life she had led in many cities and watering-places for so many years. Standing on the sidewalk, in the shade of a maple tree, I looked up at the narrow old house that is forlorn and empty now, and remembered her.

She had been born a long time ago with the rank of countess, for her father was a titled gentleman of the Old World, the diplomatic envoy in Washington of one of the smaller but more stable European countries. When she was born the world was very different, and even in her great age, which she so assiduously and uselessly denied by dress, by manner, by make-up, she bore testimony of the kind of culture she was bred to. She must have been a real beauty, too, because in her house were photographs that testified so, and because there were remnants, little qualities beyond the ravages of time, in her face that made it easy to see.

I first met her seven or eight years ago, in her own house, when a girl I knew took me there to call one Sunday afternoon. I had heard of her before. People said that she "had been" one of the few really influential Washington hostesses, but they conspicuously did not say she "was" one then. As we went up the short walk and the stone steps, I pondered that. I'd heard, too, of her Sunday afternoon gatherings that she insisted on calling "salons," and of the paintings in her house, and of how she steadfastly refused to admit in any way that time can change anything.

At the top of the steps I saw, through the old-fashioned lace curtain at the front windows, the outline of a figure on a pedestal, and my friend whispered that this was her husband. Later I learned how heavily tragedy had touched her: Her husband had died in a famous ship disaster years ago; one of her daughters had been crushed to death as a child in an elevator in Paris.

When she must have been somewhere in her seventies and was acknowledging as much as 55, she married a young South American, only to be deserted as soon as it was learned she wasn't rich. Her friends were shocked at this marriage and after it many people refused to go to her house or ask her to theirs. This was when they said she "had been" an important hostess. The marriage, I believe, was annulled and she kept the name she had used so many years.

We stood before the front door and I noticed a little card with one word on it, stuck in the sash against the glass and supported by a hairpin! The word on the card was "In." Afterward I learned that when she was not at home to callers another card appeared in place of this one and that it had the one word "Out" on it. This system took the place of a servant.

I remember that first "salon" at her house very vividly. There was a Baroness de S——, whose husband had been an officer on the side of the Central Powers in the World War. There was a mustached gentleman, slightly threadbare, who owned "estates" in Mexico and mines of dubious productivity. He was called Monsieur P——. All the men were "Monsieur" to the hostess, regardless of how incongruous the form might seem with one's own name, and the ladies "Madame" or Mademoiselle." If one were not careful the conversation went into French.

She knew five languages and could still speak them all. Wearing a "dog-collar" of pearls she sat at the carved grand piano that afternoon and played and sang arias from any opera you could name in its original language. Her voice was husky and not unpleasant to hear. When twilight gathered in the room, she turned on the lights over the paintings and served thick, black hot chocolate with hot milk in the European way.

You had a curious feeling in that house because the past stalked there. There was cabinet after cabinet of bric-a-brac and countless autographed photographs of European royalties, of her own titled relatives, and of her American friends of the past. Behind screens and under chairs were great piles of old newspapers and everything was dusty. There was one screen someone told me she had paid $3,500 for only a few months before, and yet her house was unheated almost all winter long, and for lunch it was said she almost invariably had an apple, a box of graham crackers and a bottle of milk.

I stood under the maple tree looking up the walk, remembering her. The last time I had seen her was on a bus and she didn't recognize me. After that I had read of her death, as I recall, in a hotel and of her funeral from a small funeral home, arranged, the piece said, by a friend. It seemed rather an inglorious end to an intense life. Yet, considered fairly, she had lived too long.

To my own surprise I saw a card in the sash against the glass in the front door, and moving up the walk and steps, looked at it. The card was supported by a hairpin, and had one word printed on it. The word was "Out."

They emphasize the need for truth
And bid us never compromise,
But nothing on the big league race
Or who's their choice to cop the prize.

They say the world has gone to pot—

Distance And Enchantment.

I THINK that one of the chief conditions of a good understanding beween Briton and American is that we should both realize how the familiar features which we see in our own looking glasses are changed when they are seen across 3,000 miles of stormy ocean.

Distance does not always lend enchantment to the view. Americans looking at Europeans see them in the mass like ants, but without the orderliness of the anthill. We Europeans throw a veil of historical charity over our schisms and quarrels and see them issuing from centuries of argument and controversy which have given them the dignity of great causes.

The American asks: "Why can't these English, Germans, French, Italians and Slavs live together as peacefully in their own country as they do when they come into our country?" We on the other hand ask: "How can a civilized people be so disorderly as the Americans—how can they tolerate their gangsters and their racketeers, and have so inefficient a police as they seem to have?" Popular newspapers and American film producers seem to be in a conspiracy to present us with this picture of American life and no other.

To get rid of these false generalized views and to substitute for them a mutual understanding founded on knowledge, must always be the first thoughts of those who are working for good relations between the United States and Great Britain. But here, too, there are pitfalls.

* * * *

THE ENGLISHMAN who goes to America and sees only one section of the people or one part of the country may, with the best intentions, bring back an equally false impression. He has enjoyed unbounded hospitality; he has heard no talk except what is favorable to Great Britain and British institutions; and he may come away with the impression that all America is warmly partisan to the British point of view in world politics.

He will know nothing of the great German, Italian, Irish and Slav populations which have their own points of view within the American fold; of the difficulty of getting them all in motion together for any cause; of the many reasons which, since the great war, have led them to the conclusion that their safety and welfare are only to be found in strict detachment from European commitments and entanglements. Leaving all these things out of account, he may encourage a view which is doomed to disappointment.

This sentimentalism also must be avoided, but there never was a time when a close study of each other's problems, internal and external, could be of more value to both countries. We have both gone through the same phases, political and economic. . . .

* * * *

THERE IS a current jibe about England "expecting every American to do his duty." If this means that England expects the United States to shoulder her burdens, or is relying on material American assistance in any quarrel in which she may be involved in Europe, it is no more true now than it was before the great war. If Great Britain has to act again, it will, as before, be in reliance on her own resources, and in pursuance of duties and obligations which belong specially to her. . . .

It has become the fashion in recent years to lay stress on the differences between English and Americans. I have even heard it said that sharing the same language increases the chances of misunderstanding. I do not for a moment believe this. My own experience after much friendly intercourse with men and women of many nations is that English and Americans have more in common than any other two.

It is not merely language and the common heritage which it opens up that counts; it is the sameness of their instinctive response to the same problems and the same situations. They are morally and spiritually at home together, as very few others. This does not exclude quarreling and misunderstanding, but as a reconciling factor it is of immense value.

Evidence Adduced To Support News That Hitler And Duce Are Plotting Eventual Overthrow Of British Commonwealth.

By S. Miles Bouton.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

IF NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN still clings to his dream of the possibility of an Anglo-German alliance he has not only failed to read a good deal of handwriting on the wall in the last months, but he is also ignorant of an event of determinative importance which followed Hitler's return from Rome. This event was the Fuehrer's decision to abandon any idea of rapprochement with Britain, which is henceforth to be regarded as the enemy in the coming conflict.

The decision was communicated to the chief men in the foreign office, the supreme army command and the propaganda ministry in a confidential memorandum issued in a limited number of numbered copies. It lays down the line to be followed in foreign political affairs. Germany and Italy are henceforth to unite their forces with the aim of the final destruction of the British Empire. The tactical steps of the action of the German-Italian axis are set forth as follows:

1. The final occupation of Spain by the German-Italian coalition, involving naturally the end of the Anglo-Italian pact.

2. Strengthening of the axis against the Soviet Union by annexing Bohemia with Prague to Germany—with an inference of an eventual partition of Slovakia between Hungary and Poland—and by creating a border-state alliance of the Baltic States—Poland, Rumania and Yugoslavia.

3. Laying the foundations for a victorious war of the axis against France. In preparation for this Germany and Italy are to unite in demanding from France the unconditional return of the "stolen" colonies, territory containing a German minority "under the French yoke" (Alsace), and the "stolen" districts of Savoy and Tunisia.

Armies Integrated To Support Strategy.

THE MEMORANDUM declares that the armies of the two countries from the moment the effectuating of this program is begun "must be prepared at any moment, with all means at their disposal, ruthlessly, utterly, to oppose themselves to any disturber of the constructive work of the future." The endeavor must be to achieve every station along this course step by step without any warlike conflict, but "in the case of serious difficulties they will not hesitate to let it come to the employment of military power."

The memorandum further sets forth that ever since the autumn of 1937 the German and Italian general staffs have been in agreement that war could be risked only when an absolutely assured territorial contact should have been established between the two armies. In the meantime that had been accomplished by the Anschluss (seizure of Austria) and Mussolini had expressly agreed to this solution, in that he had in advance approved Hitler's Saturday speech in Rome, in which the new German-Italian border at the Brenner Pass was termed "the bridge for mutual German-Italian military support." Through the German conquest of Bohemia, continues the memorandum, and through a protectorate over Hungary the teritorial union of Germany and Italy is to be further enlarged.

The authenticity of this memorandum is attested not only by the source from which it is disclosed, but also by the events that have preceded it. While Mr. Chamberlain did not say in so many words, when Germany was preparing to invade Czechoslovakia, that Britain would be found standing with France to defend the little republic, Berlin had no doubt that that would be the case. The inspired German press made it clear how great the shock and disappointment of the revelation was. Goering's National-Zeitung in Essen called Britain's attitude "hypocritical astonishment, unexampled lack of good will, preparatory war propaganda against Germany." The Frankfurter Zeitung wrote of "the ostentatious political and military backing accorded the Czechoslovak government," and declared that Britain was "making an attempt to mix the cards so that in case of a catastrophe the old game could be played: Germany is guilty."

Britain On Continent Threatened With Attack.

THE BOERSEN-ZEITUNG of Berlin spoke of "a political complot between London and Prague," and on May 26 openly threatened that if Britain did not withdraw from the Continent and abandon Czechoslovakia, she could find herself attacked by Germany's allies, Italy and Japan.

"It would probably not be comfortable for England," it wrote, "if other great powers appeared on the scene everywhere where England has proclaimed her special interests in the name of her empire strewn over the whole earth. If England, abandoning her oceanic destiny, presents herself as protector and judge of national and peoples' interests, interposes herself before disturbers of the peace and thus sweeps away the legitimate interests of other peoples, there will inevitably be consequences and repercussions."

Interpreted, this means a Japanese attack on Hong Kong and Italian action in the Mediterranean.

Mr. Chamberlain and his pro-German supporters may still believe that if Gen. Franco wins the war in Spain he will dominate the peninsular, but it is not open to doubt that a secret German-Italian pact has decided otherwise. It is also not open to doubt that, even before the final agreement was reached which is set forth in the confidential memorandum referred to above, Germany had agreed to support Italy's campaign against French Tunisia, which Italy had been intending to seize when France got ahead of her in 1881—a happening directly responsible for the forming of the Triple Alliance of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Italy.

When Balbo was sent to Italian Libya (the point has been stressed before, but it should be repeated in this connection), it was supposed that Mussolini had thus virtually exiled a strong man whom he feared as possible rival. Actually he was sent there as a capable executive to prepare the way for the conquest of Tunisia, and Italian army maneuvers were held in western Libya, on the Tunisian border, last month. The troops are probably still there, for France still has a number of warships stationed in the Tunisian harbor of Bizerta.

The planned destruction of the British Commonwealth is, of course, what the German phrase calls "zukunftsmusik," music of the future, but only ignorant optimism can regard what has come in the German-Czechoslovak situation as more than a temporary respite. An invasion of that country at this time would be the act of a madman, but although the madman is there, it is hardly to be looked for soon. However, the Nazis reckon with the possibility that France and Britain will relax their attention, and that meantime it will be possible—with the help of Mr. Chamberlain—to induce the Prague government to make such concessions that Bohemia will fall into the German lap almost automatically. This would be another "cold putsch" along well known Nazi lines. To efforts to make more trouble among the Sudeten Germans the Nazis has now added similar efforts among the Slovaks, apparently not at all discouraged by the fact that Father Hlinka's treasonable following lost more strength at the last elections and now constitutes little more than a quarter of all Slovaks.

Hitler Eliminates Conservative Generals.

HITLER has weeded out many generals who realize the hopelessness of a war at this time, but there still is a large group among them who are under no illusions. Writing in the "Deutsches Adelsblatt" of May 21, Gen. von Metzsch (retired), although declaring that "an operation must be carried out on the Czech cancer, which has caused a warlike fever in all Europe, in order to do away with an ethnographic absurdity," warned that no assault may be made on that country unless it be certain that France and Britain will not be involved. Analyzing the situation in China, he said:

"It would be well for the German public to learn from that war the important even if not new lesson that war is never a matter of calculation, but always a leap in the dark. Only tremendous arrogance can venture to predict victory or speedy victory as certain. Naturally confidence may not be lacking, but it must at the same time be realized that 'developments in war never proceed as one has thought and desired.' Clausewitz taught that at the beginning of the nineteenth century. East Asia and Spain are teaching it again in the twentieth century. These two wars must educate us to tenacity, not to ignorant superficiality. That always leads to disappointments."

In this article, written naturally some days before the Czech situation became acute, Gen. von Metzsch advocated a localized war against Czechoslovakia, and said:

"When the ticklish question is raised as to who would dare to march against Germany if the Sudetan Germans seek annexation to the Third Reich, the answer is: Nobody." The article was published one day before France announced that war against Prague meant war against Paris.

Pole Sitters

By Lewis Gannett

The Soviet Polar Expedition.

IT IS A MAGNIFICENT STORY which Lazar Brontman tells in "On Top of the World: the Soviet Expedition to the North Pole" (Covici, $3). This is a kind of Soviet propaganda which even Mayor Hague might like. It is the story of men who prepared carefully, did their pioneering job thoroughly, and report upon it modestly. Through the story runs that rollicking spirit which we like to think of as typically American, the gallant spirit of the old West; these men call it "Bolshevik idealism."

We all remember the excitement of those last weeks, when the little floe which carried the North Pole men was breaking up, while the big ice breakers were ramming through the pack ice hoping to reach them in time. Mr. Brontman, who was aboard one of the big ships, devotes little space to that. Most of his story deals with the preparations, and with the co-ordinated movement of the fleet of planes which deposited that well equipped party at the North Pole.

Four men stayed through the summer of 1937 and the winter of 1937-38 on the floe; but 35 Russians had laughed together there for a few days in June. Yet it was no easy commuting station. One expedition had, in the summer of 1936, prepared the advance camp and an air field on snowbound Rudolf Land, almost as far north as the northernmost tip of Greenland. The four members of the polar party were not merely Arctic explorers and specialist technicians. The biologist spent a year learning what medicine he could; there would be no doctor at the North Pole. They must all know a little of each other's business. The airplanes were specially built for Arctic service; the 40-pound ash sledges were of a new design; the food was the product of the best brains of the Moscow laboratories and kitchens.

* * * *

PEMMICAN AND CHOCOLATE were not considered good enough for these men who might have to spend a year on the ice. Mr. Brontman insists that the food served at the North Pole was as tasty as any in the best Moscow restaurants (which, unless the Moscow restaurants have improved notably in the 12 years since I tasted their insipid food, means little). The concentrated essence of 50 beef cattle and 5,500 chickens went to the North Pole, a ton of the chickens in the form of "Vienna chicken cutlets," whatever they may be. The quantities of concentrated beet and cabbage soup, with all the proper vitamins added in capsule form, were prodigious. The party had onions, radishes (an essential in a Russian diet), sausage, cheese, bay leaves and caviar. It took no liquor but brandy; and so intent was the party on its purpose that when the preserving alcohol supply ran out, some of the brandy was distilled to yield alcohol to preserve the Arctic plankton specimens!

With all these preparations success for a time seemed dubious. The flying field at Archangel turned into a marsh before the planes could leave in April; and they could not afford to carry heavy wheels across the polar seas. The trip across the windy interisland passages just north of the mainland supplied the most difficult flying of the entire adventure. The first light scout plane made the first successful reconnoitering expedition to the pole on May 5; not for more than another two weeks could the next plane get off. Meanwhile, plane after plane, trying out the air, was caught in sudden Arctic fogs, and forced to land for a day or two on dubious ice. But every plane had its own radio, and its men who knew radio.

One of the planes, landing 60 miles from the main polar party, was marooned for 11 days—but it was never out of touch by wireless. And the wireless kept the little party in communication with the world all winter. New York broadcasts came in deafeningly; short-wave fanatics were delighted to speak to the Pole. From England, in the early days, came a newspaper request for information as to whether Russia claimed ownership of the Pole. After consultation the Russians replied: "The English say that the sea belongs to the nation with the strongest navy. We say that the North Pole belongs to the nation which has the strongest air fleet." They had faith in the Soviet planes. But they must have fallen victim to British imperial propaganda in at least one respect: Every member of the expedition, except the organizer, Prof. Otto Schmidt, whose flowing beard is world-famous, was required to shave every day!

* * * *

THEY FOUND THE SEA BOTTOM at the Pole to be some two and a half miles under the ice. A half mile down, it was warmer than at the surface; clear indication that the Gulf Stream was not yet quite dead. Nor was that polar water line lifeless. Once, in the shallow water at the edge of their floe, they caught a two-inch crab. The dredges came up full of a variety of maritime life. At the very Pole they heard a sparrow sing, and saw sea gulls; not far from the pole they met polar bears. The very top of the earth was not as lifeless as Nansen and other explorers had believed.

They drifted slowly south; but it was not until January that the movement became rapid. The party had been almost eight months on the ice, comfortable and jolly; suddenly they discovered that they were cruising—30 miles in 43 hours. Then, in the first days of February, came the blizzard which cracked their floe, ripped their tent apart, shattered their sense of security. The four men of the polar party mounted their radio on a sled and prepared their boats; off in Leningrad and Murmansk the Soviet's stoutest ice-crushing ships advanced their schedules and set out for treacherous East Greenland. On February 12 the ice party caught sight of the great 2,000,000-candlepower headlight of the stout Taimy; on February 16 planes from the searching ships found them; on February 19 they were safely aboard. Incomparably the greatest North Polar expedition in history was all over but the shouting.

The shouting was done at Leningrad and Moscow, and is repeated in this book, in a strange style composed half of our own Grover Whalen-Coney Island greeting, half of solemn toasts and slogans which themselves are part Bolshevik, part reminiscent of England's knights and nobles. Schmidt Papanin, and half a dozen others became, officially, heroes of the Soviet Union—H. S. U. being the Soviet equivalent, apparently, of the British K. C. G. Brontman himself was awarded the Order of the Red Banner of Labor (O. R. B. L.)—Krenkel, Shirshov and Feodorov, Papanin's comrades on the floe, won the Order of Lenin (O. L.). They all toasted Stalin, and "then the leader of the peoples of the Soviet Union proposed a toast to the health of all the heroes, the health of young people eager to live and struggle for all branches of socialist construction." . . . Well, we all have our pious national rigmaroles, and our alphabetical aberrations.

Microphone English

Radio announcers and those who prepare script for their reading have, since the beginning of broadcasting, made a commendable effort to use the American language in its most nearly accepted and acceptable forms. It is only fair to say, too, that they have attained a considerable measure of success. It is a bit surprising, then, to find so many of them wedded to such awkward expressions as "try and listen in next week," "be sure and send for your copy" and so on and so forth. "Try" demands an infinitive to complete its meaning, and it seems that it is far easier and more graceful to say "try to listen in next week," or "be sure to send for your copy," etc.

"Try and do it," of course, owns a certain claim to acceptance as a slang expression that contains, thanks to our unpredictable usage, a sort of dare or challenge, which is not at all what the announcers want to convey in all probability. Heaven knows that those who most use words best realize the constant pitfalls into which one may drop, the omnipresent danger of making errors of practically all imaginable sorts. This is penned, or typed, without any holier-than-announcer feeling whatever. At that, however, the practice of the announcers, or script writers, or both, might be amended to their own convenience in reading and writing and in the interest of letting radio by example inculcate good usage.

In a world, we hope the radio folk will "try to remember" not to say "try and remember."

300,000 Lose 'Regular' Jobs In One Month

Labor Official Reports Decline in Period When Gain Is Normal.

Although employment normally increases at this season, 300,000 workers lost their jobs in private industry and regular governmental employment between April and May, Charles V. McLaughlin, acting Secretary of Labor, reported yesterday.

He added that there usually was an increase of 200,000 in nonagricultural employment as a whole at this time of year. His estimates take no account of employment on WPA and other State and Federal emergency projects.

The decline in industrial employment was attributed to cuts in the forces in factories, mines and railroads and seasonal reductions in retail and wholesale trade.

170,000 Leave Factories.

"In manufacturing, a greater-than-seasonal reduction of 2.6 per cent in employment affected more than 170,000 wage earners," Mr. McLaughlin said. "Weekly factory pay rolls were reduced by 1.8 per cent, representing a cut of about $2,700,000 in weekly wage disbursements. Since May, 1937, when operations were at a high level, there has been a decline of nearly one-fourth in factory employment as a whole, and of more than one-third in factory pay rolls.

"Sixty-six of the 89 manufacturing industries that regularly report to the Bureau of Labor Statistics reduced their working forces, many of them because of seasonal slackening in activity.

"Among the nondurable goods industries, manufacturers of wearing apparel, cotton goods and shoes reported large cuts in factory forces. Employment increased in food and tobacco manufacturing. The heavy industries reported continued curtailment, particularly in the manufacture of automobiles, steel and machinery. Employment was better sustained in the manufacture of building materials and in shipbuilding than in most other heavy industries.

Construction Gains.

"As compared with May of 1937, the nondurable goods industries show an employment decline of 17 per cent and the durable goods industries a decline of 32 per cent . . .

"The principal increases in employment were in building construction, and in quarries, where gains were somewhat smaller than usual. Public construction activities, including road work and building, increased substantially. There was a small increase in forces of telephone and telegraph and electric light and power companies and of certain service industries, notably laundries.

"All parts of the country reported reduced employment, with the principal exceptions of certain New England States, in which increases accompanied expanded activity in cotton and woolen mills."

Income Drop Ceases.

Commerce Department economists said last night that the swift drop in American income payments leveled off during May and that the seasonally adjusted index of income dropped only 4 points from April.

At the same time the Federal Reserve Board said in a general business summary that in May and the first three weeks of June industrial activity showed little change from the April level, with advanced cotton and wheat prices in June.

The Commerce Department estimates showed that wages, salaries, interest, dividends, rent and income to persons in business for themselves amounted to $4,891,000,000 during May, approximately 10 per cent below the figure for the corresponding period last year.

D. C. Institutions Are Aided by Will Of Carter Keene

Washington institutions and residents figured in division of the estate of two prominent local attorneys whose wills were filed for probate yesterday in United States District Court.

William E. Schoenborn, a patent lawyer, who lived at 3930 Connecticut avenue, left personal property valued at $91,662 and real estate worth $4,583 when he died June 5. Carter B. Keene, another attorney, left $80,463.

Among Keene's bequests were $1,500 to Temple Noyes Lodge, No. 32, F. A. A. M.; $1,000 to All Souls Unitarian Church, $1,000 to Washington Home for Incurables, and three lots to the Masonic and Eastern Star Home. Rolland L. Nutt, who was left $5,000 and personal effects, was named executor.

Schoenborn's widow, Mrs. Edna L. Schoenborn, and his sister, Theresa F. Schoenborn, are beneficiaries of his estate.

Strikers Get Pay Hike On 2 Pittsburgh Papers

Pittsburgh, June 23 (U.P.).—Striking business office employes of the Pittsburgh Press and the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, afternoon newspapers which have not published for several days, tonight signed contracts calling for pay increases, but failing to provide for a "closed" shop.

The newspaper managements announced the papers would not resume publication until settlement of demands for strike pay.

Assignment List.

Here is the tentative list of Bureau of Internal Revenue employes here who have been selected for duty with the Pacific and New York divisions of the Technical Staff, effective, for the most part, on July 1:

PACIFIC DIVISION—Headquarters, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle: Norman D. Cann, division head; Corrine M. Tanguay, secretary; Alva C. Baird, division counsel; Vida C. Green, secretary.

Los Angeles: Walter S. Tandrow, technical adviser in charge; Robert J. Service and George F. Smithson, technical advisers; A. W. Miller, V. G. Chessman, Job K. Jones and Robert T. Miller, assistant technical advisers; Katherine S. Dale and Alvin M. Swanson, auditors; Edward W. Miller, acting administrative assistant; Elizabeth C. Seay, information clerk and secretary; Harriet M. McCoen, Katherine Pickett, Julia S. Gustin and Myrtle C. Macdonald, secretaries; Frances R. Perry, chief, records section; Mary Mies, closing clerk; Atina F. Thompson, typist; William O. Lange, assistant messenger.

Frank T. Horner, assistant counsel in charge; Byron N. Coon and E. A. Tonjes, asistant counsel; Mildred R. Quinn and C. V. Lupa, secretaries.

San Francisco: W. H. Lawder, technical adviser in charge; W. G. Wilker, Charles R. Carter, C. C. Griggs, H. G. Potthoff and Henry M. Sorrell, technical advisers; Charles Hodgkins and Milo W. Bean, assistant technical advisers; Glen M. Burmbaugh, reviewing auditor (acting); Gertrude Bicknell and Mildred Thedens, auditors; E. D. Robertson, administrative assistant (on detail); Hazel E. Henderson, chief, records section; Violet Stephens, Arlyne Fast, Effie W. Anthony and Grace W. Allman, secretaries; Lucile D. Huega, closing clerk-typist; Anna Richardson, closing clerk.

Thomas M. Mather, assistant counsel in charge; Arthur L. Murray and Harry R. Horrow, assistant counsel; Eleanor H. Camp and Mildred Estes, secretaries.

Seattle: J. B. Harlacher, technical advisor in charge; D. C. Fisher, R. K. Jones and Albin Pearson, assistant technical advisers; Isabell J. Loeffler and Opal Stevens, secretaries; Pearl Schoenberger, reviewing auditor (acting); Oral G. Cox, administrative clerk-clerk-typist; B. H. Neblett, assistant counsel in charge; E. C. Adams, assistant counsel and Anna V. Safer, secretary.

Portland: A. N. Williams and Walter W. Bond, assistant technical advisers; John H. Pigg, assistant counsel and Elizabeth M. Riehle, secretary.

NEW YORK DIVISION—Headquarters, New York City: Timothy C. Mooney, division head, and Eldon O. Hanson, division counsel.

Approximately 650 employes will be transferred to the field, from the approximate force of 4,550. Their assignment is to expedite settlement of contested tax cases without reference to the bureau in Washington. In making the field assignments, the Bureau chose employes of good record and "with every possible consideration . . . to the personal circumstances of each employe with a view to minimizing . . . any inconvenience or hardship which may be involved." The American Federation of Government Employes gets the credit for a statement from the bureau heads to effect that every consideration will be shown in handling the delicate transfer situation.

NOTES: Grace Townsend, of Senator McNary's office, plans to return home to Portland, Oreg., within a few days and would like to be accompanied by some agreeable lady on a share-the-cost plan. Applicants should know how to drive. . . . The current murder mystery brings out an inflexible rule of the Civil Service Commission. Under no imaginable circumstances will the commission permit a newspaper to use one of the photographs which applicants for Federal jobs affix to their applications. The reason: the photos frequently become detached from the applications and there is a chance of their being replaced on the wrong file. "It would be possible for us to give out the wrong photo and get sued for our pains," commented a Commission spokesman.

Isaac Gregg, assistant in the press relations section, Postoffice Department, has returned to his work after an absence . . . Philatelic Agent O. L. Rogers attended the first-day sale of the new 3-cent Constitution commemorative stamp at Philadelphia this week . . . Godfrey V. Wickware, of the A. F. G. E. national office, has organized a lodge in Richmond, and is now in Roanoke, Va., where he hopes to do the same. Wasn't Richmond the long stronghold of the N. F. F. E.? . . . The FCA has recently welcomed the following:

G. Eugene Adams, Arlington, Va.; John E. Marshall, jr., Gainesville, Fla.; Paul Anderson, Denver, Colo.; Edgar Donaldson, East McKeesport, Pa.; John J. Tvelia, Richmond Hills, N. Y.; Gilbert J. Oates, Walden, N. Y., and Vincent J. Jordan, Buffalo, N. Y., to the administrative division, mail section; Elva D. McIntosh, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Leona K. Holthusen, Wahpeton, N. Dak., to the administrative division, stenographic section.

Again Interior bares its fangs at the camera. On Wednesday, Leo Batten, who coaches the I. D. R. A. in jiu jitsu, wanted to hold graduation exercises in the Interior Gymnasium. There can be no graduation without a photograph of the class—and the class is composed of Interior people. But they wouldn't let him take the picture in the building and he was forced to take the class out of doors. Wouldn't such a rule as that sound just a little bit silly to you?

Playgrounds Unit Will Quit D. C. Building

Other Departments Also to Be Moved to Old Police Court Structure.

Sybil Baker's Playground Department, which last year defeated a plan to move her agency to the old Tuberculosis Hospital, Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest, lost out yesterday when the District Commissioners decreed her group must move from the District Building to the revamped old Police Court Building.

As recommended by the special space finding committee, the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole also will move to the old Police Court Building.

The Minimum Wage Board will give up its office adjacent Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen's office, if and when a People's Counsel is appointed.

The Health Department's permit bureau will be moved from rented quarters at 901 Eighth street northwest to the new District Building annex.

Jo V. Morgan's tax appeal office, temporarily lodged in Commissioner Hazen's conference room, will return to the vacated playground offices.

Office space in the annex will be provided for the newly created Lunacy Commission.

The top floor of the Police Building will be assigned to Assistant Engineer Commissioner H. S. Bishop.

World Wheat Crop Near 4,025,000,000 Bushels Expected

By the Associated Press.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported yesterday that a world wheat production of about 4,025,000,000 bushels is indicated for this year. This compares with last year's harvest of 3,827,000,000 bushels. The estimate did not include Russia and China.

On the basis of normal consumption needs, this would provide a surplus in July, 1939, of about 925,000,000 bushels, compared with a normal carry-over of 675,000,000.

The bureau said early indications point to an American wheat crop of around 1,000,000,000 bushels.

Holy Comforter Church to Be Built

Plans for a $250,000 church and rectory building at 1369 East Capitol street for Holy Comforter Church, of which the Rev. Charles H. O'Hara is pastor, were filed at the District Building yesterday. Harwood-Nebel Construction Co., Inc., will be the builders and Frederick V. Murphy is the architect.

Navy Lets Contracts For Alexandria Work

One award for roofing and skylights, valued at $10,800, went to the J. J. Fisher Co., Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y., and the second contract for $6,610 worth of painting was granted to M. G. Mashithes, of Pittsburgh.

'Slump' in Picture Production Proves to Be Largely Mythical

Curtailment of Screen Features for 1938-1939 Represents Only 3 Per Cent; 'Reissues' and 'Remakes;' We Have a Book; Brady's Gems; Jottings.

DESPITE the considerable hullabaloo that has been raised these past few months about the "slump" in motion picture production, and the sinister implications of the sudden demand on the part of exhibitors for reissues of feature pictures that proved their worth at the time of their original release, there seems to be no great decline in Hollywood's ability to keep pace with the demands of the industry for new product.

BELL.

According to reliable reports from within the industry, the major producers—RKO-Radio seems to be the only one, so far, that has neither held a sales convention nor made any definite commitments for the new year—already have pledged themselves to the manufacture of between 569 and 577 major releases for 1938-39, as against a total of slightly more than 600 for 1937-'38, not all of which have been delivered to date. This represents a drop of only 3 per cent.

In the short-reel field, the curtailment is a little more noticeable. Two-reel subjects will drop from a total of 162 releases, for the current year, to 120 for next. The two-reelers, thus, are off about 16 per cent. The one-reelers register a more definite recession, with a drop of 57, from 552 this year to 495 for next.

Lumped, without regard to length or classifications, the figures add up to 1,201 for 1938-39 as opposed to the grand total of 1,321 for the current period of distribution and exhibition. That figures out to a 9 per cent deflation, which seems to this corner to precipitate something less than a crisis.

Particularly is this true when it is taken into consideration that at least 100 other feature pictures may be relied upon from the independent producers, foreign studios and reissues of old favorites.

The more one contemplates the phenomenon from the sidelines, the more he is convinced that the sudden flare of reissues will prove no more than a passing phase of a troubled era in all branches of productional activity, both in and out of the motion picture industry.

In reasonable degree, the reissuance of box-office "smashes" is not to be frowned upon. There are certain pictures in every season that are worth seeing more than once. This number, however, does not run up into the hundreds, exhibitors' requests to the contrary notwithstanding. And another thing. The casual picture patron should bear in mind that there is a decided difference between a reissue of new prints from old negatives and the remaking of a story previously filmed with new cast, new settings and new technical treatment. For instance, Rudolph Valentino's "The Sheik" and "The Son of the Sheik" are reissues; the new version of "Holiday," starring Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant, emphatically is not, any more than "The Adventures of Robin Hood" is a reissue of the earlier Douglas Fairbanks, sr., picture dealing with the same subject matter.

Like all of the other drama desks, we are indebted to Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner Brothers, for a nice, new copy of Lloyd C. Douglas' novel of "White Banners," to be seen in film form on the screen at the Earle Theater, beginning today.

While we have not had time to read the story, we know in advance that, like the film play of which it forms the basis, it will present a deft combination of spiritual uplift with a moving recital of the experiences of a struggling family in a small town in our native State of Indiana, without at any time permitting its kindly philosophy to obscure the dramatic movement of the story. Mr. Douglas is not the first author to accomplish this skillful welding of spiritual exaltation and dramatic effectiveness.

The same thing was done in Charles Rann Kennedy's drama of "The Servant in the House," Jerome K. Jerome's "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" and in "Mister Antonio," one of Otis Skinner's successful vehicles. It has been done many times before and occasionally since, of course, but these citations, which spring immediately to mind, may serve to remove any stigma of "preachment" from "White Banners" prior to its public presentation on the screen. And thanks for the book.

We never should have started this business about remembering the names of the Dionne quints. On the heels of those Arlington acrostics, comes a reminder from Mrs. H. V. Letkemann, Greenbelt, Md., that a Boston paper once suggested that the easiest way to get started on the names of Yvonne, Marie, Cecile, Annete and Emilie is simply to remember the initials, Y. M. C. A. and E. But perhaps by this time you'd rather forget them.

On Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the Jessup Blair Community House, in Silver Spring, Md., the students of the Dee Shannon Class in Dramatic Expression will present their first recital. The program will include a monologue and a one-act play written for the students by Dee Shannon.

Those taking part in this bill have finished three months of the 16-month course and include Margie Burke, Mary Agnes Cummings, Pauline Clark, Faith Jouvenal, Dorothy Lowd, Donelle Shannon and Doris Hartman, who will do several novelty song numbers.

Dee Shannon is not without a considerable reputation as a resident actress who has acquitted herself well in a variety of roles, notably as Stassia in the Black Friars production of "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," already mentioned in these dispatches.

It is interesting to note that the course in Expression is not aimed primarily at making a student Hollywood conscious or "Broadway-bug-bitten." It consists of a program of studies for voice, gestures, breathing and posture and is intended to develop poise, a pleasant speaking voice and a capacity for remembering what one wishes to say and the most interesting way to say it. The public is invited to Sunday's recital.

Two likely Hollywood youngsters are coming to the Loew screens the week of July 1, which is by way of being one week from today. Following Luise Rainer in "The Toy Wife," the Palace will present "Lord Jeff," in which Freddie Bartholomew is starring in a story of the training of boys for Britain's merchant marine. With Mickey Rooney and Charles Coburn in the cast, it is worth at least 11 to 10 that here is a picture the rapidly maturing Master Bartholomew will not "steal." On the Capitol screen for the firecracker week will be Simone Simon in "Josette," in which she is supported by Bert Lahr, Joan Davis, Tala Birell and others of note. All Miss Simone need do to "steal" this one is to flash a couple of gold keys!

I hope our old Washington confrere, C. N. Odell, now attached to the New York publicity offices of Paramount, isn't kidding when he says that $25,000 worth of the late "Diamond Jim" Brady's jewel collection will be worn by Bert Lahr in the film version of Mrs. Leslie Carter's ancient stage success of "Zaza." If he is, this paragraph was never written.

"Zaza" is to be Isa Miranda's first American starring vehicle, in which the Italian actress will be supported by Herbert Marshall—and Mr. Lahr, all ablaze with Mr. Brady's "sapphire suite" of cuff links, stickpin and eye-glass case, not to mention the famous diamond locomotive "Diamond Jim" used to wear to Broadway first nights.

Mr. Odell contends that these will be the bona fide originals. When Universal produced "Diamond Jim," it is said, cracked-ice imitations of the original gems were used—which seems just a bit on the anomalous side.

WHEN McCALL, who kidnaped the Cash baby in Florida, confessed to the crime and admitted that he had lied when he tried to implicate the baby's uncle, Asbury Cash, the latter confronted McCall, offered his hand and declared: "I never liked you, but for the first time in my life I think you're a man" . . . Cash then explained this to John Edgar Hoover: His son had been McCall's friend and was amenable to his influence. And so Ashbury Cash had been ready to plead guilty, to save his son's life—fearing, perhaps, that the boy somehow was involved.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., June 23.—"Lord Jeff" proves that Metro doesn't have to hop across the pond to make an English picture—thye've turned out a winner at home. I wish England would do as much for us.

HEDDA HOPPER

The picture will appeal to every boy and parent. It gives us a new child star, Terry Kilburn, son of a London busman, who has the same wistful quality Jackie Coogan had in "The Kid." He stands shoulder to shoulder—in his first picture—with Mickey Rooney and Freddie Bartholomew. Freddie's voice keeps changing, but his acting doesn't, thank goodness.

Charles Coburn and Herbert Mundin bat a hundred. Need I say more?

Reformation of boys is one of the most important things in any country. The week started with "The Crime School" and ended with "Lord Jeff." Now if we can only dig up a school for grownups we'll get somewhere. I recently tried to discuss the daily news with a friend of mine—the happiest woman I know. She is the mother of four children and the grandmother of three. I found she wasn't up on news.

"I get nothing but war, crime, murder, suicide, thievery, mostly in high places, kidnaping, bombing, none of which adds to my happiness. So I spend days on end in my garden, growing flowers," was her explanation. Looking into that calm, peaceful face, I decided she was right.

No one was more surprised than Walt Disney when summoned to Harvard University to receive an honorary degree of master of arts.

"Imagine my receiving a degree of any kind," Walt said. "Had only one year in high school."

Proving, again, if your mind turns over in the right direction you won't have to go to college.

Hope Emily Post doesn't see the picture in a national magazine of Queen Elizabeth pointing. We were taught never to do that, even when selecting a French pastry.

In that same magazine were photographs of the Belgian Congo, taken by Denis-Roosevelt Expedition. We saw that maving picture here months ago—only at private houses. Word got about that it was naughty. One reel showed people without clothes. Dear—dear. But it was one of the most important things I ever saw. It disclosed a race of black giants, all over 7 feet, lean and straight as an arrow, ruled by a man of 23, all dressed in the most wonderful fabrics. Heaven only knows how they ever got them.

It will be released in July under title of "Dark Rapture," and will probably take the Universal company—smart enough to see its possibilities—out of the red.

While we release pictures of people dead for many years, England revives, with living actors, six scenes of plays written 100 years ago, and made famous by Sir Henry Irving, greatest actor of them all. That feat brought together, on the same stage, Cyril Maude, Phyllis Neilson Terry, John Gielgud, Dame Sybil Thorndyke, Dame May Whitty, Lawrence Olivier, Godfrey Tearle—and many more. While Queen Mary sat in a bower of roses, looking on and thinking of the old ones.

But, as a leading critic said, "The venture showed six Irvings, but none like Henry. Why, Charles Laughton can shock and horrify a hundred times more on the screen today. And I think it might have been better if they had just remembered Irving's last speech on the stage, 'Into Thy Hands, O Lord.'

And would it be asking too much of our people if they would learn that sentence, and remember it—and allow our dead heroes to rest in their graves?

What with earthquakes rocking England, volcanoes spouting in the Philippines, Hollywood placing bets instead of making pictures, Easterners picnicking inside beside a roaring fire—I think we'd better dust off that best seller and read again the Book of Revelations.

Songwriting Sextet Finish Ritz Tunes

A half-dozen of Hollywood's top-flight tunesmiths, working in pairs, have just completed the music for the Ritz Brothers' latest comedy, "Straight, Place and Show."

Sid Kuller and Ray Golden, among the most brilliant of the younger lyricists, contributed two special comedy numbers, one of them a swing cowboy ballad with Swiss and Russian overtones. They also wrote a good bit of the humorous dialogue.

Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, two of the highest-priced song writers in the business, produced "An Invitation to Love" and the equally famous Lews of the 20th Century Fox lot—Lew Pollock and Lew Brown—wrote "With You on My Mind."

Gable Interested In Glider Flying

Having tasted the thrills of airplane flying, Clark Gable has found a new interest in glider flying.

Gable has not actually flown a glider, but he has had his first flight and the bug has bitten him.

He was the passenger on a short and safe flight with Lucretia Buxton, who, with her father, Jay Buxton, is acting director of the glider sequences in "Too Hot to Handle," in which Gable and Myrna Loy are costarred.

Miss Buxton, tall, slender and attractive, formerly held the national duration record for two-place gliders with 6 hours 56 minutes on sustained flight. The record was taken from her by her father, who now holds three national records for two-place gliders.

The records are: Duration, 8 hours 48 minutes; altitude, 5,967 feet, and distance, 25 miles. The record-breaking glider also is being used in the picture.

Actor Picks Wrong Day as Birth Fete

The fluttery roles Frank Morgan plays have finally caught up with him. He celebrated his birthday on the wrong day.

He and Mrs. Morgan, with the William Gargans, Charles Butterworth, Robert Benchley and other guests, spent last week-end at Catalini Island on his cruiser, Katinka, as part of the annual commodores' cruise. Because he and Gargan were not needed for "The Crowd Roars" at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on Monday they and most of the rest of their party stayed over and Morgan, saying that it was his birthday, gave a party at the St. Catherine Hotel. The featured item was an immense cake with the Emerald Bay Yacht Club emblem done in colored frosting.

When the Morgans returned home they discovered that the cook had baked another immense cake in honor of the birthday. Then it dawned on the comedian that he had mistaken his birth date. The only thing to do was to celebrate all over again; so he phoned his various guests an dinvited them back to dinner.

Crosby Dress Clothes Defy Fashion Edict

Trick Tie and Blue Shirt Taboo, but Film Okay; Miranda Has Smile.

By Frederick C. Othman.

United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, June 23 (U.P.).—You can run across some strange sights in a big movie studio and learn some peculiar things about some famous people. For instance:

We watched Crosby and his patent necktie performing today in a picture at Paramount, called "Paris Honeymoon." He also wore a hard-boiled shirt of baby blue and a wing collar to match, but he was setting no new styles. Pale blue photographs whiter than real white.

Next door, Jack Benny and a couple of hundred lovelies knocked our eye out, almost, in a movie entitled "Artists and Models Abroad." In the center of the set was a gigantic bath tub arrangement, fluted in silver, and also piped in red.

Tubfuls of Beauty.

The most beautiful women Paramount could hire immersed themselves in this tub, one at a time, while a man turned a valve. Helium gas fizzled through some liquid soap and covered them with bubbles, while the cameras ground, soft music played and Director Michael Leisen bit his fingernails. His job looks as if it might be fun, what with being surrounded with femininity de luxe, but it isn't. Nearly always when he wants one of his models to do a scene he discovers that she's in the back room having her hair curled, or her eyelashes pasted on, or her hips smoothed down, or something. It's exasperating, and that isn't all.

Every office boy, non-producing producer and visiting fireman on the lot tries to get inside to see the ladies in their baths. The situation finally has reached such a state that Leisen hardly will let anybody view the proceedings. He almost wouldn't let us, until we proved to his satisfaction that we were a working newspaper reporter. Working! We're still smiling about that.

Miss Isa Miranda, the golden-haired import from Italy, was making her first American picture around the corner. It was titled "Zaza," it was about a Parisian cafe singer, and it was set in a Paris beer garden of the nineteenth century.

Has Box Office Smile.

Miss Miranda wore a silk dress of Scotch plaid, and a smile which ought to make Paramount a lot of money. Most of the other actresses were vaudeville acrobats. And hence wore nothing over their legs except black stockings of the thinnest silk. Silk stockings didn't come that sheer in Paris in 1870—time of the picture—but when Paramount has to compromise between history and art, history has got to suffer. That's no criticism, either. It's okay with us.

Miss Miranda's accent incidentally, apparently is going to be no handicap at the box office. We understood every word she said. We even could hear the smack when she kissed Bert Lahr. He looked disappointed. She only kissed him on the cheek.

The sun outside was shining its hottest. The temperature was 96 and strange things were happening on the studio's street set. In production was a scene from Paramount's annual service picture, entitled "Touch Down, Army." (Next year the picture will be about the Navy; Paramount plays no favorites.)

Stand-in for Sun.

It was supposed to be high noon, the set showed the exterior of a railroad station and Miss Mary Carlisle having an argument with West Point Cadet Robert Cummings. The surprise of all this, to us, was the fact that the experts had rigged nearly an acre of black tarpaulin high overhead, to keep out the sunlight. They provided their own sun, with arc lamps. The trouble with the genuine sun, they said, is its habit of wandering across the heavens, and making shadows where shadows shouldn't be.

Bad News: With vacation season at hand, we're getting numerous letters from readers asking whether we can arrange for them this summer to see the things we see in Hollywood. We wish we could fix it, but there is no chance. The studios claim their actors can work best without an audience. They say furthermore, that visitors always are stumbling over cables and disrupting the manufacture of epics. They insist finally that they'll allow no outsiders on the sound stages. Only exception they've made lately was for Mrs. Roosevelt.

Learns Chinese.

Walter Pidgeon, with Clark Gable and Myrna Loy in "Too Hot to Handle," expects to talk a fairly fluent Chinese by the end of the picture. Iris Wong, pretty war refugee, is teaching the actor the language, to the tune of six new words and an idiom, daily.

Curtiss-Wright Announces New 30-Passenger Airliner

Big Transport to Carry Crew of 4, Night Berths for 20 Persons; With 2 Motors, Will Fly 237 M. P. H. at 20,000 Feet.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 23.—A new 30-passenger "Queen of the Air," capable of speeding through the substratosphere at 237 miles an hour, was announced yesterday by the Curtiss-Wright Corporation.

In addition to the passengers, it will carry a crew of four. Twenty berths can be made up for night flying.

The new airliner will have two engines instead of the four used by two other new transports, the Boeing "Stratoliner" and the Douglas DC-4. Its engines, the announcement said, develop 1,500 horsepower each and carry "the highest rating of the United State Department of Commerce."

Either engine, asserted Vice President Charles W. France, of Curtiss-Wright's St. Louis factory, could fly the ship over the highest mountain in the United States.

It is a mid-wing monoplane, with a fuselage shaped much like a dirigible to withstand "pressurization" of the cabin to maintain normal atmosphere for passengers in the rarefied air of its 20,000-foot cruising altitude. The wingspread will be 106 feet; length, 76 feet, and gross loaded weight, 36,000 pounds.

The two engines are 14-cylinder, double-row Wright Cyclones, whirling with three 7-foot blades each.

The factory chief said he expected first tests to be flown here late this fall or early next spring. Production of the big ship will be in the St. Louis factory.

Derr Freed of Soo Murder Charges

Murder charges against William Derr, 36-year-old Chinese, in connection with the death last February of Henry Derr Soo, laundryman, of the 1400 block of H street northeast, were dropped yesterday by United States Attorney David A. Pine.

Pine said witnesses told him Derr was playing Chinese dominoes when Soo was strangled in bed and that no motive could be assigned to Derr for the slaying.

Derr was turned over to police by the On Leong Tong.

Army to Make Survey Of Maryland Channel

Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, chief of Army engineers, authorized yesterday a survey of proposed channel improvements between Ocean City, Md., and Chincoteague Bay.

The project calls for a channel between 6 and 7 feet deep and from 60 to 100 feet wide.

Bingo Party Planned.

Caribbean Cruise Draws Response From Capitol Hill

Capitol Hill has responded to the lure of the Government's first sponsored cruise to the American Territories in the West Indies.

On the S. S. Iroquois, chartered for the trip, July 2-13, will be Representatives James M. Fitzpatrick, of New York, and James G. Scrugham, of Nevada; Miss Alice Harvey, secretary to Representative Dewey Short, of Missouri; Miss Jessie Taylor, Senator Rush Holt's secretary; Mrs. W. J. George, secretary to Representative Ewing Thomason, of Texas, and Miss Dorothy Allen, secretary to Senator Carter Glass.

A special train will leave here for New York at noon, July 2, to catch the Iroquois, which sails at 6 p. m.

The ship will dock at San Juan, Porto Rico, at 7 a. m. July 6, sail on July 9 for a day in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, before returning to New York.

Reservations are being made in room 341-D North Interior Building. Approximately 300 reservations have been made and all tickets are expected to be sold before the middle of next week. The cruise is open to the public as well as to Government workers.

W.R.G. Pls. Note:

Be sure to represent Belmont for what it is. An old-time formula — 40% small grain, three chamber, charge still Bourbon — heavy bodied, plenty strong...full 100 proof. So exquisite in aroma and bouquet...with all the high flavors left in...that you can use a lot less of it when making a highball, a Manhattan, Old-Fashioned or Julep. IT IS NOT LIGHT! Any real Kentucky distiller will tell you there never was a truer Kentucky whiskey than Belmont.

Refrigerator CookingSeen Wise in Heat

New Boxes Have Special Features to Aid Preparation.

SMART HOUSEWIVES in Washington are learning to cook in the refrigerator. On hot evenings, cold salads, and chilled sliced ham and roasts are replacing the hot main dishes. Desserts such as chiffon pies and ice creams are made in the morning for the evening dessert. This system of cooking is time saving but best of all it avoids heating the apartment just before mealtime.

Since the refrigerator is playing such an important role in modern living, it behooves housewives to use their refrigerator intelligently and take advantage of the new features that are appearing from time to time.

New refrigerators are placing stress on storage space. Sliding shelves and special refrigerator containers make it possible to store foods so that their contents can be noted at a glance. Special compartments are designed for beverages and vegetables.

Temperatures for keeping foods properly also are stressed in the new models. Many of the refrigerators have freezing compartments for keeping frosted foods. Milk, fresh meat, poultry and fish, are kept at a temperature of 50 degrees or lower, milk and milk products are kept near the freezing unit. This means that each food is preserved at a minimum cost. This selective method of preservation allows only the more perishable foods to be chilled to the maximum and allows the refrigerator to run fewer minutes per day to maintain a safe low temperature.

The new refrigerators also are providing units of trays for freezing ice cubes. This is done at no extra cost and provides the extra ice cubes needed for summer beverages. Storage trays are provided in certain models for storing extra cubes while other are being frozen.

The problem of removing the cubes from the trays has been solved to some extent. Some refrigerators have metal clips that turn the cubes from the freezing trays automatically. Others have rubber trays.

Moisture Retained.

The drying out of certain foods in the refrigerator has also been solved by the air conditioning feature that retains moisture. This helps foods to remain fresh and without loss of flavor. It also prevents frequent defrosting, as the moisture from the air is retained in the air, rather than in the form of frost on the freezing trays.

In selecting refrigerators, it is important to select a type with a durable finish. Porcelain enameled heavy steel or a cabinet with a permanent white finish seems to be popular this year. White is still the favorite color but bands of color are used for trim and handles to match the color scheme used throughout the kitchen. An acid-resisting material is preferred for shelves.

In purchasing, a large cabinet has a tremendous advantage over a smaller one. The extra storage space can be used for preserving foods purchased on "bargain day" or at a saving in quantity purchases. In figuring the shelf area, the usual method is to consider the number of pieces or packages of food to be stored.

In special compartments the foods are stored one on top of the other. For the small family a storage space of 6.1 cubic feet is recommended. This allows three ice trays or 84 cubes of ice. The actual shelf area is 11.5 square feet.

A more spacious refrigerator has a shelf area of 14.5 square feet with a special frozen storage compartment of 2 cubic feet. This frozen storage compartment is designed for frosted foods.

Pleasant Homes

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

Pine and periwinkle—who'd have thought of it! But that's what Andrea, our brand-new bride, neighbor, has in her brand-new living room. And we found it a perfectly charming combination when we saw it on our first call.

The walls are paneled in quite ordinary pine siding but they've been rubbed to a nice honey tone. The ceiling is painted in a light periwinkle ground . . . the pattern has some soft apricot toned flowers in it. This room has lots of windows so it's bright and cheerful for all these subtle tones. The curtains are ruffled net and across one wide window Andrea has glass shelves to hold a collection of amethyst colored glass. The rug here is as near the honey color of the pine as Andrea could get; the furniture is walnut in a rather light finish and the sofa has a plain apricot toned covering. Two chairs are slip covered in the periwinkle flowered chintz and a third easy chair is in a stripe that repeats the grey-blue and apricot tones.

The dining room adjoining has a pine dado, then above that, periwenkle chintz on the walls with a cream ceiling. And again one window has glass shelves to hold amethyst glass. The carpet here is apricot color and the chair seats are beige.

Peach is the prevailing tone in Andrea's bedroom, with a carpet in a delicious periwinkle or delphinium blue. The curtains are peach taffeta with the ruffles edged in periwinkle ribbon. Blond furniture . . . a bedspread in cream taffeta with an appliqued bouquet in pastel colors . . . chairs in flowered chintz . . . and there you have an effect that's very bride-y indeed.

The guest room has silver and white striped wall paper, an apricot rug, mahogany furniture with spread, curtains and chairs in flowered chintz on a soft blue ground.

Jelly Roll Prepared by Refrigeration

THE cutting of refrigerator prepared jelly roll is a fascinating thing to this young lady of ten who is pursuing her hobby of cooking. The jelly roll is made by spreading cookies with jam and icing with seven minute frosting.

Souffle Is Ideal For Summer Day; Recipe Is Given

For a warm summery day, what better than cheese-chive souffle? What indeed! Light and fluffy, colorful, and, oh, so flavorful, cheese-chive souffle has plenty of eye as well as appetite appeal. Chives and parsley give a zestful flavor to this mellow rich cheese souffle. If you do not have chives, the tender tops of young spring onions, minced very, very fine, will do admirably.

Cheese-Chive Souffle.

3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of cayenne
½ cup evaporated milk
¼ cup water
4 eggs, separated
¼ pound American cheese
1 teaspoon minced chives
1 teaspoon minced parsley

Melt butter, blend in flour and salt and gradually add the milk and water, stirring constantly until thick and smooth. Stir in beaten egg yolks and cheese. Cook 2 minutes longer and cool. Fold in egg whites, that have been beaten stiff but not dry, and conbine with chives and parsley. Pour into a baking dish that has been greased on the bottom only. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until golden brown, about 30 minutes. Serve at once. Yield: Four servings.

Children Like Notice.

Little children like attention, and they try at a very early age to get and keep it. Parents who are not alert to this fact often encourage wrong behavior in their children. For example the child who is fed spoonful after spoonful of food, who hears his antics at the table described later as bad or cute, or himself pronounced an unusual child because he does not eat this or that, is likely to develop clever schemes to hold the center of interest, even if punishment is the result. In fact, some children enjoy the excitement of their parents' wrath enough to endure severe punishment under it.

Teeth Need Vitamin.

Vitamin A, so necessary for growth and the development of healthy body tissues, is also essential for proper formation of the teeth. Extreme shortage of Vitamin A results in xerophthalmia, a severe eye disease.

READERS' FOOD FORUM

What Do Husbands Like? Seven Wives Give Their Answers.

WHAT type of food are wives giving their husbands this summer? What do these husbands enjoy most—salads, steaks, or seafoods? This week the Food Forum has asked the question of housewives, "What is your husband's favorite dish?" Here are their answers:

English Roast Beef.

Mrs. Gertrude Wender, 1414 Third street southwest, Sternberg Courts: "When Harry and I were first married I realized how fond he was of all good foods, especially spaghetti, fresh salads and dried baked lima beans, but I had yet to learn of my mother-in-law's English roast beef entree. I'll pass the general recipe on to you. Roast a good cut of beef well and bake rice and green peas in the same oven. When all are browned, serve piping hot with a gravy of natural beef and pea juices. Little seasoning is required, as the English method of cooking is by self-seasoning. This is good all the year around.

"There is another interesting rice combination that my husband likes. It is rice and tuna fish en casserole. He prefers a creamy cheese sauce over this and insists it tastes like chicken. I am glad to say it is much less expensive."

Chowder and Salads.

Mrs. Ida Kellogg, Potomac River, aboard the Tech: "My husband and children prefer one or two course meals. As I'm having one of these dinners tonight, I can tell you just what our favorite dish is. It is thick old-fashioned clam chowder filled with potatoes and clams. We don't stint on the clams, either. Our yacht is both home and cruiser to us. Living on the water, we naturally gravitate toward all types of seafood. In spite of the fact that our ship galley is larger than the average, I must conserve my energies to suit my kitchen. This is another reason why my fish chowders are such a happy solution to the cooking problem. I'm glad for this reason that my husband approves my one and two course fish dinners. A salad and a light fruit dessert round out "The Tech" meals.

Healthful Natural Foods.

Mrs. Ione Dennis Koonts, 1520 K street northwest: "The most health-giving foods are the ones my husband and I like best. We enjoy flavorful dishes but we sacrifice high spices and seasonings for the natural food flavors. I probably sound like a cultist but I'm not. My experience in cooking has taught me that the "down to earth" methods of preparing foods are the best for health. I've educated my husband to like these direct, nonfattening meals, and he is sold on their benefits now.

"In turn, my husband has taught me the virtues of certain breads which are suitable for reducing purposes . . . James' favorite dish is a meat loaf prepared with a whole grain cereal as a filler. In this loaf I use tomatoes, celery and green peppers."

Dotes on Toasted Shrimp.

Mrs. Elizabeth Marcus, 1752 P street northwest: "I might as well be frank and say that my husband likes toasted shrimp better than anything in the world—even me. Toasted shrimp has a way of cheering him up after a busy day at the law office.

"We call this dish 'toasted' because the shrimps are so crisp and evenly coated after cooking. I buy the raw shrimps and drop them into hot water, then peel off the shells. I cook them in the hot fat until they are pink. I use lots of paper napkins or paper towels in draining off their grease, but they are worth it. They are delicious.

"Deserts should be simple, I think, but my husband has a different idea along this subject. He wants his deserts 'double or nothing.' If we have a peach and cream, he wants an additional sweet of cakes and such. I keep cookies on hand to care for this need."

Lemon Chiffon Pie.

Mrs. Theo J. Morgan, Forest Glen, Md.: "Lemon chiffon pie is a dessert my husband likes above all others. This is a pie that is fluffy and beautiful. Although it is very handsome thing to look at, it is so rich I cannot serve it too often. It is made of 4 eggs, lemon juice and rind, gelatin and water. I always top this pie with a coating of whipped cream which makes it more eye pleasing. I have a simple meat course with a green vegetable or a spring salad. My husband's favorite salad is a salad of greens. This contains chives, green peppers, carrots, other seasonable greens and a French dressing.

"My husband and I have a keen eye for beauty. We love table decorations and food to be in complete color harmony. Consequently summer salads are a solution as a natural table ornament. One other salad which is a favorite here because it looks so pretty, is a gelatin salad which has pears molded in it."

Novel, Practical Summer Drinks in Contest Include Sherbet, Punch and Minted Iced Tea

Beverage Suggestions Are Just the Thing for Hot Day Visit.

Frosted Limeade Makes a Perfect Cooler for Warm Afternoon.

NOVEL and practical were the recipes suggested in last week's contest for summer beverages. The winning recipes were for a cool gingerale freeze chilled with melting fruit sherbet, a pink fruit punch that has the allure of pink lemonade but a more exotic flavor, a fruit punch thickened with gelatin, and a frosted limeade garnished with long sprigs of mint.

Many novel ideas were sent in including the method suggested by Mrs. Nevitte M. Burke, 1606 North Glebe road, Arlington, Va., for sweetening iced tea. For this she uses old fashioned striped and puffed candy mint. Not only does it sweeten, but it also gives the minty zest so delightful for summer beverages.

Cooled With Sherbet

Mrs. Applegate.

The recipe winning first prize was sent in by Mrs. Roscoe Applegate, 1311 Taylor street northwest. Two flavors of sherbet, gingerale and a spoon or two of maraschino cherry juice was the recipe formula which make it of winning calibre. This beverage is inexpensive and just the thing for summer guests who drop in on a hot evening.

Gingerale Freeze.

1 pint of orange sherbet
1 pint of pineapple sherbet
1 quart of gingerale
1 bottle of maraschino cherries

Place a portion of each kind of sherbet in a tall glass. Pour gingerale over it slowly enough so that it does not bubble over. Add the cherry and a spoon of two of cherry juice. Serve with straws and iced tea or a soda spoon.

A Pink Color Scheme

Mrs. Pauline Gross, 323 Kennedy street northwest, will receive a check for $3 for her recipe for fruit punch. The grated rind of lemons adds the touch necessary in making summer beverages individual. Crushed ripe strawberries add color. Orange and pineapple are used for garnish. The beverage should be served in a large punch bowl.

Mrs. Gross.

Fruit Punch.

2 tablespoons of tea
2 quarts of boiling water
1 pound of granulated sugar
4 oranges
1 fresh pineapple
1 pint of strawberries

Grate the rind of 2 lemons and cook with water for five minutes. Pour over tea and let stand for five minutes, then strain. Cool. Cut the 2 oranges in slices. Extract the juice from the other 2. Cut the pineapple into small pieces. Wash, stem and crush the strawberries. Mix all fruits and add lemon juice and orange juice.

When the tea is cool, add to the fruit mixture and place in refrigerator to chill. Pour into punch bowl with ice cubes decorated with maraschino cherries. To freeze cherries in the ice cubes, the tray should be about 1-3 filled with water, then partly frozen before the fruit is added. Add the cherries, then finish filling the tray with water (about ¾ full) and allow to finish freezing. This is very colorful.

Garnished With Mint

Mrs. Paul G. Wilson, 4008 Sheetz avenue, Brentwood, Md., has a recipe for frosted limeade that is as satisfactory to taste as to look at. A few small cakes on a plate and a tall frosted glass of this thirst quenching beverage makes a perfect "afternoon tea."

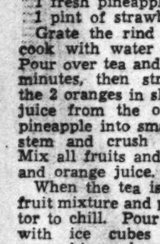
Orange Frosted Limeade.

8 medium oranges (or enough juice to fill an ice tray)
2 limes
4 heaping tablespoons of sugar
1 large sprig of mint

Fill the ice tray with the orange juice and freeze. Roll the limes and squeeze. Strain the juice. Add the sugar. Fill the pitcher with the frozen cubes of orange juice and place in the refrigerator to "frost." Place the mint in the pitcher and pour over all the lime juice. Add 3 pints of water and stir slightly. Serve with 2-orange cubes in each glass. These ingredients will make 1 quart.

For Garden Parties

Mrs. Sara Lee Orange, 2025 Eye street northwest, has a delightful refreshing warm weather drink that can be served for garden parties or summer card parties. The base of the beverage is double strength tea. The gelatin adds "body" to the beverage and the pineapple juice flavor. The beverage should be poured over a block of ice in the punch bowl before serving. This quantity makes 2½ quarts.



Mrs. Orange.

New Center Market
"Everything Under One Roof."
5th St. N. W.
K to L

A LONG tall glass of cool beverage is one way to defeat the hot days. The garnish of sliced lemon and the striped cellophane straws provide a colorful appearance to glasses of fruit punch.

Fruit Punch.

1 package of lemon gelatin
1 pint of double strength tea
1 No. 2 can of pineapple juice
1 large bottle of gingerale
Orange and lemon slices
1 small bottle of maraschino cherries.
Ice
Mint

Dissolve gelatin in hot tea. Add pineapple juice and pour over a block of ice in a punch bowl. Add the gingerale and garnish with lemon and orange slices, cherry and mint. If preferred, pour punch over the crushed ice into a pitcher.

'Professional' Frost

Mrs. Frank E. Edwards, No. 7 Belle Grove road, Brooklyn Park, Baltimore, Md., likes to serve the type of frosted beverages that look professional. The "frost" made with egg white and powdered sugar should be added just before serving the beverage.

Hawaiian Nectar.

4 cups of unsweetened pineapple juice
¼ cup of strained lemon juice
1½ cups of crushed strawberries
1 1-3 cups of hot water
½ cup of light colored honey
1 cup of strained orange juice

Mix the fruits and juices and chill. Dissolve the honey in the hot water and cool. Combine this with the fruit juices and serve over the ice cubes. The glasses are prepared by brushing the top part on the inside with egg white, then rolling in powdered sugar. This gives the glass the appearance of being frosted and makes the nectar even more appetizing.

Icebox Cooking Is Featured in Recipe Contest

How are you using your refrigerator for summer cooking? Many Washington housewives have found it of great value. The recipe contest this week invites your recipes for refrigerator cooking. Five cash prizes are being offered. The first is $3, the second, $2, and there are three prizes of $1 each.

If you take special pride in your ice cream, mousses, or gelatin desserts, you probably have one that you would like to share with other Washington housewives. Perhaps it is a certain custard of gelatin. If you have a new product that you have been yearning to experiment with, this is an opportunity to do so. If it turns out successfully, send in your recipe. It may be a winner.

Any type of chilled dish can qualify in the contest. A salad, an ice cream, a chilled mousse or à dish such as refrigerator rolls or a casserole or meat loaf which is stored in the refrigerator until time to cook are all eligible. To enter the contest, write out your recipe, giving clear directions for preparation and mail to The Post Food Editor before July 2.

Recipe Runners Up

Ten recipes were selected for honorable mention. Selections include:

Mrs. Ernest L. Andes, 1412 Chapin street northwest. Orangeade syrup.

Mrs. Grace P. Stark, 1900 F street northwest. Ice tea punch.

Mrs. I. R. Miller, 23 Philadelphia avenue, Takoma Park, Md. Orchard sparkle.

Short Time Needed To Grill Frankfurters

Frankfurters need but a short cooking, whether you boil them or grill them in a dry pan. The latter method is preferable if they are to be served between split rolls, which, by the way, are the better for heating. They may be split and buttered, either before or after they are heated. Mustard should be served "on the side," as there are always preferences as to its use. You may offer as well a chopped mixed pickle, chili sauce and catsup, if you are serving frankfurters to guests. Then everyone will be satisfied.

A well-seasoned coleslaw or potato salad, cheese in several varieties, toasted crackers or thin slices of buttered brown and white bread with coffee or beer or broth, and you will have all that you need for the buffet supper.

Customer: That seems to be a low price for tea.
Salesman: Yes, you can pay more for other blends of teas. These teas are maybe more delicate in flavor, but are usually without such a heavy body and are ideal for hot tea. But for iced tea, Sanitary's Special Tea has the right body to withstand the extreme temperatures to which it is subjected.

Unusual Type Of Bread Helps Enliven Meal

Baking Powder, Mustard Cinnamon Rolls Are Easy to Make.

When a meal is going to be wholesome but unexciting, as so often happens when the budget and the family tastes clash, some special attention to the bread that is served will often atone for the unpopularity of the main dish. Many popular restaurants have learned this trick and have built up reputations for superexcellence by the tempting varieties of their rolls, breads and biscuits.

The dinner rolls or bread may be made of the same dough that is used regularly in the family, but it can be given unfamiliar deliciousness with special toppings. Poppy seeds, caraway seeds, or sesame seeds may be sprinkled over the rolls before baking. The addition of powdered anise to the dough itself during the mixing, or of ground cinnamon sprinkled liberally over the dough before it is rolled and cut into shape are further suggestions for making this part of the meal interesting.

Enticing Loaf Bread.

If loaf bread is to be served, it too can be made more enticing. Remove the crusts of a loaf, slice the bread lengthwise into inch-thick slices. Spread each slice with butter, then with prepared mustard. Roll lengthwise and fasten with toothpicks or keep rolled in a slightly dampened towel until the roll holds its shape. Then slice crosswise, as for jelly roll, and you get tangy bread slices to serve with a boiled dinner. Cinnamon bread can be made in the same way by spreading the long slices with a mixture of cinnamon and sugar instead of with mustard. The cinnamon bread slices are good with a fruit salad, or with afternoon tea.

A good all-purpose recipe for rolls that may be given all sorts of agreeable variations is the following one for baking powder rolls.

Baking Powder Rolls.

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon shortening
2-3 cup milk
Melted butter
Caraway or poppy seeds or
Mixture of 1 tablespoon sugar and 1 teaspoon cinnamon

Sift flour before measuring, then sift again with the baking powder and salt. Cut in the shortening and add the milk all at once. Stir gently until all the flour is dampened, and then stir vigorously until the mixture forms a soft dough which follows the spoon around the bowl. Turn out on a slightly floured board and knead lightly for two or three minutes. Roll ¼ inch thick and cut into crescents or cut into strips which are 6 x½ inches. If strips are made, tie these into a knot.

Brush the tops of the shapes with melted butter and springle either with seeds or with the cinnamon and sugar mixture. Place the rolls on a greased pan and cover, letting them rise in a warm place for 20 minutes. Bake in a hot oven ten minutes, spread again with melted butter and continue baking for about ten minutes more. Remove from the oven and butter tops again. For the oven and for the final buttering, the best method is to let the melted butter drop on the rolls from a teaspoon.

Modern Adonis.

Charles Atlas, the physical culturist, is billed as "the world's most perfectly developed man," but he has a lot of trouble getting clothes to fit him. He has a 47-inch chest and a 32-inch waist—a difference of a half a dozen coat sizes. He gets coats with no shoulder padding and loose, hanging waists. He has to have an extra high collar on his shirts to cover his neck—size 17.

Meat Sundries Found Useful

Meal planning can be a monotonous task or a pleasant adventure, depending upon your point of view. And since it is something which the average homemaker must do 365 days of the year, it is worth tackling in the proper spirit. You'll find that using a little system helps greatly in adding interest to your problem.

The meat sundries offer an excellent chance to add the needed variety to your meals. And not only are you adding flavors different than the usual, but also delicious dishes which are chock full of food value. But in order to have them at their best, they must be properly cooked, so here are a few hints on cooking them.

Liver.

Liver is perhaps the best known of all the meat sundries, since the discovery of its value in the treatment and cure of anemia has been widely publicized. Nutritionally, liver is one of our most valuable foods, with all kinds of liver, either beef, pork, lamb or calves', ranking very high in food value.

Liver may be broiled or panbroiled, braised with vegetables, made into a loaf, croquettes or patties, or combined with other foods in a variety of ways. If it is to be ground, such as in the loaf, croquettes, or patties, the liver should be dropped into boiling water and simmered for two or three minutes in order to make grinding easy.

Brains and Sweetbreads.

Both brains and sweetbreads are considered great delicacies. Before any method of preparation, these are usually precooked by simmering in slightly acidulated water for 15 or 20 minutes. Then they are ready for any method of cooking, such as frying, creaming and broiling.

Kidney.

Beef, pork, lamb and veal kidneys are all found in the market with the beef kidney being the largest and for that reason most often used. Wash kidneys and remove the outer membrane. Split through the center and remove the fat and heavy veins. They may be marinated before cooking. If desired, in dressing of two parts vinegar to one of cooking oil.

Tongue.

Beef tongue is the choice because of its large size, but pork and lamb tongues also are delicious. If tongues are pickled or smoked they should be soaked for several hours, then simmered in water until done. Fresh tongues also are cooked in water at a simmering temperature.

Braised Liver.

Brown a sliced onion and ¾ cup chopped celery in bacon fat. Dredge a chunky piece of liver with flour and brown this in the fat. Place in a baking dish, season with salt and pepper, cover with bacon slices, add ½ cup of hot water, cover and cook in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for one hour. Remove cover for last 15 minutes so that bacon on top will brown.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Fiddler's Funny Elbow.

Of things of which you do not know
Be slow to say they are not so.
—Old Mother Nature.

Have you ever noticed how often it is much easier not to believe than to believe? You will find it so everywhere you go. Belief comes very largely from familiarity. It is easy to believe that which is similar to something with which you are familiar. It sometimes is very difficult to believe that which is wholly unlike anything with which you are familiar.

It was so with Peter Rabbit. Even when Fiddler the Cricket has assured him that crickets do not sing, and that their so-called chirping is not done with the voice, is not a form of singing, he found difficulty in believing. Now Fiddler was playing for him, for it is true that the cricket does not sing but plays a musical instrument, a sort of fiddle which is at the same time a part of himself.

Fiddler lifted his wing covers. You didn't know that common field crickets have wings? They are just apologies for wings, useless for flying, each hidden under a black, shiny cover. Peter stared very hard. It was only while those wing covers were lifted that the fiddle was played. They must have something to do with it, although he couldn't see how they could have. When those wing covers were dropped back into place there was no more music.

"How do you do it?" demanded Peter.

"It's easy," replied Fiddler. "Do you like it?"

"Very much," replied Peter. "Very much indeed. But you haven't told me how you do it."

"Oh, I just rub the edge of one wing cover against the other. That is all there is to it," replied Fiddler.

Probably, it being so familiar to him, Fiddler felt just that way about it—that that was all there was to it. Not so Peter. How just rubbing of those wing covers sidewise across the other could make those musical notes was something he couldn't understand at all.

"There's nothing to it," said Fiddler. "I'll show you again." This he proceeded to do, lifting his wing covers and rubbing the edge of one sidewise across the inner side of the other, the wing covers quivering as he did so.

What Peter couldn't see, and what Fiddler probably didn't know about himself, was that the largest vein of each wing cover, crossing diagonally near the base, was furnished with ridges such as you may see on a file. In fact, it is called the file. And on the inner edge of each wing cover is a hardened bit called the scraper. When the scraper is drawn across the file the so-called chirp is produced, and the quivering wing covers act as sounding boards to send the notes a long distance. Each wing cover being provided with a file and a scraper, a cricket may be said to carry two fiddles and two bows, and he can use either combination that he wishes.

"Where is Mrs. Fiddler?" asked Peter.

"I don't know. That is why I am playing my fiddle. When she hears it she will come to me," replied Fiddler.

"I should think you would go look for her," said Peter.

"Look for her!" exclaimed Fiddler. "Don't be silly, Peter Rabbit. What chance would I have of ever finding her in this tall grass?"

"Listen!" said Peter. "Is that her calling to you?"

"It is not!" exclaimed Fiddler angrily. "That's a rival trying to entice her away. Mrs. Fiddler hasn't any fiddle, so she can't reply."

"By the way," said Peter, "where are your ears? I don't see any."

"Where would they be but in my elbows," retorted Fiddler.

"Your elbows!" cried Peter. "Don't be silly. No one has ears in their elbows. If you've got ears in your elbows, you've got mighty funny elbows. I don't believe a word of it."

The next story: "A Queer Dispute."

Fruit Juice Cubes Beat Ice in Drinks

Everyone likes to hear ice tikle in the glass, but if very much ice is used the drink becomes decidedly diluted as the ice melts. By using cubes made from fruit juice, the drink, instead of becoming weaker as the cubes melt, becomes more interesting, and if an added flavor has been put in the juice before freezing, then the beverage takes on a new flavor.

Any juice that it not too sweet can be frozen. Pineapple and grapefruit juice are especially popular not only because they blend with most drinks, but because the color is delicate. Other canned juices that add flavor and give a distinctive color to the beverage are cherry, loganberry and cranberry.

Frozen cubes of this type may be added to ice tea. For an added flavor, the cubes might be spiced. To do that, boil the fruit juice with a little stick cinnamon, whole cloves and a bit of candied ginger, and when well seasoned remove the spice and freeze the juice.

Instead of freezing the juice until it is hard, it can be frozen to the "mushy" stage and served with fruit cocktail.

Mrs. Clements Drafts Plan for P.-T. A. Session

State Conference to Be Held July 11 to 13 at University of Maryland.

Mrs. G. R. Clements, president of the Maryland State Congress of Parents and Teachers, was in Washington yesterday working at the headquarters of the National Congress in the N. E. A. Building on final details for the Maryland State conference to be held July 11 to 13, at the University of Maryland.

Many members of the D. C. Congress will attend the sessions which will be devoted to a study of the technique and structure of the P.-T. A. and program building for the local units. The technical discussions will be led by Mrs. Charles Roe, of the national office, and other parts of the program will be led by State chairmen of the different departments. Mrs. Homer V. Hart, of Hagerstown, fourth vice president of the State congress, is chairman of the conference.

Dr. J. D. Blackwell, president of the State Teachers College at Salisbury, who is chairman of character education for the organization, will discuss this topic and outline programs on it for local units.

Elisabeth Amery, sixth vice president of the State congress and State supervisor of Home Economics in the Maryland State Department of Education, will talk on her subject and suggest program material. Similar discussions will be given by Allen B. Amoss, supervisor of music in the schools of Havre de Grace, who is State chairman of music for the P.-T. A.; Mrs. Burroughs Price, of Salisbury, chairman of art; Mrs. William H. Diefel, of Annapolis, State treasurer of the P.-T. A., who will talk on the work of the treasurers of local units; Mrs. H. Ross Coppage, of Baltimore, immediate past State president, now membership chairman, who will discuss means of increasing the membership.

A feature of the conference will be a 20-minute period each day devoted to the use of the official publications of the association and a study of the structure of the organization. These will be led by Mrs. Robert G. Doty, of Cumberland, publications chairman. There also will be a panel discussion of the work of county councils, led by Mrs. William F. Podlich, third vice president and adviser to the councils. County presidents and past presidents will participate in the discussions.

Mothers Taught Secrets of Food

A trip to market may be routine for most housewives, who think they know their groceries, but it marked the high point this week in an educational experiment at two maternal and child welfare centers of the District Health Department. Mothers who had been learning the secrets of wise food selection went forth to apply their knowledge to the purchase of vegetables, fruits, the most economical meats and other foods.

A practical approach to the problem of getting the most for the money is the aim of two experimental groups formed recently under the direction of Mrs. Elizabeth O. Grant, nutritionist at the Health Department's Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare, of which Dr. Ella Oppenheimer is director. The working plan was arranged with the co-operation of the Red Cross Chapter.

"We feel that there are a large number of low-income families capable of making certain adjustments to better their own condition through a more adequate diet," Mrs. Grant explained.

It is the first time the department has undertaken a project of this kind, Mrs. Grant pointed out. A group for white women is held at 230 Third street northwest Tuesday afternoons, and a colored group meets Wednesday mornings at 518 M street northwest.

The instructor for both classes is Mrs. William G. Finn, whose services are furnished by the Red Cross Chapter, which also provides the food supplies used. Mrs. Finn has conducted similar classes in co-operation with the Americanization school. Otto S. Lund, chapter manager, expressed the hope the courses would prove of such value that the Red Cross could plan similar measures.

This series will be continued until July 1, and consists of eight meetings at each center. The plan of study was worked out by Mrs. Grant, with the co-operation of Miss Melva Bakkie, nutrition consultant at national headquarters of the Red Cross.

The series is based upon the daily food requirements of the family. Emphasis is placed on the proper selection of foods and their preparation. One lesson was given to the study of milk in the diet, with a demonstration of its use in various forms—bottled, evaporated and dried. Budgeting and economical buying are taught. The mothers learn how to read labels on packaged and canned foods. In the lesson on the preparation of vegetables many of the mothers had their first taste of properly cooked vegetables. The marketing trip demonstrates practical budgeting of food dollars for the family. At the close of the series the daily food requirements are to be fitted into daily menus.

All the mothers reported to Mrs. Finn that they had successfully used the new recipes and methods at home. Other centers already are asking for the service. Expansion is handicapped by the lack of nurseries or trained persons to take care of young children while the mothers are attending classes.

Steaks Out-of-Doors.

To broil steaks-out-of-doors build a large fire and let it die down until it is a mass of red-hot embers. Place the steaks on a rack far enough from the heat that they will not cook too quickly. By the time one side is browned, the steaks should be about half done. Turn them and allow them to broil on the second side.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, June 23.

OUR GREAT Grand Central Depot, along here on Forty-second street, is a great sight any summer week-end, with the thousands rushing off to the mosquitoes and sunburn, but this week-end is the pick of the lot. Today and tomorrow see goodness knows how many little boys and girls being packed off to the summer camps that dot New York State and New England—shepherded by worried parents and jolly teachers and counselors. It's a sight never to be forgotten.

ALICE HUGHES

These tikes are the lucky ones—whose parents can afford to ship them out of these appalling sunbaked canyons to woods and lakes and pastures. Most of New York's children stay in town and look forward to shower baths from fire hydrants in the streets. But the little ones who go away are a sight to see, equipped far more completely than African explorers of old, and soon to trade their big-city pallor for a country brown.

Shopping around for my own 6-year-old Martin, who is now messing up the State of Connecticut, I was amazed and delighted at the camping clothes and dingbats for youngsters. As for clothes, little boys wear only infinitesimal pants, in most cases—but how little girls have been freed in the last few years. No longer are they incased in heavy serge bloomers and middy blouses — the well-dressed young camperette now wears a one-piece play suit, or very light shirts and shorts, or flannel slacks if the weather is cool. When I think of how my oldest clothes were all I rated in the summers of my New Hampshire girlhood I wonder if today's city kids aren't being a little overdone.

But I don't guess they are. In fact, they're happier and luckier—perhaps. I wish you could come with me to Grand Central tomorrow. It's a sight!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—This is a time of parting in New York. People go—very few come, it seems to me And of all the good-by parties of the last week, the nicest was the hurried little ta-ta to lovely Gertrude Lawrence, ending her season-long run in "Susan and God." At the last performance, even the stage was filled with flowers and toy balloons, and afterward, in her dressing room, was champagne for her scads of friends. To make it complete, a band from the musical hit, "I'd Rather Be Right," in a theater right across the street, came over and played "Auld Lang Syne" under her dressing room window! The whole little event was warm with the sweet friendliness that blooms in the theater—and everybody was happy and teary.

I've seen a lot of girls about town wearing a big gold coin on a chain around their necks, on which is written their husbands' or gentlemen friends' names in their handwriting. This makes identification possible, and I hope no one is embarrassed.

Old Aunt Alice nearly broke up the press preview run of the Pennsylvania's streamlined train to Philadelphia. Selma Robinson, another writer, and I had important dates back in New York—so they had to stop the train over the river in Newark, N. J., and let us off. I don't think the dear old Pennsy was very happy about the whole thing. But the day was especially pleasant for me because I had lunch with Col. William J. Donovan, that ace lawyer, charming man and great soldier who was "Wild Bill" to the fighting Irishmen he commanded in the Rainbow Division during the war. The last time I saw the colonel was three years ago in Rome, when he and I tried to keep correspondent Floyd Gibbons awake all night so he could make an audience with His Holiness next morning. And then that darned Floyd overslept, after all!

* * * *

Selfridge, the great American merchant who conquered London, is opening a chain of five-and-dime stores in England. And they have a very cute and trick name—"John Thrifty" stores. That will win our British cousins!

* * * *

Since tan is the most seasonable subject there is, you might like to know that Elizabeth Arden told me the other day that the dark, swarthy sort of sun tan is out this year. A mild honey color is the fashionable shade. At least, that is what Elizabeth says—but how are you going to stop the sun if you or it get careless? I merely stay under a big umbrella myself.

Miss Kleven Bride Of B. M. Whemhoff

The wedding of Miss Majorie Beth Kleven, of Takoma Park, Md., daughter of William R. Kleven, of Sebeka, Minn., to Bruce M. Whemhoff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron L. Whemhoff, formerly of Takoma Park, now of Chevy Chase, Md., took place Saturday afternoon at the parsonage of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church. A reception followed at the home of Dr. and Mrs. G. Burton Queen, brother-in-law and sister of the bride, with whom she made her home.

Ed Wynn on Hats.

New York (AP).—Comedian Ed Wynn soliloquizes about hats, one of his greatest laugh-getting devices:

"Hats to me are the funniest things in the world. The thing with which everyone is familiar means most when you are trying to get laughs. Everyone knows hats, wears them, and can appreciate their ridiculous possibilities. Everyone can appreciate a big hat on a little man, or vice versa."

Congressional Club to Present 'Night in Venice'

Members of the Congressional Country Club, assisted by guest artists, will present a "Night in Venice" tomorrow, the program planned to take place around the swimming pool. All performers will be dressed in Italian costumes.

Wandering minstrels will lead the guests from the terrace, where they will dine and dance, down the steps to the pool, where chairs will be arranged for the audience.

The opening numbers, "O Solo Mio" and La Donna Mobile" will be sung by a quartet: Arthur Deibert, Horatio Wrench, Bill Raymond and Fred East.

A gypsy tambourine dance by Mrs. Fred Neuland, Mrs. Elmer Collins, Mrs. Frank Fuller, Mrs. Horace Young, Mrs. Victor Cahill, Mrs. Elizabeth Collins, Miss Gloria Davis and Miss Mary Jane Moran will follow. After the gypsy number, a gondola will float on to the scene and the singing gondolier, Andrew Walker, will serenade Rose Chanelle, who will answer his song from a flower-bedecked balcony above the pool.

Following this comedy act, Mrs. Edna McClain will present the "Tarentella," a native Italian dance. A dimunitive huckster, Judy Ruth Thompson, will attempt to sell her wares to an Italian tune and the grand finale will include all members of the cast singing "The Italian Street Song."

Mrs. Elmer Collins and Mrs. Verne Simmons, of the entertainment committee, have planned and directed the production with the assistance of Mrs. Russell Conn, Andrew Walker, Harold Krafft, Mr. Simmons, Bancroft Foley and Winfree Johnson.

The Kents Open Home in Capital

Now making their home at 1702 Summitt place, Mr. and Mrs. John Kent were married on Friday afternoon, June 3. The ceremony took place at the rectory of St. Ann Church, where it was performed by the Rev. Timothy McCarthy at 4 o'clock. Mrs. Kent is the former Miss Lelia Ogston, daughter of Mrs. Lucy Russell Ogston, of this city, and the late Alfred Ogston, at one time British Consul to the United States. Through her mother, the bride is a granddaughter of the late Judge Charles Wells Russell, who served as Minister to Persia.

Given in marriage by her uncle, John Mosby Russell, of New York, the bride wore a dress of hyacinth blue chiffon and a large picture hat. She carried Johanna Hill roses.

Her sister, Miss Virginia Ogston, was her maid of honor and only attendant and was attired in corn-colored chiffon. She carried talisman roses and delphinium. Edwin R. Kent served his brother as best man.

Miss Mary Weeks Engaged to Marry

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walcott Weeks of West Chester, Pa., formerly of Washington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Frances Weeks, to Philip White Guild, son of Dr. and Mrs. Stacy R. Guild, of Roland Park, Baltimore, Md.

Miss Weeks is the granddaughter of the late Dr. Louis A. Bauer, who was director of the Department of Terrestrial Magnetism of the Carnegie Institute, and Mrs. Bauer, and of Edward M. Weeks, of Cleveland Park.

Miss Weeks is a senior at Goucher College and a member of Delta Gamma sorority. Mr. Guild was graduated from the Johns Hopkins University in 1936 and is doing graduate work in the geology department. He is a member of Beta Theta Pi and Phi Beta Kappa fraternities.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Is Man 'Petty and Trivial' to Brood Over Sweetheart's Failure to Remember His Birthday.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For the past year I have been going with a very lovely girl who combines almost all the qualities I most admire—high character, good looks, domesticity, intelligence, musical talent, even disposition and the ability to hold an exacting position. We have not "gone steady," but have gotten together about once a week for golf, concerts, movies, etc.

• • • •

Recently I have thought myself in love with her and was about to tell her of it, when an apparent coldness and entire lack of sentiment in her seemed to crop out and block the mutuality of affection which had been developing. I am sure I have not been wrong in believing she also cares for me a great deal; although she has said that she does not want to marry until she has held her position for two or three years.

• • • •

Probably I am overly-sensitive, but more than once some little statement of hers or some action of indifference has iced my glow and come between us like a barrier. It may seem very trivial and testy of me, but my feelings were greatly hurt when she overlooked my birthday recently, not even sending me a card, although she knew the date. Whether rightly or wrongly, I consider the remembrance of anniversaries and special days one of the obligatory amenities of existence, and it perplexes me no end that she should have let me down as she did. However, she saw me unexpectedly on my birthday and felicitated me. She told me later that, after seeing me, she had thought of sending me a card special delivery; but just didn't. Couldn't she realize the difference a card or letter would have meant to me? Or didn't she care?

• • • •

Please tell me, Miss Haworth—for I value your opinions highly—whether I am a sentimental fool for placing such emphasis on a neglect of this kind, when her good qualities are so many. And also, whether mutuality of shared sentiment and emotional really is a sine qua non in love and marriage.

PERPLEXED.

Straw in the Wind.

DEAR PERPLEXED: A girl so agreeably circumstanced as this girl seems to be greatly gifted as to social talents, natural qualities and practical abilities; happy in her job, sought after by beaux (or you would undoubtedly find it possible to see her oftener than once a week), calmly content to remain a working woman and a bachelor girl for several years, probably has no intention of encouraging any man's serious suit, no matter how fond of him she may be, nor how congenial his society.

• • • •

It is probably her conscious or subconscious desire to maintain the friendship at its present level (and possibly to spare you embarrassment) which causes her to act in such a manner as to stop the words in your throat with which you would tell her you love her. She probably recognizes, by intuition if not from experience, those masculine attitudes of mind and behavior which preface a declaration of love and proposal of marriage, and yet, in this case, out of very appreciation of the present casually affectionate comradeship, is definitely unwilling to have it develop into a more complicated and more disturbing relationship. She may feel that, once you had spoken the words that are in your mind, the old pleasant comradeship would be changed forever, and that the association might even, of necessity, have to be discontinued.

• • • •

In my opinion, and in view of the fact that so many scalp-hunting girls are abroad in the land (those who collect proposals and declarations of love with the same assiduity that others display in collecting new gadgets for their so-called "charm bracelets"), it seems that the girl is playing unusually fair and square with you. She is letting you know by her actions that she values you as a friend; but that she definitely is not in the market for serious love-making.

• • • •

It could be possible, of course, that she is half in love with you; yet naturally shy, with deep reserves of feeling beneath her casual and socially competent outward demeanor; and that the sudden chill she casts across your ardor is only the reflection of intuitive maidenly panic in the face of unmistakable masculine intentions of a strictly honorable sort. However, when two hearts are beating in unison, a man's intuition is to be trusted (quite as much as a woman's) to recognize that fact; and the average man instinctively knows when his true love's reluctance to hear his suit is due to shyness, and when—on the other hand—he is being "put off" by an impalpable psychic barrier which the girl draws between them at will.

• • • •

Knowing the sentimental importance you attach to anniversaries and "special days;" knowing that you hold they should be made much of by, for and between intimates (and I agree with you that it is a tender and admirable sentiment), and yet failing to send you so much as a card on your birthday, I think you must conclude either that she doesn't wish to encourage you in the supposition that she is to be regarded as one of your nearest and dearest persons; or that she had simply, forgotten the date until she came face to face with you. In either event, it would appear that she doesn't return your emotion in kind. For if she loved you, she wouldn't forget your birthday, and she would be prompt and graceful in the practice of whatever sentimental gestures were designed to please you.

• • • •

This being the case (as I see the problem), it seems to me you are getting the cart before the horse, so far as this girl is concerned, in wondering "whether mutuality of shared sentiment and emotion really are an absolute necessity in love and in marriage." With mutual love nonexistent, as I read the crystal, and marriage therefore unlikely to eventuate, it is borrowing trouble to stew overmuch about whether she does or does not invest anniversaries with the same sentimental significance and social observance you concede them. Both of you are a long way from achieving mutuality of any sort, it seems to me.

All Shades of Pink Pushing Their Way Into Summer Chart

Paris (U.P.).—From flesh to fuschia, all shades of pink are pushing their way into the summer color chart—which up to now has looked very much like a blue chart with a few stripes of mauve and yellow.

Strawberry pink of the ice cream variety is the latest comer, and many women who have a prejudice against pale pink are finding that the deeper shade offers something more "vital" along with its femininity.

Jean Desses has a most wearable heavy linen suit of strawberry pink. Under it he puts a navy blue and pink horizontally striped blouse.

Cerise is the next new step on the ladder of pinks. A pleasant variation of the more purplish fuschia shade, the cerise is used by Lelong for a flowing sash tying around a deep blue evening gown with a halter neck. And the same vivid shade is the background for a dainty white-dotted Swiss which forms the bodice for a bouffant white tulle skirt.

For Midsummer 'Widowing'

IT WILL not be long now until the midsummer "widow" begins to come into the fashion picture. She is the girl who suddenly appears looking very cool, sophisticated and different in an all-black ensemble making all her rivals in white and colors feel like village belles. This season she will wear an all-black sheer, satin, or jersey, preferably, set off with pearl beads or clips and maybe a rhinestone bracelet. The girl shown above has on a black silk sheer made with the new square neckline and draped bow knot shoulder line. The skirt is gored. The decorative leather belt has flower motifs across the front. The black straw hat has white rick-rack trimming. A good costume for luncheon, cocktails or "don't dress" evening events.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Vitamins and Minerals Are Easily Destroyed by Careless Cooking.

By Ida Jean Kain.

SOME OF THE most efficient housewives unwittingly destroy vitamins and minerals and serve their families foods which do not contain them. These protective elements are so essential to our well-being that we spend a great deal of time planning menus and marketing for the foods that contain them, and we certainly do not want them to go to waste in the kitchen.

Of all the known vitamins, C is the most easily destroyed. It is affected by oxidation, heat and water. For example, when orange juice is allowed to stand overnight, a part of its vitamin C content is destroyed by oxidation.

It is a mistake to prepare citrous fruits the night before for next morning use. Oxidation also affects tomato juice, and while it is economical to buy the juice in large cans, it should be kept covered at all times.

Cooking Destroys Vitamins.

Household cooking rapidly destroys most of the vitamin C content of vegetables except in acids, such as tomatoes. Commercial canning, however, preserves vitamins and minerals. The treatment of cans before heating and use of steam to drive air from the vacuum containers saves the protective elements. Nutritionally speaking, canned fruits and vegetables on the market are equal to the fresh products. The modern housewife who cooks with a can opener in one hand is no longer to be laughed at!

The old fashioned method of cooking in an open vessel destroyed most of the vitamin C, but new methods of canning, where the food is heated without contact with air, prevents any great loss.

In preparation of a meal it is all too easy to toss vitamins down the drain. Many of the vitamins as well as minerals dissolve in water and are poured down the sink when cooking water is drained off. Vitamins B, C and G and the minerals calcium and phosphorus dissolve in water and are therefore apt to be thrown away. Vegetables should be cooked quickly and in as little water as possible and the water should be used for soups and broths. Also, "water" in which vegetables are canned should be utilized, not thrown away.

Soda Is Destructive.

Soda greatly increases the rate of destruction of vitamins B and C, yet many a good cook adds a pinch of soda to peas and other vegetables to preserve fresh color. In a very acid vegetable, the soda is not quite as destructive.

You probably always select young vegetables because they are tender and this is an excellent practice. The young roots anad leaves are richer in vitamin C than older plants.

The modern homemaker does a splendid job in practical application of nutrition to menu planning and supplies her family with protective foods all year around, either in fresh, canned or frozen form.

Accent on Dress By Southern Girls

Atlanta.—Southern girls want clothes that speak with a Southern accent. Paris and New York don't fill the bill, they've decided, so they're styling their own.

Home-made designing started in high schools and colleges; now dress shops and department stores have taken it up. Courses in dress designing are as popular now as contract bridge lessons used to be.

"In the North," says a shop owner, "women prefer their figured materials to have a light background with bright flowers, but in the South women think dark backgrounds with light flowers are more flattering."

Month Brings Dress Problem For Weddings

Bride May Properly Wear White, Instep-Length, at Simple Ceremony.

By Margaret Wallace.

THERE are many June brides who wish a simple wedding and who have to consider the matter of expense and yet longing to be married in the traditional white wedding dress and veil. One of these young girls writes the following letter which contains many of the problems of this type of June bride.

"Dear Miss Wallace:

"I am to be married the latter part of this month. I have saved some money for my wedding, but I want to be as economical as possible, as I do not want to incur any more expenses than necessary for my parents. I have money enough to pay for a simple wedding costume, but do not think it would be enough for a long train and veil. I do want to be married in white with a veil. My mother has suggested that I wear an instep-length white dress and a veil to the shoulder. Is this proper? What would the groom and the best man and ushers wear if I wore such a costume? They are eager to wear white suits and to dispense with cutaway coats and striped trousers, as they would have to purchase such formal grab and do not move in the circle of society that would require them to wear them much in the future. I am going to have a matron of honor and a bridesmaid. What should they wear, if I wear the type of wedding costume my mother suggests? My small sister is to be flower girl. What should she wear?

"The wedding is to be at noon in our church, but I have invited only about 25 persons outside of the family and the wedding party. My mother and father are providing wedding refreshments, but I do not wish to have a regular wedding breakfast on account of the expense. Would salad and sandwiches and ice cream and the wedding cake be adequate? Our dining room is small, so I would like to have the guests stand instead of attempting to seat them. Would it be proper to serve these refreshments buffet style?"

Most girls like to wear white for their weddings and for an informal wedding an instep-length dress with a short veil would be proper. The groom, best man, and ushers could wear dark suits instead of cutaway coats and striped trousers or they could wear white suits, not of the sport variety, but more on the tailored order. Ties should be gray or in some such light shade and should be all alike.

The matron of honor and bridesmaid should wear some type of chiffon or flowered afternoon dress with large hats or small dressy ones. The flower girl could wear white or colored chiffon or organdie and a hat to match.

The refreshments for the wedding receptions can be elaborate or simple according to the desires of the bride's parents and what they can afford. The menu suggested would be a very suitable one.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Some Open Letters.

To Cafeteria Servers:

I wish, dear mesdames, that you would not confuse me so completely,
By shouting, "Serve you, ma'am?" the minute I pick up my tray and napkin,
Or importune me while I'm all wrapped up in cogitating,
Upon the relative merits of your hash and lamb stew,
Or hound me for a quick decision on your wondrous salads,
For some day if you don't quit making me so nervous,
I fear the worm will turn and I'll forget that I'm a lady,
And loudly shriek, "Shut up? Shut up for heaven's sake!" or maybe throw some jello.

To Waiters in Swanky Restaurants:

I wish, illustrious sirs, that you would not be quite so omnipresent,
Hovering about me when I'm floundering in your labyrinthian menus,
Or even worse, appearing out of nowhere at wrong moments,
To fill my glass and put a damper on the conversation,
At the high climax of some juicy bit of scandal.
Another thing, you irk me greatly by always rearranging things
And being over-eager to cart my plate away: Now here's a tip,

To Department Store Clerks:

I'm sorry, your royal highnesses, but you have a most distressing habit,
Of handing me a lot of change, and while I'm struggling
To put it in my purse, you thrust my package at me.
Now, I am not a centipede, and if you'll have a little patience,
I'll get around to picking up my bundle; and another thing,
I wish you wouldn't tell me so triumphantly and smugly
That nobody's wearing just the shade or size I'm wanting.
I know you have your troubles, but who hasn't? Why be snooty?

To Other Shoppers:

I wish, most esteemed morons, that you would finally reach decision
On what you want, and why, and whither you are going.
And when you board an elevator, you would not crowd at the door
To go to the eleventh floor, and if you ride on escalators
Please learn to get on promptly, and please don't pass me walking,
For nothing YOU could do would be quite that important.
Also I wish you'd learn that right is right, and just where left is,
And if you've got to be a squirrel, please be one in the open.

To Street Car and Bus Riders:

I wish, dear fellow simians, you would not be so chummy
When you sit down beside me or upon my left front quarter,
And that you also would move over toward the window,
And give me even a third of the space when I must park beside you.
Another way you irk me is by sitting camatose and grandly,
Spread out in threes, on those long seats while I straphang before you,
And if you will not teach your brats to take their turn at doors,
I fear some time I'll run amuck and do some native slaughter.

To Myself:

I wish, my dear Miss Carp, that you were a different person,
One who could live loftily above small irritations,
And boast that you never took life too seriously,
Or let anything get in your hair, but stayed relaxed and complacent,
Enjoying the Washington humidity, praising the damp winter ter weather,
Loving your fellow men, yea even your fellow women,
And things just as they are, not always insisting
On upsetting the world, but sweetly adapting yourself to all its aberrations.

Add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of lemon juice to each cup of heavy cream to hasten the whipping process.

D. C. to Fete Officers Of Two Training Ships

Brazilian and Yugoslav Groups to Visit Capital Within Few Days; Fotitch Plans Dinner Monday in Countrymen's Honor.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

WHILE PLANS ARE BEING completed for a round of entertainment in compliment to the commander and senior officers of the Brazilian training ship, Almirante Saldanha, due here next week, word comes that officers of another foreign vessel also are to visit the Capital in the next few days.

On Tuesday of this week, the Yugoslav training ship, Javran, pulled into port in New York with 115 officers and midshipmen on board. After being widely feted in New York over this week-end, the commanding officer, Capt. Yerko Kachich and senior members of his staff will come to Washington on Monday, when a full schedule will await them.

Accompanied by the Yugoslav Minister, Constantin Fotitch, the visitors will go to Arlington at 10 o'clock Monday to lay a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Later they will visit the Navy Department and then return to the legation where the minister will give a luncheon in their honor. Among the guests invited to this function are the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Charles Edison; the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William D. Leahy; Rear Admiral Ralston S. Holmes, Comdr. William Popham, Col. John B. Coulter, Wallace Murray and Harold Tittman, of the State Department; the Counselor of the Yugoslav Legation, Dr. Vladimir Rybar, and the Secretary of the Legation, Rastko Petrovic.

On Monday evening, the minister will entertain at a dinner for about 20 guests—again in honor of officers of the Javran. On their return to New York the visitors will continue to be feted until after July 4 when they will sail to Boston. From there, they will go to Bermuda and then to the West Coast before returning to their homeland.

Yesterday afternoon the minister left for New York, whence he will go to Detroit to join the Yugoslav colony there in its celebrtaion on Sunday of Kosovos Day—commemorating a battle against Turkey in 1389. The minister plans to return to Washington early Monday morning in order to be there when the Javran officers arrive. On Wednesday, he will sail on the Normandie for Europe, and will join Mme. Fotitch in Belgrade, where they will spend the remainder of the summer.

PROSPERITY has come around the corner . . . judging from the new Summer Social Register, which lists 22 more yachts than last year—1,202 to 1,180. Back in the boom years the total zoomed to 1,600 only to drop to slightly more than 1,000 when the slump set in. As it climbed toward its one-time high level again, it dropped once more when the recession set in. Now it's on the way up again.

The new register shows a slight decrease in the number of summer addresses listed, however, and a decided falling off of families living abroad. In recent years there has been a gradual rise in the number of social lights who preferred to summer abroad—with 740 in 1936, and 826 in 1937, but this year the figure dropped to 758.

Shore resorts show a slight increase of residents, while inland resorts have suffered a corresponding decrease. However, the Adirondacks, rural New England, Canada and Western ranches are still holding their own. As to other vital statistics gleaned from the black book of the bluebloods: The number of persons married has increased only slightly —1,032 as against 1,019 last year, and deaths have dropped from a total of 533 in the 1937 edition to 517 in the present volume.

A WEDDING OF WIDE interest in Washington will take place at Hicksville, Long Island tomorrow, when Miss Marian Kingsland, daughter of George Lovett Kingsland, becomes the bride of Count Hans Christoph Seherr-Thoss in the home of the bride-elect's aunt, Mrs. Edgar W. Leonard.

Count and Countess Hermann Seherr-Thoss, parents of the prospective bridegroom, arrived in New York Thursday to attend some of the pre-nuptial festivities. The Countess was widely known here as Miss Muriel White, daughter of the late Henry White, of Washington and New York, who for many years was in the Diplomatic Service and was one time Ambassador to France. While in the Capital the Whites made their home on Crescent place, and it was there that they lived shortly before the former Miss White's engagement to the count was announced.

Since their marriage Count and Countess Seherr-Thoss have made their home in Dobrau Castle, Silesia. At the time of their wedding, the Count was an officer in the Royal Prussian Cuirassiers. Through her mother the countess is related to the Rutherfurd and Stuyvesant families of New York.

Woodring Children Given Party On Their 3d and 4th Birthdays

17 Youngsters in Seventh Heaven With Balloons, Treasure Hunt, Krazy Kat Movie and Ice Cream Menagerie.

Seventeen youngsters probably spent last night dreaming busily of a candy stick jungle full of ice cream animals. And one or two of them no doubt have reached the grave and mature decision this morning that there are times when you can have too much birthday cake, even when it is covered with pink and blue icing.

All this means that yesterday afternoon Melissa and Marcus Woodring, daughter and son of the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring, celebrated their third and fourth birthdays, respectively, at a party at their home on S street.

The Army Orchestra wasn't there, but who would bother to miss the Army Orchestra, or even a couple of generals, when no one less than a hurdy-gurdy man put in an appearance with a bundle of balloons . . . one balloon, as a matter of fact, for each guest.

Festivities got off to a flying start at 4 o'clock, when the younger generation took over the staid garden of the house in which former President Hoover once resided. Matters of state, however, were forgotten, as Mrs. Woodring, in an attractive blue crepe sports frock, announced a treasure hunt, with gifts hidden around and about for the children. At 4:30, after the party had moved inside the house, three reels of "Krazy Kat" movies came next on the program.

Then, supper, consisting sumptuously of creamed chicken, rice, peas, biscuits and the ice cream menagerie. The table was decorated in red, white and blue with candles in matching colors, and in the center of it (you won't believe it, but it's so) was an artificial "lake" filled to the brink with gay little boats.

Marcus' birthday was actually last Sunday and Melissa's on Tuesday, but since yesterday was the first free day on Mrs. Woodring's calendar, she decided to give the party then. Secretary Woodring put in an impromptu appearance during the afternoon.

Among the guests were Diana Hopkins, daughter of Harry Hopkins; Dorothy Clagett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brice Clagett; Paul Luce and Dickinson Jewett.

Volley - Martin Nuptials in Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon James Volley are in New York on their wedding trip. The bride, formerly Miss Frances Martin, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Martin, of Roanoke, Va.

The marriage took place Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the Mount Vernon Methodist Church, with the Rev. John Ruskin officiating. The bride was gowned in white chiffon made with a full skirt, high neck and puffed sleeves. She wore a gold cross and carried a prayer book. Her hat of white faille was trimmed with lilies of the valley to match her corsage.

Miss Rosemary Babcock, of Falls Church, Va., was maid of honor. She wore a pink frock with a leghorn hat and carried a colonial bouquet of pink and white roses. Cleveland Harrill was best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Lain To Live in D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Seeger Lain, who were married June 11, will live in Washington on their return from Miami and Cuba. The bride, the former Miss Bula Pearl Brown, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jacob Brown, of Garfield, Ga., where the wedding took place at the First Baptist Church.

Wearing a gown of white satin with a veil of illusion attached to a bandeau of orange blossoms, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Evelyn Brown, of Washington, served as maid of honor, and the other attendants were the Misses Mary White, Elma Howard, Flora Smith, Ada Brown, the bride's sister, and Mary Kight, who served as flower girl. Paul Elston was best man, and the ushers were Ralph Brown, the bride's brother; Ernest Wollenbacher, Edward Valentine Lee and Alfred Hansen.

The Garretts Honor Visitors

Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett entertained at a dinner last evening at their residence on New Hampshire avenue in honor of Senor and Senora Juan Carlos Acebal and Senorita Adela Zuberbuhler.

Senora de Acebal and Senorita Zuberbuhler are sisters of Mariano Zuberbuhler, Second Secretary of the Argentine embassy, whose marriage to Miss Margot Garrett, daughter of Mr. Garrett, will take place on Wednesday.

Tonight Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins will entertain at a dinner for the engaged couple, and on Monday evening the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz will honor them at a similar party.

Warners Entertain For Harvey Smiths Before Departure

Dr. and Mrs. Harold E. Warner entertained last evening at a buffet supper and bridge party for Dr. and Mrs. Harvey A. Smith, who will leave soon for their new home in Lancaster, Pa.

Guests included Dr. and Mrs. Frank Ballou, Dr. and Mrs. Chester Holmes, Dr. and Mrs. Clyde Huber, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Safford, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Walter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bradshaw, Mr. and Mrs. Lawson Cantrell, Mr. and Mrs. James Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Karl Hoffman and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bollinger.

Miss Elizabeth Anne Simpson Is Married to Dr. Paul Kiernan

Before an improvised altar of palms, in front of a long Florentine mirror veiled with fern, Miss Elizabeth Anne Simpson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Augustus Simpson, was married at 8 o'clock last evening to Dr. Paul Chapman Kiernan, son of Mrs. Helen Kiernan-Vasa and the late Dr. John A. Kiernan.

Miss Stubblefield Is Maid of Honor

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white net made with a square neck, puffed sleeves, and a full skirt. Her finger tip length veil of white tulee was attached to a coronet of small white gardenias, and she carried white gladioli and lilies of the valley.

Miss Parthenia Stubblefield, who served as her maid of honor and only attendant, wore a frock of turquoise net made like that of the bride, and a wreath of pink flowers in her hair. She carried a mixed spring bouquet, with pink flowers predominating.

John Kiernan, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Joseph Kiernan, another brother, and Dr. Richard Spire.

Reception After Marriage Ceremony

A reception followed the ceremony. Mrs. Simpson wore a printed chiffon gown with a corsage of gardenias, and the mother of the bridegroom was attired in white chiffon with a similar corsage.

Mrs. Kiernan attended the Holton Arms School and Miss Barry's School in Florence, Italy. Her husband is an alumnus of Mercersburg Academy, the University of Maryland, and the George Washington University School of Medicine.

Morrisons Plan Trip to Coast

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. George Douglas Morrison expect to leave Monday with their two sons by automobile for the West Coast. He will report for duty on the Tennessee, stationed at Long Beach, Calif.

They will be the guests of Commander Morrison's sister, Mrs. Frank W. Blair, in Nashville, Tenn., en route.

• • • •

Maj. and Mrs. Herbert A. Rinard have as guests at their apartment at the Wyoming their nephew, George S. Rentz, jr., of Berkeley, Calif., and Ernest A. Ramsaur, jr., of Beverly Hills, Calif., both graduates of the University of California. They are en route to Princeton, where they will take special work in Oriental languages this summer. In the autumn they will return to Berkeley to continue their studies.

Mr. and Mrs. John Fields, of Round Hill, Va., entertained several members of the Shanks family at the latter's annual reunion on Sunday. It was decided that a meeting of this type was to be held each year on the third Sunday in June.

Among members of the family present were Mrs. Lena McCarthy, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene E. Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Scrivener, of Washington; Mrs. Mary Duffin, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne, of Falls Church, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. George Bolyard, of Kingwood, W. Va. Other friends attending were Mr. and Mrs. Sam Alton, and Mrs. Mary E. Smith, of Washington, and Mrs. Elizabeth Sanmeyer, of Round Hill.

Swiss Envoy's Son Becomes Father of Boy

Mme. Peter Is Delighted by News of Arrival of 2d Grandchild.

Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland, is delighted by news of the arrival of a second grandchild within two months. A boy has been born to her son, J. Georges Peter, and Mrs. Peter, of Cambridge, Mass. A girl was born to another son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Marc Peter, jr., of Boston, several weeks ago.

Mme. Peter left yesterday for Cohasset, on the south shore of Massachusetts, where she has taken a house for the summer.

The Minister will leave today for Uniontown, Pa., where he will be received tonight by the Chamber of Commerce, which will give a dinner in his honor. Tomorrow he will attend a ceremony at New Geneva, Pa., in honor of Albert Gallatin, who was born in Geneva, Switzerland, and who was Secretary of the Treasury under Jefferson and Madison. The ceremony will take place at Friendship Hill, the mansion built by Gallatin.

Returning to Washington on Sunday, the Minister will go later in the week to Cambridge to see his grandson and from there to Cohasset, where he will spend the Fourth of July week-end with his family.

Mr. Chamberlin Weds Miss Mann

Miss Beverly Mann, daughter of Capt. William Leake Mann, U. S. Navy Medical Corps, and Mrs. Mann, of Quantico, Va., was married yesterday to William Charles Chamberlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Barrett Chamberlin, of Chicago. Canon Edward Slater Dunlap officiated at the ceremony in St. Joseph's Chapel of Washington Cathedral, at 4:30 o'clock.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white dress on simple lines and carried a prayer book. Her tulle veil was draped from clusters of flowers. She was unattended.

John Chamberlin, of Chicago, was his brother's best man. The ceremony was witnessed by members of the families and intimate friends.

A reception was held at the quarters at the Marine Barracks of Col. Joseph Fegan, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Fegan, uncle and aunt of the bride. Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, wife of Maj Gen. Holcomb, U. S. M. C., assisted. The couple, who left on a wedding trip to Michigan, will live in New York City. Mr. Chamberlin, a graduate of Dartmouth, will take a course at Columbia University in the fall.

The former Miss Mann attended King-Smith School in Washington when her parents were stationed here. She is a graduate of the University of California. Capt. and Mrs Mann, who are just completing a four-year tour of duty at Quantico, will leave for their new post at San Diego, July 1.

Among out-of-town guests was the bridegroom's other brother, Henry Barrett Chamberlin, jr., of Chicago.

Tercentenary Group Plans Dinner for Swedish Royalty

The United States Delaware Valley Tercentenary Commission has issued invitations to a dinner on Sunday evening, July 3, in honor of T. R. H., the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Sweden.

Scheduled for 8 o'clock, the event will take place at the Mayflower.

That afternoon the royal visitors will be guests of honor at a reception, for which the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom have issued invitations. It will be at the Swedish Legation from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Carl Anthony Mapes To Wed in Michigan

A wedding of interest to Washington will take place tomorrow in Lowell, Mich., when Miss Jane Runciman of that city will become the bride of Carl Anthony Mapes of Washington.

Mr. Mapes is the son of Col. J. J. Reddy, U. S. A., and Mrs. Reddy, who are now stationed at the Third Corps area headquarters in Baltimore.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE dining room of the fashionable Mayflower, which usually is buzzing with feminine chatter at the lunch hour, yesterday resembled a men's club. ladies of Washington seem to have drifted out of town for the summer, but the Capital is thronged with temporary bachelors.

DUDLEY HARMON

However, we did see at the Mayflower yesterday Mrs. Harold Walker farewell-lunching with her beautiful daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr. "Evie," who had on a smart navy blue redingote dress with a red cravat, and a hat to match, denied she was seriously considering offers to appear on Broadway, as rumored recently by a famous New York columnist. However, it is true that she has received several flattering bids as the result of her expertly acted monologues at the Tail Waggers benefit in May.

Mrs. Robert is off for New York today and sails tomorrow on the Georgic to visit Mrs. Messmore Kendall in a house the latter has taken near Dublin. She probably will return in September. Meanwhile, Mr. and Mrs. Walker will divide their time between their Georgetown house and Webley, their place on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

• • • •

LUNCHING in solitude at the Mayflower yesterday was the omnipresent Marquis of Sant 'Orsola, naval attache of the Italian Embassy. He will leave today to spend the week-end with his family at Hot Springs, Va., where they have taken a cottage for the summer.

• • • •

"What are you going to do this summer?" is the stock question these days. We inquired this of Mrs. Mondell Gregg, who replied that she would spend the Fourth of July holiday with Mr. and Mrs. John Kenney at the house they have taken in Seabright, N. J. From there she will go to Newport for a stay with Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, of Washington, who are occupying The Mount there this summer. Mrs. Gregg will return to the Capital in two or thre weeks.

PEOPLE who have received thank-you notes from Mrs. John Roosevelt, the former Anne Lindsay Clark, are agreed that she is a woman of few words. Here is a sample one Washingtonian opened: "Thank you for the dishes. They are very nice." Period.

SOCIAL GOINGS-ON: Christopher Bramwell, of the British Embassy, will entertain at a dinner before the small dance Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett will give on Tuesday for Miss Margot Garrett. Her wedding to Mariano Zuberbuhler, of the Argentine Embassy, takes place the following day . . . Miss Nancy Ordway has asked friends to come in for cocktails next Thursday afternoon . . . Wallace LaRue, of the Foreign Service Training School, gave a cocktail party yesterday afternoon at the Hay-Adams House.

A MODERNISTIC house furnished with old Colonial pieces has been leased by Dr. Roberto G. de Mendoza, first secretary of the Cuban Embassy. The residence is one of those which energetic Miss Margaret Fraser has remodeled, and is on Prospect avenue in Georgetown. Mr. Mendoza will occupy it the first of next month. He has been living in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Farr Simmons on Thirtieth street.

Mr. Simmons, by the way, will speak with McKenzie King, Canadian Prime Minister, on an international hook-up this afternoon at 2:15 to dedicate a new bridge over the St. Lawrence.

Parkers Honor Niece, Fiance

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Parker gave a dinner at the Shoreham last evening in honor of their niece, Miss Adelaide Anne Carder, and Charles Bulkley Lutz, both of Oklahoma City, who will be married tomorrow afternoon at Washington Cathedral.

Because Miss Carder's grandmother, Mrs. Loomis, is living in Washington, the bride-elect and her fiance came here to be married. Mrs. Loomis, Mrs. Edith Lutz, mother of the prospective bridegroom: his sister, Mrs. Carl Taggert, and her son, Thomas Taggert, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Carder, parents of the bride-to-be, were guests at the dinner.

Others in the party included Mr. and Mrs. George Morris; Mr. and Mrs. John H. Sorrells, of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Stokes; Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Evans; Mr. and Mrs. Luther Huston; Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Carder; Mrs. George Arthur Goodson, of Minneapolis, guest of Mr. and Mrs. Parker; Dr. Horace Knowlton, of Tampa, Fla.; Dr. Dexter Merriam Keezer; Miss Mary Parker; Frederick Carder, jr., and George B. Parker, jr.

Miss Leggett Becomes Bride

Miss Marjorie Elizabeth Leggett, daughter of Milton Mitchell Leggett, of Washington, and Mrs. Ruth Collins Leggett, of Ocala, Fla., was married to Donald George Langdon last evening at 7 o'clock at the rectory of St. Ann's Church, the Rev. Timothy McCarthey officiating. The ceremony was followed by an informal dinner at the Shoreham Terrace. Mr. Langdon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Langdon, of this city.

The bride wore a simple white crepe dress with a corsage of orchids. Miss Carolyn Smith, of Camilla, Ga., was her only attendant. Kennth G. Walsh was best man.

Guests at the dinner, in addition to the wedding party, were Mrs. Ruth Glenn Rhodes, Mrs. Catherine Wernicke and Miss Dorothy Meuller, of St. Paul; Mrs. Kennth G. Walsh and David Forer an.

After a southern wedding trip, the couple will live in Washington.

Bel Alton Bridal Interests D. C.

Of interest to their friends in Washington was the wedding of Miss Frances Anna Lorenz and Bernard Reese Winkler yesterday afternoon at St. Ignatius Church, St. Thomas Manor, Bel Alton, Md. The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock by the Rev. John H. Gampp, S. J. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mitchell Lorenz, of La Plata, Md. Mr. Winkler is the son of Joseph Winkler, of Bel Alton.

Given in marriage by her father, Miss Lorenz wore a gown of white lace over satin, cut on simple lines and fashioned with leg o' mutton sleeves and a short train. Her veil of tulle was draped from a lace coronet trimmed with orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Harriet Margaret Lorenz served as her sister's maid of honor. She was attired in shell pink chiffon over taffeta and had an arm bouquet of spring flowers. The bridesmaids were Miss Mary Louise McDonough, Miss Mary Berry Brown, Miss Katherine Mitchell Cochrane, all of La Plata, and Miss Leila Brent Matthews, of Baltimore. They wore aquamarine chiffon. The flower girl was little Anna Lee Lorenz, younger sister of the bride.

At the reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Lorenz, mother of the bride, wore blue lace with matching accessories and a corsage of pink rosebuds.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Avery and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Purdy, of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. George Cole, of Terre Haute, Ind., and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Winkler, of Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. Baker Is Visiting Maj. and Mrs. Barry

Maj. and Mrs. David Barry have as guests the former's sister, Mrs. Wilder Baker, the former Cora Barry, of Washington. She is the wife of Commander Baker, who is with the naval Yale unit in New Haven.

Maj. and Mrs. Barry will leave shortly for a stay in Sewickley, Pa., and will then go to Germany for a month. Mrs. Baker will summer at Jamestown, R. I.

Phi Upsilon Omicron Delegates Visit the White House As Three-Day National Convention Is Opened Here

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

A visit to the White House and tour of the Bureau of Home Economics were features of the program for Phi Upsilon Omicron Professional Home Economics Fraternity, which opened its three-day national convention yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel. Following a business meeting, at which Miss Florence Fallgatter, of Washington, national president, presided, the delegates had luncheon and then embarked on their sight-seeing trip which ended with a picnic in Rock Creek Park.

They were conducted through the red room, blue room, green room and the east ballroom on their visit to the Executive Mansion and saw everything of interest in the state dining room, but the kitchens were not included in their tour of inspection.

The business session of the fraternity in the morning included reports of the officers: Miss Margaret Lunn, secretary, who is at the American Association of University Women's headquarters here; Mrs. Elizabeth Shirey, treasurer; Mrs. Nell Lanham Leonian, editor of the Candle, and Emily B. Carter, custodian.

The nominating committee presented the name of Miss Winona Morgan as unopposed candidate for president of the fraternity, to succeed Miss Fallgatter. Miss Morgan is a member of the faculty of the child development department of Ohio State University. Other nominations were Miss Priscilla Rowland, of the high school faculty in Logan, Utah, and Miss Margaret Kropp, a member of the alumnae chapter of Ohio State University, for treasurer; Miss Lunn and Miss Evelyn Terrell, an alumnae chapter member at Louisiana State University, for secretary. The elections take place Saturday morning.

Mrs. Harriet Howe, professional worker in the consumer education service of the American Home Economics Association, which is the national project of the fraternity, will address the session this morning. She has been doing part-time work in this field with the support of the fraternity for the past three years and will report the progress which has been made.

Dr. Lucile Reynolds will preside at the session, the remainder of which will be devoted to reports of professional work by the active chapters and of their money-making activities.

The consumer education service is the only project of the organization and is in line with its professional interests. The convention program deals chiefly with the work within the fraternity rather than any it sponsors outside.

This afternoon, round tables will be conducted for active chapter delegates, with Miss Morgan as leader; alumnae members, with Mrs. Doris Risley, as leader, and for local advisory committee members, Hazel Manning, leader.

In the first, for chapter delegates, Miss Lunn will discuss routine procedures; Mrs. Shirley, the financial system; Ellen Fuesner, relationships with district councilors; Mrs. Leonian, the support of the candle, and Mrs. Margaret Davis, the annual programs of work.

A reception will be held this evening at the Wardman Park Hotel. Tomorrow morning, Miss Lunn will lead a roundtable on chapter problems and a plan for a Phi U Manual will be presented. The initiation of national honorary members will take place at 4 p. m. tomorrow and a banquet and dance will be held in the evening.

Councilors who are here for the convention, in addition to national officers are: Mrs. G. G. Pohlman, of Morgantown, W. Va., District 1; Mrs. Margaret Davis, Athens, Ohio, District 2; Miss Frances Urban, University City, Mo., District 3; Mrs. Genevieve Forthun, Fargo, N. Dak., District 4, and Miss Hazel Manning, head of the clothing department at the University of Wisconsin, in Madison, District 6.

Delegates from the active chapters who are attending are: Helen Gail Born, Alpha, Minneapolis; Evelyn Larson, Beta, North Dakota State College, Fargo; Elizabeth Wallrabenstein, Gamma, Milan, Ohio; Florence Frisby, Delta, Denver; Margaret Hodgkiss, Epsilon, Chateau, Mont.; Jean Spooner, Zeta, Spirit Lake, Idaho; June Stewart, Eta, Pittsburgh, Kans.; Evelyn Burns, Theta, Farnham, N. Y.; Grace Silverman, Iota Brooklyn, N. Y.; Margaret Hill, Kappa, Logan, Utah; Phyllis Curry, Lambda, Lost Creek, W. Va.; Marian Lewis, Mu, Jamestown, N. Y.; Martha Linder, Nu, Beloit, Wis.; Mary Beth Hichtman, Xi, Ord, Neb.; Alvina Iverson, Omicron, Iowa State College, Ames; Coleta Knewitz, Pi, East St. Louis; Frances Wilson, Rho, Kansas State College, Manhattan; Mrs. Marion Bell, Sigma, Baton Rouge, La.; Catherine Kirk, Tau, Menomonie, Wis.; Margaret Putnam, Upsilon, Laurens, S. C.; Audrey McCollum, Phi, Brookings, S. D.; Alice Ruth Miller, Chi, Sesser, Ga.; Tomasine Faught, Psi, Jasper, Ala.; Maretta Holloway, Omega, Lubbock, Tex.; Alpha Alpha, Dorothy D. Smith, Houston, Tex.

SPANISH and Latin-American music, as well as dancing, will be featured Monday night at the party on the roof of the Powhatan Hotel which is being sponsored by the women's committee to aid children of Spain.

In addition to the group of Spanish dances to be presented by Sophia Delza, noted American dancer, there will be Mexican songs by Senorita Erma Castillo Najero, daughter of the Mexican Ambassador, and informal singing of Latin-American tunes by the guests, many of them from the diplomatic corps. Dr. Ernesto Galarza, of the Pan-American Union, has been persuaded to bring his guitar and will play for some of the group singing.

Although the party has been announced as a dance, there also will be cards for those who prefer bridge.

Mrs. Alice Park Tells of Battles To Obtain Vote

Pioneer in Struggle Finds Girls Amazed When Told of Long Fight.

Girls nowadays not only take for granted the right to vote, but are often unaware of the struggle of years which woman suffrage in this country represents, according to Mrs. Alice Park, one of the early workers in the movement, who is spending a few days at Alva Belmont House.

Mrs. Park, who came from Palo Alto, Calif., to help keep an eye on Congress during the final sessions before adjournment, has the sturdy spirit which one comes to recognize as characteristic of the women who were known a few decads past as "militant suffragets." She is a small, slight person, with her straight gray hair bobbed as it probably was before short hair had become a fad. She talked with directness and enthusiasm as she recalled the days when Wyoming was the only State in the Union which had granted the vote to women. A flag with a single star in the blue field was then the badge of the movement. As other States came into line, more stars were added.

Mrs. Park has with her a collection of 175 badges used in the campaign for woman suffrage in various States of the Union and in foreign countries including China, Japan, England and New Zealand. She has kept them as part of the testimony to the long years of work represented in the achievement of suffrage.

They were included in an exhibit she prepared last year at Stanford University, showing the history of the movement. There were seven cases of material, and the greatest interest was in those which contained anti-suffrage literature. The students read with amazement, she said, that there had ever been such opposition to the idea of women having the vote.

Mrs. Park sets the dividing line in the suffrage movement at 1893, when, in addition to Wyoming, Colorado fell in line, followed by Idaho and Utah and, in 1911, Washington and California. With the block of six Western States, the women had a substantial argument for their cause and progress thereafter was comparatively steady. Mrs. Park prepared a large part of the literature for the California campaign.

She wears the National Woman's Party button now just as she wore the suffrage badge in the presuffrage days. "It gives you a chance to tell your story when people ask you what it stands for," she said.

From Washington Mrs. Park will go to Bristol Ferry, R. I., to visit Sarah J. Eddy, now 87 years of age, whose portrait of Susan B. Anthony receiving the thanks of comin= generations, hangs in the National Gallery. Mrs. Park was with the artist 20 years ago when she was preparing the picture to be sent to Washington. It has been shown in cities throughout the United States before being permanently located here.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

CAPITAL CAVIAR: For palpable reasons the nickname of one eminent Senator is "the Garter Snapper" . . . Recently Senator Lodge quit cigarets and began to eat candy; now he has gained a few pounds and must diet this summer . . . A government lawyer received a crisp letter from a federal employes union signed "Assistant Collector of Dues."

* * * *

Justice Reed . . . no spanker.

So many deaths occur in the House and Senate that one or the other of the flags which fly above the south and north wings of the Capitol are at half staff a good share of the time . . . There were 16 deaths during the Seventy-fifth Congress. But these flags fly only when the House or Senate is in session; they're down now.

* * * *

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES: A diplomat's fortyish wife succumbed to a strange urge during dinner to go on one of the 60-cent "moonlight cruises" on the Potomac. "I want to mingle anonymously with the hoi-polloi!" she exclaimed. "I want to rub elbows with the American proletariat!"

"—cadets for red tape."

It was a moonlit night, too . . . But His Excellency pleaded that he had too many dispatches to read, and assigned a young attache to take her instead . . . They even danced to the swing music of the 4-piece orchestra on the lower deck as the boat floated past Mt. Vernon . . . (Diplomats occasionally have less fun . . .)

* * * *

"About 50,000,000 Germans take a worse licking than that from the Nazis every day."

* * * *

Another attempt to establish a "West Point" for civil service officials died quietly in committee again at the last session of Congress . . . One school of thought argues that our Civil Service is lamentably lacking in training and tradition.

It argues (and not without reason) that the proper tying of official matters in the right kind of red tape is indispensable in a democracy.

* * * *

Another group opposes the proposal bitterly, as a sinister attempt to stratify and petrify the Civil Service and transform it into an upper class, aristocratic stronghold, like the State Department or the Army and Navy . . . (This is hardly true of the Army and Navy; the officers of the armed services are almost as representative of the middle classes of every State as Congress.)

Another whack at the civil service "West Point" is likely next session.

"—did the Court spank itself?"

Some of the New Dealers are sore as blazes because so little attention was paid to the fact that, in the Tompkins decision, the Supreme Court admitted that in similar cases the Supreme Court had ruled unconstitutionally for almost 100 years. They say the Court spanked itself; all except Justice Butler, who dissented, and Justice Reed, who didn't think "unconstitutional" was the word for it. (The spanking, if any, was administered of course to Justices long dead and gone.)

One likely reason for this rather fine point: Right now the new deal strategy is to tear down the Court so as to build up the quasi-judicial boards (like NLRB) by contrast.

PAJAMA PORTRAIT.
Sultan's Daughter.

But for John L. Lewis' bristling hostility against any publicity for his womenfolk, his buxom, able daughter Cathryn might be one of America's most famous women. He has tabooed pictures of her or her equally remarkable mother . . . Cathryn, in her 20's, eschews youthful companions and works 12 to 16 hours a day as the labor sultan's confidential secretary . . . She spent two years at ritzy Bryn Mawr College, but it bored her. She is a fountain of labor history and lore, and an invaluable researcher . . . Her soft voice is seldom heard at parties; it is more apt to be answering the phone at CIO's bank-like headquarters at midnight. Her attitude is withdrawn; amid Washington's sparkle she has not forgotten the mining town where she was born. Her only self-indulgence is the big diamonds she wears on her fingers, which occasionally she contemplates inscrutably.

* * * *

GILT OFF THE DOME: Precious is gallery laughter to Senator Tom Connally of Texas . . . He tickles the galleries more than any other Senator . . . One of his sallies wowed the gallery gods in a final session; Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri, who is flippant himself occasionally but otherwise a great defender of senatorial dignity, was in the chair and gaveled for order. He cautioned the tourists that if they didn't inhale their risibilities he'd clear the galleries.

Tom looked up and told them to pay no attention; their giggles weren't bothering him.

"I've heard that threat made many times," he said, "but I've never seen the galleries cleared once."

Economize on Electricity in Municipal Buildings, Commissioners Urge.

The District Commissioners yesterday took a first step to economize on local government by issuing orders regulating the use of electricity in municipally owned buildings.

Housewarmings, open houses, dedications "and like infrequent activities" shall be avoided, the Commissioners instructed, during the hours of 4:30 to 8:30 p. m. from November through February.

There has recently been put into effect a revised Schedule "E," by which users obtain a lower rate than under Schedule "D," by which electrical energy was purchased for most of the District activities.

Maximum demands during the peak period, 4:30 to 8:30 p. m. in the high use months, November to February, control to a large degree the cost of electricity throughout the year, the commissioners said.

Special activities such as dances, so far as possible, should not be scheduled between those hours at any time during the year, it was ordered.

Don't forget to turn off all lights, motors and appliances after using, the commissioners urged, and don't use lights when daylight is sufficient.

Session Opened Here by Christian Endeavor Society

The District of Columbia Christian Endeavor Conference, which opened its two-day session yesterday at Sherwood Presbyterian Church, drew some 300 young people from Washington and vicinity.

Principal speakers were the Rev. Thomas Law Coyle, who delivered the address of welcome; W. Roy Breg and the Rev. Peter B. Marshall, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, who conducted an open forum discussion in the evening. The conference theme is "Youth Education in the Abundant Life." A social also was held last night under the direction of Mrs. Thelma Smith, of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.

Today at 1 p. m. the group will travel to Mount Vernon for a service under the Christian Endeavor tree planted by Dr. Francis Clark, founder of the movement. At 6 p. m., the annual banquet will be held in the parish hall at Sherwood, with the Rev. George E. Schnabel, pastor of Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, as the main speaker.

Boat Crash Ruling Upheld by Bureau

The Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation approved the findings of a special board that investigated the collision between the City of Washington, excursion steamer, and the Fancy Pants, a small sailboat, in the Washington Channel May 15.

The board found that Daniel R. Ayers, owner of the Fancy Pants, who was thrown overboard in the collision, was guilty of violating the inland rules. He has been fined $250.

Pedestrian Hurt; Woman Learning To Drive Arrested

John R. Ryon, 31, of 322 Eighth street northeast, was treated at Sibley Hospital for broken ribs and possible internal injuries after he was run over by an automobile in Anacostia Park yesterday.

Police arrested Mrs. Blanche J. Stull, 408 Fourth street northeast, as the driver of the car and charged her with reckless driving. They said she was learning to drive, and was being instructed by Ruth Mingus, 18, of 515 Fifth street northeast.

Two occupants of a parked car were not seriously injured in a three-car accident at H and First streets northeast yesterday. George G. Dawson, 21, 1850 Ontario place northwest, was treated at Sibley Hospital for face lacerations; Dorothy E. Oliver, 20, 5623 First street northwest, was treated for abrasions on the nose and forehead. Police charged Junios C. Stiller, 21, 1793 Lanier place northwest, with leaving, after colliding, reckless driving and failing to change address on permit. They said his car bumped into the car occupied by Dawson and Miss Oliver, then hit a second parked car.

Lodges Stage Dinner Party For Fromberg

150 Members of Masonic, B'nai B'rith Groups Pay Honor to Judge.

More than 150 members of Argo Lodge, B'nai B'rith, and Benjamin Franklin Masonic Lodge attended a testimonial dinner last night at the Lafayette Hotel for Judge Joseph Fromberg, special assistant to the United States Attorney General.

Past president of District Grand Lodge No. 5, B'nai B'rith, Judge Fromberg was the first master of Benjamin Franklin Lodge No. 50, and is honorary vice president of the Zionist organization for the seaboard region.

Speakers last night who praised the honored guest included Alexander Holtzoff, assistant to the Attorney General; Allen Crenshaw, in charge of war risk litigation for the Department of Justice; Dr. I. A. Pelzman, president of Argo Lodge; and A. D. Abrams, past master of Benjamin Franklin Lodge.

Other speakers were Jesse Fein, president of Menorah Lodge; Sol Lichtenberg of Samuel Gompers Lodge; Simon J. Levine, secretary of the seabord Zionist region; Joseph J. Sherr, of the Benjamin Franklin Lodge, and Joseph A. Wilner, past president of the District Grand Lodge.

The affair was arranged by a committee headed by Joseph J. Sherr and Solomon Stichman.

Prize Offered For Symphony Concert Flag

Winning Design Will Become Official Pennant of Orchestra.

Officials of the National Symphony Orchestra Association yesterday announced a contest to select a flag to be flown from the concert shell at the orchestra's "sunset symphonies" this summer.

Winner of the contest, open to any one, will be awarded $25 in cash and a life membership in the United States Flag Association. Two other prizes of season tickets for the summer concerts will be given.

The prize-winning design will be made into the official flag of the National Symphony and will be displayed with the flag of the United States from the barge on the Potomac River from which the orchestra will play its summer series of symphonic programs.

All designs must be in the symphony office, 1111 Woodward Building, by noon, Wednesday, July 13. Presentation of the flag and an appropriate flag-raising ceremony are tentatively scheduled for the concert of July 20.

Members of the flag contest committee include Col. James A. Moss, U. S. A., president, United States Flag Association; Arthur E. DuBois, in charge of flag design, War Department; H. D. Ware, art director, Federal Housing Administration, and Laurence E. Rubel, member of the summer concerts committee.

Mrs. Roberts, 69, Succumbs Here

Mrs. Elizabeth French Roberts, lifelong Washington resident and widow of James O'Connor Roberts, former assistant commissioner of the Pension Officer, died yesterday at the home of her son-in-law, William Cammack Miller, 4401 Cathedral avenue northwest. She was 69.

Mrs. Roberts was active in All Saints' Episcopal Church. She leaves a brother, Raymond L. French, of Bridgeport, Conn.; a daughter, Mrs. William C. Miller, and a son, James O'Connor Roberts, both of Washington, and four grandchildren, Sarah Booth Miller, William C. Miller, jr., Richard Mansfield Roberts and James O'Connor Roberts, jr.

Funeral services probably will be held Saturday at her home.

Playground Pools Open.

Swimming pools at the Georgetown and Rosedale playgrounds opened the season yesterday and, between them, drew a capacity load of nearly 8,000 young swimmers. Between 3,500 and 4,000 children, swimming in shifts, visited each pool.

Bar Favors Strict Rules On Education

Votes to Urge 2-Year College Requirement for D. C. Practice.

The District Bar Association last night voted by an overwhelming majority to recommend two years of prelegal college education, "or its equivalent," as a requirement for admission to the District bar. Acceptance of the proposal by the District Court was considered certain.

The tightening of requirements would not apply to students enrolling in law schools prior to September 1, 1942. When the provision goes into effect the District will join 36 States which now demand at least two years of general college education, or similar training, for qualification to practice law.

Controversy Ended.

Last night's vote, taken at conclusion of a turbulent 2½-hour meeting at the Mayflower Hotel, brought to an end a prolonged controversy among members of the local bar association.

The resolution placed before the 500 lawyers with recommendation of the Committee on the Standards of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar was rendered less stringent by adoption of an amendment, introduced by Henry I. Quinn, which set up as a second alternative to two years of prelegal college education "a certificate from a committee of the court that the applicant possesses the equivalent of a two-year college education."

The only alternative to actual college attendance included in the original resolution was "a certificate from a college or university upon the list of schools accredited by the court that the applicant has passed an examination and has the equivalent of two years' prelegal college education." This provision remained in the final draft, as adopted by the association, but supplemented by the Quinn amendment.

Other Changes Voted Down

Efforts to modify the resolution still further were defeated, as members voted down one amendment which would have included two years of employment by the Government or in private industry as sufficient qualification for an applicant of 25 or older, and another amendment enabling the student to prove the equivalent of two years of general education either before or after his legal training.

The latter proposal was vigorously opposed by Paul Hannah, who declared that the importance of general education "depends largely on whether it is taken before or after legal education. Its greatest value is as preparation for legal training."

Leading the advocates of the resolution was Herbert M. Bingham, chairman of the committee on education and admissions. Bolitha J. Laws, recently named by President Roosevelt as one of the additional justices for the District Court, presided over the meeting.

The resolution ended as follows:

"Be it further resolved that the association recommend to the Court an amendment to the rules, effective immediately, that before any applicant shall be admitted to the Bar Examination, the Bar Examining Committee shall cause an exhaustive examination to be made by an appropriate agency as to his character, and a favorable report by such agency shall have been approved by such committee; and such applicant shall further have a character endorsement from some member of a bar association of the District of Columbia, practicing in the District of Columbia."

'America's Sweetheart' Visits D. C.

Underwood & Underwood.

One of Shirley Temple's first acts when she arrived in the Capital last night for a week-end visit was to unpack one of her favorite dolls. She is making an "off the record" motor tour of the United States with her parents.

'Looks Like Shirley Temple!' It Is—She's Here to See D. C.

Young Star Is Recognized in Hotel Lobby, Photographers Close Behind; She Wants to Visit Mrs. Roosevelt.

The most famous little girl in the world arrived in Washington last night, an hour after her bedtime.

"Why that looks just like Shirley Temple," said a startled matron in the Mayflower lobby as a blonde head bobbed behind elevator doors. It was Shirley, and the photographers weren't far behind.

Flashing what could conservatively be described as a million-dollar smile, 70 pounds of box-office magnetism settled onto a sofa for a siege of photography, while a roomful of guests, catching the spirit of the occasion, consumed soft drinks.

"This is the first time I've been back East," Shirley said, and she has laid out a stiff program of sight-seeing for her week-end in Washington. One friend she wants to look up is Mrs. Roosevelt, whom she met in California this winter. "She's grand," the youthful actress observed.

Shirley left Hollywood a month ago with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Temple, on a vacation tour between pictures, and has been running up an impressive score of "firsts." On Pike's Peak she saw her first snow, and the ascent by cog-train was her first railroad ride.

"I started out to keep a diary, but I haven't caught up since Bryce Canyon," Shirley confessed.

When a playful interviewer held out a cigarette to the 9-year-old star, she chose to regard the offer as directed to her doll, and declined demurely. "Marcia hasn't any bad habits," she said.

Marcia was bought at Marshall Field's in Chicago, and, as Mrs. Temple puts its, "quite a crowd had gathered before we could get out of these."

Safety Rally Lauds Hazen Traffic Plan

By Howard F. Wentworth.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, June 23.—Recent proposals of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen to seek a $25,000,000 bond issue for traffic control improvements in Washington were lauded today at the Commercial Investment Trust's second safety seminar.

The District's attempts to seek adequate funds for long-range highway safety planning were cited as an example of what must be done if the growing traffic problem is to be solved.

Dr. Miller McClintock, director of the Yale Bureau of Street and Traffic Research, stressed the wide lack of municipal funds as a handicap to community safety planning.

The 50 newspaper men who are guests of the C. I. T. Safety Foundation were offered a first-hand picture of highway modernization during a 150-mile tour of Manhattan and adjacent suburban sections.

The delegates were conducted over the same maze of dual highways recently visited by Commissioner Hazen, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Capt. H. G. Whitehurst, director of District highways.

They expressed amazement at the efficient manner in which traffic has been expedited and safeguarded in outlying districts.

The delegates, however, commented on the lack of correlated traffic facilities within New York.

But as a whole, said John W. Darr, trustee of the Safety Foundation, the visiting writers agreed to point out in their communities that traffic facility improvements in New York showed that congestion and the safety problem could be alleviated with proper administration.

Earlier in the seminar session, Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, director of the Northwestern University Traffic Safety Institute, blamed the country's police departments for failure to take the traffic safety problem seriously.

States' Officials Assent to U. S. Bank Program

Uniform Examination Plan Approved by Supervisors' Group.

The National Association of Supervisors of State Banks has approved the uniform bank examination program which the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Federal Reserve Board agreed upon last Tuesday, Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, disclosed yesterday.

Morgenthau made public a telefrom from William R. White, superintendent of banks of New York and president of the association.

White's message said:

"I have just received information from you of the agreement reached yesterday by all Federal bank supervisory agencies relative to uniform examinations. The program agreed upon is in accord with the one recently recommended by the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks. All essential details of the program, as outlined to me, have already been considered and approved by State bank supervisors at district meetings throughout the country."

The quick approval given by the State bank supervisors indicates very few important changes were made in the original document drawn up by the F. D. I. C., the Comptroller and the Treasury.

It provided a general liberalization of valuation of bank investments, disapproval of speculative trading in the bond market, requirements that banks maintain adequate valuation reserves against security accounts until losses have been wiped out, an amortization program, and carrying of high grade securities at cost by banks.

Approval of the program by the State groups makes acceptance of uniform examinations "unanimous," Morgenthau said. He expects President Roosevelt to take action "within a reasonable time."

Series of Thefts In Shops, Home Reported Here

A series of small thefts was reported to the police yesterday.

Jewelry and money, totaling $925 in value, were stolen from a home in the 2400 block Eighteenth street northwest, Annie V. Laing, the owner, told the police.

Marijuana Act's Passage Cheered

Civic and church leaders last night celebrated the passage of a Marijuana act for the District at a meeting in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the allied organizations of the District and the Anti-Cigarette Alliance. The chairman was the Rev. Thomas E. Boorde, pastor of the Anacostia Baptist Church.

Speakers included Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, of the Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Florence E. Marshall, Mrs. Ida Ramsey, president of the District W. C. T. U.; William V. Mahoney, executive secretary of the allied organizations; Lawrie J. Raymond Schmidt, general superintendent of the National Civic League; W. J. Tucker, of the Public Schools Association of the District; Paul Stahrmather, Miss Dorothy Williams, James P. Briggs and the Rev. Clifford Jope of the Ninth Street Christian Church.

Survey Adds $500,000 To Assessment Rolls

Frederick, Md., June 23 (AP).—Studies of Federal income tax returns by Frederick citizens will add between $500,000 and $800,000 in assessable securities to the city tax books, A. Mehrl Ecker, deputy clerk to the county commissioners, said today.

The securities are those on which the owners pay Federal taxes but which were not listed with the city or county for the local property tax. Similar studies by tax officials of Baltimore, the State and other localities are adding thousands of dollars to the tax rolls.

Investigation Opened In Hamilton Explosion

Hamilton, Va., June 23 (AP).—Officials sought today to determine the cause of a gasoline explosion which seriously burned Rudolph Fox, 30, a filling station operator, and caused $5,000 damage to the filling station and an adjoining barn.

A big Maxim Lowe band, Barnee-directed, will play at all Redskins games in Washington. Barnee's already composed the "Redskin March," packed with fighting aboriginal rhythm, and accepted with enthusiasm by George Marshall, as the victory tune of his Redskins.

P. S. Right after the big fight, Barnee dedicated a dance number to the luckless Maxie. It was "You Left Me Breathless."

Newly glorified and aureoled, the Rainbow Room of the Hamilton will debut on Friday, July 1. This is official and from Manager Stanley S. Gordon of the Hamilton, just back from Manhattan. Modernist, mirror and lighting decors will give chromatic excitement to the new Rainbow.

Al Norton has now been emceeing at the Lotus for six and a half years. An awfly long time for a fella with such a lot of the gypsy in him.

Marya and Martyn, swing-stepping at Lotus, say their present numbers are harder to do than the apparently muscle-cracking adagio which used to be their specialty.

Hi-Hat's Oscar is mighty proud of his latest importation. It's Rhine wine from Chile, smooth and cooling as the wine of the Rhineland. The answer is supposed to lie in the Chilean climate.

Answer to the vari-colored music of the new Emory Daugherty ork at Bambo Gardens is that the outfit has four arrangers. Ballad fixing is done by Sam Richardson and John Fachette; the hot "sending" stuff is the work of takeoff man" Joe Cornell, and floor show musical arrangements and done by Eddie Sauerwald.

Wanna see the cutest little boy soprano who ever chanted at St. John's? Look above for the pic of "Tiny" Meeker, who both thumps and sings bass on the Powhatan roof.

For the smartest gals in town we nominate Marya, dancing at the Lotus, and Evelyn Knight, singing at the King Cole room. Reason: Besides being fine little entertainers, they both make their own clothes. And when you see Marya's subtle white chiffon dance frock and Evelyn's new bridge tailleur, you'll agree they're both embryo Schiapperelis.

Chris Tremayne and Dio Data will say goodby to Mayfair tomorrow night. Dio has a Christie wave (the new kind that are cut in), but his was cut into his head in a motor accident. New Manhattan entertainers for Mayfair will arrive Monday.

Murals of Washington points of interest decorate Wardman's cocktail lounge. Of them Wardman's urbane young manager, E. D. (Johnny) Johnson, says, "Our guests don't have to go sight-seeing. They can just stay in the lounge and see all there is to see."

This "Flat Foot Flooge" is taking on the proportions of a major epidemic. They play it in the Mayflower Lounge with plentah swing, but only by request. (Did we detect a look of pain in Director Veo's eye?) The Three Dees out at the Show Boat tear into it like anything, bearing down on electric vibraphone effects. At Brinkley's the Jack Torry swingaroo-ers do it up brown with voice and instruments.

"All that a Latin-American needs to start an orchestra is a good vegetable garden," says Johnny Shaw of the Madrillon. You'll believe it when you see the collection of maracas, ghords and clavelitos Johnny uses to steam up rhumbas.

Victor Sampson, the college lad who'll greet you now at the Anchor Room, intends to become a professor. He's specializing in education and history at George Washington University.

Boy Lost in Mountains For 4 Days Found Safe

Rowe, N. Mex., June 23 (AP).—Naked, hungry, but unharmed, 4-year-old Timoteo Griego howled for his "mama" today as searchers found him wandering aimlessly in the rugged, brush-covered Glorietta Mountain country after being lost four days.

Timoteo suffered no ill effects save a few scratches and a sunburn, because he shed his clothes soon after starting traveling. Possemen said he must have covered 40 miles.

Dr. Newton Feted By Western Staff

The 40-year association of Dr. Elmer S. Newton with the faculty of Western High School was feted by members of the school staff last night at a banquet at Rixey Mansion Inn. Among the guests of honor were Mrs. Newton and Miss Grace Johnson, retired faculty member.

Dr. Newton, who joined the chemistry department of the school four decades ago, and has been principal since 1915, was presented with a gold wrist watch on behalf of the faculty.

Addresses were made by Miss P. Edna Thonssen and Robert S. Anderson, assistant principals; Norman J. Nelson, principal of Woodrow Wilson High School and Miss M. Roberta Wallace, of the science department.

Officers Chosen By Grand Council Of Royal Arcanum

Winchester, Va., June 23.—Dr. Raymond E. Kerlin, of Winchester, was elected grand chaplain of the grand council of Royal Arcanum of Virginia. Another Winchester resident, Taylor Barr, was elected to the executive committee of the grand council.

Other grand lodge officers elected were: Grand regent, M. L. Beeton, Lexington; grand vice regent, E. M. Hooker, Covington; grand orator, D. W. McNeil, Lexington; past grand regent, W. I. Rex, Richmond; grand secretary, C. V. Jones, Richmond; grand treasurer, Joseph L. Bickerstaff, jr., Richmond; grand guide, C. C. Hickman, Lexington; grand warden, E. W. Miller, Norfolk; grand sentry, S. W. George, Hopewell.

Trustees elected were Clarence B. Conner, Lexington, one year; W. J. E. Cox, jr., Buena Vista, two years; J. L. Burner, Woodstock, three years.

Runaway Motor Runs Into Porch, Baby Uninjured

A woman and her baby narrowly missed injury last night when an automobile hurtled to the porch of their home at College Park, Md.

The woman, Mrs. Peter Holler, was standing on the porch with the child in her arms when she saw the car sideswipe two other machines, including her own parked auto, and crash toward her. She barely managed to dodge inside the house in time to avoid being crushed.

Police said that the runaway auto was driven by the Rev. James G. Hanna, of Ohio. He was uninjured.

Luther League Selects Officers

Rural Retreat, Va., June 23 (AP).—Miss Frances Miller, of Shenandoah, entered upon a new term as president of the Luther League of Virginia today.

The seventeenth annual convention named Miss Edith Richardson, of Salem, vice president; Miss Marie McDaniel, of Norfolk, secretary; Richard Greiner, Rural Retreat, treasurer; and Bernard Wise, Blountville, Tenn., statistician.

George Hume Memorial To Be Unveiled Sunday

Fredericksburg, Va., June 23.—Descendants of George Hume, the man who surveyed the boundaries of the city of Fredericksburg, will unveil a tablet to his memory in St. George's Church here Sunday. The tablet will be unveiled at noon by Mrs. Milne-Hume, of Wedderburn, Scotland, whose husband was proprietor of Wedderburn Castle, ancestral estate of the Humes in Scotland.

It will be offered to the vestry by Col. Edgar Arskine Hume, U. S. Army.

Richmond to Be Host To 1,000 Optometrists

Richmond, Va., June 23 (AP).—Officials in charge of arrangements estimated today more than 1,000 optometrists throughout the Nation would gather here Sunday for the opening of the five-day congress of the American Optometric Association.

Leo C. Ransone, general chairman of the association's forty-first annual meeting, said presidents and secretaries of the several local associa-

Confirmed Dependents To Be Taken Off Relief

Saranac Inn, N. Y., June 23 (U.P.).—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman tonight called on welfare officials to remove "confirmed dependents" from New York's relief rolls to increase efficiency of relief administration.

The Governor told the annual conference of New York State public welfare officials to see that "the relief rolls of our communities are valid and that the rights of the taxpayer and the local and State corporate bodies are secure and protected."

Health Trailer Begins Tour; $2,750,000 Armory Sought Here

The Post is the only daily morning paper in W ashington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.

1 Health examination of children of pre-school age is under way in Prince Georges County, the Bureau of Child Hygiene "health bus," a trailer, facilitating the important work. Here Mrs. Francis Newkirk, of Lanham, registers her son, Charles, 2, with County Nurse Margaret Etowski, who records the case history before the examination begins.

2 After the case history is recorded, Charles is weighed by Nurse Etowski. The trailer was parked in the Lanham schoolyard, where parents brought their children.

3 Charles now enters the trailer, where the physical examination will be made. He is met at the door of the hospital-like vehicle by Nurse Helen Gillespie, who sends him to . . .

4 . . . Dr. Elizabeth Sherman, who listens to Charles' heart beat. The trailer clinic yesterday was open to children of Lanham, Seabrook and Glendale at its Lanham stop. Today it will move on to Muirkirk and Laurel for additional examinations.

5 Dr. Sherman announces that Charles is in good shape and sends him on to Dr. M. S. Baker, who gives Charles' teeth the once over and finds them sound. More than 3,300 children were examined last summer when the trailer traveled 7,000 miles and made approximately 200 stops. A wider area will be covered this year. The tour began May 2 in Cecil County.

To Whom It May Concern:

Wesley Ferrell, the Nats' famed practitioner of astrology, investigated Joe Louis' horoscope and then bet heavily when he found the signs of the Zodiac favored the Brown Bomber on the night of June 22 . . . After the fight he collected $50 wagers from Al Simmons and Goose Goslin, of the Nats . . . Another of Ferrell's $50 victims, is Gerald Walker of the White Sox . . . Max Schmeling paid $10,000 loss on the deal . . . The Nazis will break down no doors trying to get a peek at the movies showing their hero being punched into a protoplasmic mass.

POVICH.

A joint statement by the presidents of the American and National leagues on Saturday will announce the names of the players who have been chosen for the All-Star game July 6 . . . A movement is now underway to bring pressure on Manager Bill Terry to name Babe Ruth as one of the All-Star game coaches for the National League . . . Under a recent ruling, managers in both leagues are forbidden to use pitchers who have been named on the All-Star squads in the July 4 double-headers . . . The Cincinnati Club, host to the All-Star game, is entitled to keep all the profits from the concessions as its reward.

Johnny Vander Meer, who is slated to pitch at least three innings for the National Leaguers on July 6, dates his new-found success from the day last March when Lefty Grove gave him a pitching lesson . . . On a day when the Reds were playing the Red Sox at Durham, N. C., Grove took the wild rookie left-hander into the dressing room, and, for 15 minutes showed him how to let the ball loose . . . Grove detected that young Vander Meer was suffering from the same trouble he himself had experienced in his rookie days—letting the ball go too soon and failing to follow through with his delivery . . . The Reds have torn up Vander Meer's original contract and almost doubled his salary.

The Yankees are casting covetous eyes at Charley eller, who is maintaining a .415 average at Newark . . . If the American League race continues close, the Yanks will draft Keller . . . "Greater than Di Maggio" is Oscar Vitt's description of Keller as a ball player . . . And Vitt managed the former Maryland University outfielder at Newark last year . . . Keller had hit safely over an 11-game stretch until Montreal pitchers issued him three bases on balls.

Fabian Gaffke, Red Sox outfielder who has been unable to cash into the Vosmik-Chapman-Cramer outfield trio, is adopting a new tack . . . He is now trying out as a catcher and is getting plenty of encouragement from Manager Joe Cronin whose catching staff has been unsatisfactory . . . Rudy York made the transition from the outfield to catching for the Tigers, but his catching sins are easily overlooked on account of his hitting . . . Gaffke must blossom as a better catcher than York, for he doesn't compare to the big Tiger as a hitter.

Zeke Bonura's feat of reaching across the plate with his bat and refusing to take a deliberate base on balls matches Al Simmons' stunt of a few years ago when he was with the White Sox . . . A St. Louis pitcher was purposely passing Simmons and the infielders were at ease . . . The first baseman was idly talking to the second baseman midway between the bases when Simmons reached out and pushed a hit down the first base line.

Sammy West, rated as one of the better fielding outfielders in the big leagues for the past decade, was one of the worst when he broke in with the Washington club . . . But in the first month of the 1926 season he began to earn the admiration of the fans . . . The transformation followed daily practice sessions spent by West with Tris Speaker, who was then with the Nats . . . Speaker taught West how to break on a fly ball and other niceties of outfield play.

Buddy Lewis is on the road to something . . . He's smoking cigarettes . . . Cecil Travis, a nonsmoker, received two cartons of a popular brand for a radio talk at Comiskey Park today . . . Cigarette smokers are anathema to Al Simmons, who won't stay in the same room with 'em . . . Manager Bucky Harris bunched Zeke Bonura today on the theory that Zeke, in his anxiety to make good before Chicago fans, tightened up and tried too hard, with the usual poor results.

The Saturday Evening Post shortly will publish an article in defense of the National League which will be in the nature of a reply to Tom Meany's "The New Minor League—The National" . . . Roy Stockton will author the new piece, which will be entitled "The National League—The People's Choice." It will be based on the fans' appreciation of smarter, tighter baseball, which the National League boasts aboutp laying.

Max to Stay In Hospital For 3 Weeks

Anny Ondra, His Actress Wife, Will Leave Soon to Visit Him.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, June 23.—The scene shifted abruptly today from the prize ring to the hospital, where Germany's Max Schmeling, victim of the crushing fists of Joe Louis, lay with abone in his back fractured and his hopes of fistic conquest shattered . . .

Thus, melodramatically, did the shortest, most one-sided fight in heavyweight championship history develop into the "battle of the cracked back," climaxing the one-round knockout of the challenger and overshadowing negotiations to match the titleholder with another former champion and former victim—Max Baer.

Schmeling's injury, although not as serious as believed at first, was diagnosed as a fracture of the left transverse process of the third lumbar vertebra. The transverse process is a thumb-like knob of bone sprouting from each side of the vertebrae and serving as a peg to which the back muscles are attached.

The possibility of a hemorrhage likewise caused early apprehension, but no complications developed. The third of three bulletins issued at the Polytechnic Hospital indicated, at 4:30 p. m., that Schmeling was in no danger, but that he "must remain under observation for several days."

Third Match Talked.

Schmeling called for a shave while his associates, including Joe Jacobs, as American spokesman, forecast a rapid recovery and talked optimistically of "demands" for a third match with Louis.

The German's friends and handlers did not share the general belief that the knockout put Schmeling out of the heavyweight picture. They attributed his defeat primarily to his being caught off guard by the fury of Louis' first punching blast, and his collapse to the effects of a right-hand smash near the left kidney.

This punch, aimed seemingly for the heart, landed on Schmeling's side as he turned to "body block" the champion's attack. It was the blow that the German said paralyzed him.

Slow-motion pictures today showed that Louis landed not one but two terrific blows over the kidney. They were followed by punches to the body and head—all before Max went down for the first of three trips to the canvas.

Break Laid to Fall.

Medical men suggested the broken bone was caused by one of Schmeling's falls to the floor. The challenger was "out on his feet," clinging to the ropes, before being knocked down. He was so far gone that he did not have the resourcefulness to take longer counts, on either of his first two knockdowns, and his handlers tossed in the towel to interrupt the count on the third knockdown.

The charge that the kidney blows landed by Louis were "foul" was squelched. On behalf of the German, Joe Jacobs denied there was any claim of foul. Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the State Athletic Commission, also was emphatic in saying no protest had been made, but ordered a full medical report.

Commissioner Bill Brown explained:

"A punch to the kidney is not a foul blow if delivered from out in the clear, as in this case. The only time a kidney punch is illegal is when it is deliberate, as when the men are in a half clinch. Any punch delivered from out in the clear is a legal punch if it lands anywhere above the belt. When a fighter lets a punch go his opponent may twist or turn and so receive the blow in the kidney, but that's not the puncher's fault."

So devastating was the triumph of Louis, so complete his revenge for the 12-round beating he took from the same man two years ago, that Schmeling appeared only a remote figure in future heavyweight prospects.

What happened to Schmeling coincided with what nearly 100 per cent of the experts predicted would happen when the pair met in 1936. He was outclassed so completely that the injury with which he emerged only served to emphasize Louis' superiority as well as his punching prowess.

Promoter Mike Jacobs plans to match Louis for his fifth title defense here in September with Max Baer. Louis knocked out Baer three years ago, in four rounds, in a match that, like last night's spectacle,

Joe Shows How It Was Done . . . . . Mrs. Schmeling Set to Sail

Budge Wins But New Ace Steals Show

Owen Anderson Surprises With Drive in Singles Play.

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, England, June 23.—Don Budge returned to his incomparable best on the center court today, but a fighting little fair-haired American, Owen Anderson, of Los Angeles, was the story of the day at the all-England tennis championships.

Beaten at the baseline by the stinging drives of Ferenc Puncec, of Yugoslavia, two sets down before he became accustomed to the pace, Anderson began storming the net and carried the fifth-seeded player deep into the fifth set before yielding, 7—5, 6—3, 4—6, 3—6, 6—4.

Anderson, a senior at U. C. L. A., and ranked eighteenth in the United States, trailed at 2—5 in the final set, but came within a net cord of squaring the score at 5—5, and then went down only throught sheer exhaustion.

Helen Jacobs Wins.

Budge, evidently inspired by a capacity crowd around the center court, at last deserted the baseline and raced all over the court to beat the gigantic Irishman, G. Lyttleton Rogers, 6—0, 7—5, 6—1. Rogers' lightning services aced the red-headed Californian seven times in the second set, but that was the only time Budge was not in complete control of his third round opponent.

Helen Jacobs, former champion, who collapsed yesterday, also came back to something like her normal form. Still pale and taking nourishment between games, Helen fought bravely against shrewd Joan Ingram, of England, outlasting here to win, 8—7, 6—3.

Altogether, Americans took part in 14 matches, winning 8 and losing 6, as the fourth round bracket was filled in the women's singles and only three matches remained in the third round of the men's individual competition.

Bad Day for "Ja Ja."

The only setback that really caused a stir, however, was the defeat of the third seeded combination of Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, and Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, women's titleholder from Poland, in the second round of the mixed doubles. They fell before the English pair of Joan Saunders and Ronald Shayes, 6—3 6—2. Mako, however, won his third round singles match, defeating Henderson Brooks, England, 6—2, 6—3, 5—7, 6—2.

"Ja Ja" had a pretty bad day for she also lost in the women's doubles. With Mrs. M. A. Thomas as her partner, the Polish girl lost to the American team of Sarah Pal-

Vander Meer Is Shelled But Wins 8th

Cascarella Saves Game as Reds Triumph 8 to 5.

New York, June 23 (AP).—Young Johnny Vander Meer was clubbed from the mound for the first time in seven starts today, but his mates' early hitting and Joe Cascarella's relief pitching was enough to save his eighth straight victory as the Cincinnati Reds topped the Giants, 8 to 5.

The win gave the Reds the series, two games to one, and sliced the Giants' National League lead to a slim game and a half over the Rhinelanders, who returned to second place since the Chicago Cubs were idle.

After pitching a shutout through the first five innings, "Double No-Hit" Johnny began serving up his "boom boom" ball to the league leaders. Sambo Leslie tagged him for a homer in the sixth and Mel Ott clouted his seventeenth of the year with a mate aboard in the seventh, featuring a three-run rally. In the eighth, the Giants drove both Vander Meer and Gene Schott to the showers, but managed to score only one run as Cascarella hurried in to put out the fire.

Val Goodman's eighteenth homer of the year started the Reds out in front with a two-run lead in the first inning. They added three more in the third, before Hal Schumacher gave way to Bill Lohrman in the fourth.

The Giants finished the game under protest after a dispute in the ninth, but it appeared the protest should have been directed toward their own shortstop, Rowdy Richard Bartell. The bases were loaded and one was out. Craft sent a pop fly to short, and Bartell let the ball drop to the ground, obviously intending to try for a double play. The batter was automatically out on the play.

As soon as Bartell dropped the ball, Goodman, who was on third, set out for home, but Bartell, instead of tossing home, pegged to third. Since no force play was involved at that point, all hands were safe, Goodman's run counted, and the Giants' argument was given the cold shoulder by the umpires.

Walper Selected For P.G.A.Tourney

Baltimore, June 23.—Leo Walper, Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion the past two years, was named the fourth representative to the National P. G. A. championship at Shawnee-on-the-Delaware from the Middle Atlantic district in a wire from the national headquarters yesterday.

George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood, pro, won the fourth place last week in the sectional qualifying rounds, but as his dues were four days late arriving in the national office on May 20, his entry was not accepted.

District's $2.20 Fight Fans Would Kick on Schmeling Bout

Local Ring Addicts Would Be Howling 'Fake,' and They Wouldn't Pay $30 for the Privilege.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Looking at it from another angle, Joe Louis' victory over Max Schmeling wasn't a great battle by any stretch of the imagination. It wasn't even a fight, but merely Louis demonstrating his punching prowess before an awed, hushed audience of 80,000 expectant fans.

Let Detective Sergt. Dick Cox stand in the window of "Cy" McDonald's sporting goods store and punch the bag around and you have a fair idea of how Louis manhandled Schmeling. And just as Cox is an expert on the light-bag, so Louis was an expert on Schmeling's cringing carcass. The only difference was that the German's body didn't supply the rat-a-tat-tat-tat-tat of the bag hitting the backboard. He made a duller, mushier thud as he landed.

And a punching bag would have as much chance against Cox as the German had against Louis. The sleuth is an expert on the bag, and Wednesday night Louis was an expert on Max. A bag, as a matter of fact, might have a better chance against Cox. He could slip and get conked on the head by a rebound. But the German didn't have a ghost of a chance. The first bell was the last of his career—the death knell.

Give Washington fans the same kind of a performance for $2.20 tops, not the $30 Herr Jacobs extracted from his customers, and they'd still be howling "fake," "dive," etc., etc., and demanding their money back. This writer, for one, wouldn't blame them. He was disappointed by the action, or lack of it, and the lads who paid to get in were justified in "beefing."

You can't take anything away from Louis because it wasn't a good fight. He came well prepared for the evening's work and followed instructions to the letter. If Schmeling failed to live up to his part of the debate it wasn't the titleholder's fault. He couldn't stand out there and hit himself on the chin a couple of times to satisfy the fans' craving for action and blood.

A fight is only as good as the action it provides. The distance it goes, or time it lasts, is secondary. The Firpo-Dempsey brawl is a case in point. Fans don't mind spending money to see one like that, but they do object, and rightfully, to putting up hard-earned kale for one like this last.

Man of the Month

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties' "Man of the Month.")

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

Five Nats share in the latest award of points in the Man of the Month contest following yesterday's impressive performance at Chicago, where Dutch Leonard shut out the White Sax, 12-0.

To Leonard, four points, because his eight-hit performance was one of the finest-pitched games of the season, and because he contributed two important hits to the Nats' attack.

To Sammy West, two points, because he made three two-baggers, all with men on base, and figured in five of the Nats' runs.

To Buddy Lewis, two points, because he hit two singles and a triple and figured in five of the Nats' runs.

To Cecil Travis, one point, because he hit two singles and a double in four official times at bat and played a spectacular game in the field.

To Buddy Myer, one point, because he hit a home run into the bleacher seats with a man on base in the sixth inning.

Miss Anny Doesn't Like Fighting Any More.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 23.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler sent a message of sympathy today to Anny Ondra, blonde actress wife of Max Schmeling, and Propaganda Minister Goebbels sent a bouquet of flowers.

The press carried no comment from either man, however, on the one-round defeat of Schmeling, Germany's boxing idol, by Joe Louis in New York last night.

Miss Ondra tearfully announced she had booked passage to go to Schmeling in a New York hospital with a back injury suffered in the fight, and was awaiting only a telephone call from Max before arranging definitely for the trip.

"It's terrible that punches like that are permitted," she said. "I didn't know they were allowed. I don't think this is sport any longer, but rather a fight for life. Thank God his spine isn't injured and he will not be lamed permanently."

Miss Ondra, who never has seen Max fight, went to bed last night without hearing the fight by radio. It began at 3 a. m. Berlin time. When informed of the outcome she burst into tears.

"I didn't know whether I was alive or dead when I received the news," she said later.

A's Defeat Browns, 7-1

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 23.—Mel Mazzera scored the Browns' only run with a ninth-inning homer and spoiled Lynn Nelson's chance for a shutout, but the Philadelphia Athletics today easily won the rubber game of a series of three, 7 to 1.

Oler Is Winner In Tennis Event

Crowding his opponent at the net and ramming home numerous kill shots when needed most, C. B. Oler, of New York City, yesterday won the American Institute of Electrical Engineers Tennis Tournament, defeating H. d'Harcourt, 6—4, 6—3. The match was played at Congressional Country Club.

By his victory Oler annexed the handsome Mershon silver trophy. Another Mershon trophy went to T. A. Rudd, also of New York, who defeated T. Irwin of Atlanta, Ga., 4—3, in the golf tournament.

Doubles tennis finals yesterday were postponed because of rain. They will be played this morning at 8 o'clock at Columbia, with A. O. White and L. W. Bates both of this city, engaging S. B. Crary, Schenectady, N. Y., and R. B. Hubbard, Denver, Colo.

In the mixed doubles Mr. and Mrs. A. O White defeated Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Prince, of Philadelphia, 6—2, 6—4.

Myer, Lewis, West, Travis Lead Attack

Knuckler Scatters Eight Hits as Mates Slug for 16 Blows.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 23.—The happy union of some superb pitching by Dutch Leonard and some solid socking by the remainder of the Nats' cast today produced a 12-0 victory for the Washington club over the White Sox.

While Leonard and his knuckle ball held the Chicago athletes in complete subjection, the Nats went on a hitting binge, scoring various amounts of runs in five different innings. At the finish they had 16 safe wallops to show for their efforts against the Chicago right handers, Johnny Whitehead and Frank Gabler.

Hitting Is for Distance.

The Nats were hitting for distance today. All afternoon they were rattling the fences with long wallops. They showered the premises with six two-baggers and two triples. And Buddy Myer checked in with a sixth-inning home run.

Sammy West, reawakening from a protracted sleep, today developed a fetish for two-baggers. He slammed out three in succession to play a strong part in the Nats' offensive. Budy Lewis and Al Simmons authored triples.

But it was Leonard's pitching that was the chief item in the triumph of the Washington Club. The big, beefy fellow whose recent failures had clouded his sensational beginning with the Nats, was back in command today. His knuckler was poison to the Sox.

Only One Reaches Third.

He gave up eight hits, but he was smart about it. Only in one inning did he allow more than a single blow. Only one man reached third base against him, and never after the first inning was he in serious danger of losing his shutout. In that first inning, Hayes led off with a two-bagger, but the next three batters could not get the ball out of the infield, two of 'em popping up.

And Leonard was no drawback to the Nats' attack, either. He whacked out one of these six doubles to launch a three-run uprising in the fourth, and later in the day he connected for a single.

Big Whitehead had a horrible time of it in the 3 1-3 innings he lasted. He struck out George Case to start th game and then the Nats reached him for two runs. After West walked, Lewis pumped a single to center, and Simmons brought West home from third with a long fly. Travis scored Lewis with a single to center and Whitehead escaped with only two runs scored against him, because, after Myer walked, Mike Kreevich dashed up against the centerfield fence for a spectacular catch of Jimmy Wasdell's terrific hoist to the 440-foot barrier.

Scoring Bee in Sixth.

Leonard started the trouble for Whitehead in the fourth with a clean double to left. Then, in rapid succession, West doubled to right and Lewis lashed a triple against the rightfield wall, Simmons' terrific fly to Kreevich greeted the entrance of Gabler, scored Lewis with the third run of the inning and the Nats had a 5-0 lead.

They made it round figures—10 to 10—in the sixth against Gabler. A walk to Case started the action and then the following happened: West doubled against the rightfield wall, Lewis sacrificed, Simmons' triple against the centerfield fence, Travis singled to left and Buddy Myer drove in the fourth and fifth runs of the inning, with a sock into the lower deck of rightfield.

The Nats picked up a run in the seventh and another in the eighth, but with Leonard out there pitching the way he was, every run after that first one was as superfluous as that towel they threw into the ring for Schmeling the other night. Like Schmeling, the White Sox were licked long before that.

Dave Crowley Wins.

Liverpool, England, June 23 (AP).—Dave Crowley, of London, tonight won the British lightweight championship by outpointing the titleholder, Jimmy Walsh, in a 15-round bout. Crowley weighed 131, Walsh 134.

Two Women Share Honors In Golf Play

Mrs. Dent Ties Mrs. Sullivan in Meet at Manor.

Mrs. Malcolm A. Dent, of Beaver Dam, and Mrs. W. E. Sullivan, of Army and Navy, newcomers to Washington women's tournament golf, tied for the Women's District Golf Association duffers' championship yesterday at Manor Club, posting scores of 70.

As both posted lower scores than the rest of the field, they could have tossed for this prize, with the other taking the championship. Both, however, elected to fight it out in a playoff for the main prize. Their decision gave the low gross award to Mrs. Charles Vaile, of Kenwood, who toured the course in 93.

Date of the playoff has not yet been settled, but will be either Monday or Tuesday.

Mrs. W. G. McCreery, of Manor, and Mrs. W. White, Chevy Chase, tied for third honors. Mrs. McCreery's score was 100-28—72; and her rival's, 92-26—72. Comely Jerry Weible, Army and Navy, was next with 99-26—73. Sixth place went to Mrs. R. E. Burke, of Congressional, who posted a 95-21—72.

Three were deadlocked at 75's—Mrs. Doran Platt, Mrs. George Jones, and Mrs. Frank Helan, all of the host club. Also stalemated by 77's were Mrs. Charles Vaile, Kenwood; Barbara Simons and Mrs. W. F. Beaseley, Manor.

Mrs. C. P. Medley, of Indian Spring, turned in a gross card of 75-11—64, to capture the low net award for low handicap players which was played over the short inside line. Low gross honors in this event went to Mrs. Betty Meckley, of the same club, who defeated Marion Brown, Middle Atlantic champion, in an 18-hole play-off after tying at 73 on the par 66 course. Mrs. Meckley registered a 69 in winning, to her opponent's 73, after the eventual winner tied up the match at 36-all, with a birdie four on the par-five ninth.

Mrs. Merrill Lord, Columbia, and Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Beaver Dam, tied for second low net honors with 66's.

Harvard Favored Over Yale Crew On Thames Today

New London, Conn., June 23 (U.P.). On the basis of a series of stunning spring victories over the best crews in the East, Harvard tonight was a slight favorite over Yale for their seventy-sixth annual 4-mile boat race on the Thames River tomorrow evening.

Both varsities are undefeated for the first time since the days of six-oared competition. Thus this year's resumption of the oldest rowing rivalry in the world will determine the strongest crew in the East.

Considered a better eight than that which smashed the upstream course record by beating Yale a length last year, Harvard has defeated every major crew in the East. The Crimson won five races, while Yale's spring campaign, shorter than usual, consisted of only two.

Posts a 136 For Victory By 11 Strokes

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pikesville, Md., June 23.—Otto Greiner, crowned Middle Atlantic champion only last Saturday, scored a sensational four under par total of 136 here today over the Suburban Course to win the Maryland State Junior title by an 11-stroke margin over the host club ace, Nathan Kaufman, jr., his closest competitor.

After playing the nines in 36-33 in the morning for a 69 and a two-stroke lead over Kaufman, Greiner turned on the heat over the second round, cut two strokes off his previous total over the par 35 front nine with a 34 and duplicated his back nine 33 for a 67 and the winning 136 total. The score boosted his favorite role in the State championship starting tomorrow at Rodgers Forge.

Bobby Brownell, Manor, who lost to Greiner in the Middle Atlantic finals, led the Washington contingent in the junior play with a 151 total, 15 strokes behind the winner. Nine three-putt greens cost the Duke University student many precious strokes.

Ross Has a 153.

David Ross, Capitol Club of Glen Echo, trailed with 75—78, 153, and tied A. Johnson, of Forest Park for the trophy in the 16 and 17 year class. Johnson won the play-off, over the five-hole route, with a one over par total 20, while Ross was a stroke higher.

George Taylor, Rolling Road, finished first in the 14-15-year class with a 85—82, 167, while the under 14 group was led by Travis Houser, Elkridge, with 93—93, 186.

Trailing Brownell, defending champion, and Ross, among the Washington representatives was Earl Skinker, Columbia, with 75—84, 159, Thomas Fitzgerald, Kenwood, 76—85, 161, and Ed Bodnar, Beaver Dam, with 88—93, 181.

Greiner's total, a record in this tourney and one of the lowest ever scored in the counrty in a junior event, was marked by six birdies, and only twice in the 36 holes of play was he over perfect figures, on the sixth hole of the first round and fourth of the afternoon trip.

The champion played the back nine in duplicate figures each time, the first six holes in as many consecutive 4's, and finishing with three 3's.

Kaufman Falters.

Brownell carded three 38's and a 37, on the out nine of the afternoon round, in a futile attempt to defend his crown against the sub-par stroking of the youngster who looks to be the new Maryland junior champion by Sunday afternoon.

Kaufman, in second place, dropped back on the second trip with a 76 after his 1-over par 71.

Ross had trouble on the front nine, playing it in 41 strokes twice, but came back in 34 and 37 for his 153 total. Skinker played the first nine in 36, then took a 39 and finished with a pair of 42's.

Thirty-seven entrants, a majority from Baltimore, participated in the sixteenth annual tournament. Greiner finished second to Brownell last year at Beaver Dam by a single stroke

O'Mahoney Will Wrestle At Stadium Next Week

Danno O'Mahoney, one of the few men holding decisions over Jim Londos, will be the featured attraction next Thursday night at Griffith Stadium. Promoter Joe Turner has not been able to sign an opponent for the Irishman thus far, but expects to obtain one today or tomorrow. Turner is endeavoring to get the best available.

Yankees Defeat Indians, 8 to 6; Gehrig and Dickey Hit Homers

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 23.—The New York Yankees trounced the Indians, 8 to 6, today to salvage the final game of their four-game series and climb back into second place in the American League standings.

The combination of a 14-hit attack, featuring homers by Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey, and steady pitching by Bump Hadley, making his 1938 debut as a starting flinger, proved too much for the tribe.

The Yanks didn't come out without a scare, however, for the Indians, after being held to six hits and one run through the first eight frames, found the range in the ninth, clubbed Hadley to the showers and scored five runs before "Grandma" Johnny Murphy came in to stop the rally.

The defeat left the Indians with a 3½-game lead over both the Yanks and the Boston Red Sox, whose defeat by Detroit today dropped them out of second place by two percentage points.

Pacing the Yanks' attack on Denny Galehouse and two other Tribe elbowers were Red Rolfe, with two doubles and two singles, and Gehrig, whose eleventh homer of the season and two singles, drove in three runs.

Nats Rest Today Then Face Browns

Chicago, June 23.—With five victories and five defeats to show for their ten games on the current road trip, the Nats tonight moved into St. Louis for a three-game series with the Browns.

Tomorrow they have an off day, but will meet the Browns in a single game on Saturday and a double-header Sunday.

Outfielder George Case, injjured when he crashed into the right-field wall in Chicago two days ago, made his reappearance in the Nats' lineup today. Case made a rapid recovery, to the delight of Manager Bucky Harris.

Greenberg, York and Laabs Hit Homers.

Detroit, June 23 (AP).—Home runs by Hank Greenberg, Rudy York and Chester Laabs aided the Detroit Tigers today in a 10-to-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox, their third win in the four-game series.

Detroit's biggest inning was the third, when York doubled with the bases loaded. The Boston runs came in the second, Johnny Marcum singled in John Peacock, and was scored by Joe Vosmik.

Marcum was driven from the mound in the eighth by two home runs and a double, and was replaced by Lee Rogers.

Cards Nose Bees, 2 to 1

Rookie Errickson Falters After a Good Job.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 23.—Dick Errickson, Boston Bees' rookie right-hander, shut out the St. Louis Cardinals for eight innings in his first major league start today, only to weaken in the ninth and pass in the tying run, the Red Birds going on to take the odd game of the series, 2 to 1.

Errickson, who comes from Vineland, N. J., had allowed only five hits going into the ninth, and victory was within his grasp after the Bees forged ahead in the eighth, 1 to 0.

In the ninth, however, with one out, Enos Slaughter doubled to center, the ball taking a bad bounce over Cooney's head. Medwick was hit by a pitched ball, and after Padgett flied out, Pepper Martin walked to fill the bases. Mize, batting for Gutteridge, drew a pass, forcing in the tying run, and Tom Reis relieved Errickson.

Sports Postscripts

Fight aftermath—Most delighted and surprised person in the office when Louis' startling knockout was announced last night was Financial Editor Edward McSweeney, who tried in vain to sell a first round "pool" ticket he drew on Louis . . . Failure in his financial venture netted him $7.50 . . . Schmeling must have been describing the fight when he yelled "foul" . . . Imagine paying $30 for a ringside seat and then seeing something like that! . . . As usual the "experts" took a beating on their selections . . . Richard Vidmer, new Post writer, however, was closest, having picked Louis to win before the fourth round . . .

Playing his last tournament golf of the season, Dodger Coach Babe Ruth was eliminated in the semi-final round of the Leewood play in New York Wednesday . . . Johnny Druze, Fordham's brilliant captain and All-American end nominee last season, has signed a one-year contract with the Brooklyn (football) Dodgers . . . The first heat of an elimination series to determine the fastest runner in the National League was held prior to the Pirate-Dodger night game the other evening . . . Ernie Koy was the winner, defeating Arky Vaughan, Johnny Dickshot, Gil Brack, Lee Handley and Goody Rosen . . . Vaughan was second, beaten by 2 yards . . . At this game Max Baer and Robert Taylor occupied the same box and spent most of the evening autographing . . . Kiki Cuyler's first-inning homer was the first hit the Dodgers had made in a home night game . . . You remember what Vander Meer did to 'em in their initial nocturnal venture . . . Johnny Allen, Tribe pitcher who often has been described as "yellow" by Yankee Manager McCarthy, received credit for one of the two victories Cleveland recorded over the champions in a doubleheader Wednesday . . . The Fitzsimmons-Corbett revivals in the National League are over at least temporarily . . . Corbett was sent to Baltimore in the trade that returned Weintraub to the major leagues . . .

Latest in a series of wild rumors that have clung like leeches to the Dizzy Dean deal is that Commissioner Landis will force the Cardinals to return to the Cubs that check for $185,000 unless Dean returns to form inside of two weeks . . . The check incidentally, is as yet uncashed . . .

Helen Wills Moody, as usual, drew a crowd though she was playing in the mixed doubles with the French veteran, Jean Borotra. In a delightfully informal match, with the crowd fighting to get places in the stand, they eliminated Roderich Menzel, giant Czechoslovakian star and Mrs. P. Howard, of England, 6—3, 6—4.

Tennis Deadline Today.

Entries for the District tennis championship tourney, which opens Sunday, must be submitted to Buddy Goeltz, tennis pro at Columbia Country Club, no later than 6 p. m. today. Entries may be telephoned to Goeltz. Barney Welsh, Dooley Mitchell and Baron Bill Breese are entered, and there is a possibility Gilbert Hunt may compete.

Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten popular brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

Smokers' Test showed Vintage Tobacco was easier on your breath

WHITE OWLS are definitely easier on your breath—scientific tests proved it. There's a good reason, too. Every White Owl always has a Vintage-tobacco filler. Nature—not artificial factory processing—made this tobacco exceptionally mild, mellow.

We maintain a vast crop-inspection system—the only known organization of its kind—to locate our Vintage tobacco. Even in Vintage years, we classify all filler tobacco into seven grades—and buy only tobacco of the quality of the top three for use in Vintage White Owls.

Switch to White Owls today and taste the rich Vintage tobacco . . . then notice how quickly your breath clears.

Philigal Captures Tavern Purse, Feature at Charles Town Track

Backstretch Drive Brings Her Victory

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 23.—G. T. Strother's Philigal, operating in the role of a $5.80 favorite, turned in a good effort to account for the Goose Creek Tavern Purse, the outstanding race on today's program. The 3-year-old daughter of Philippi came to the imaginary wire a length and a half in advance of Claude Feltner's Morning Flight with Schley Buck third and eight lengths away from second money.

Morning Flight delayed the start and finally was ordered to the outside of the gate by Starter White. Roving Eye and Dark Outlook were first to show in front. Hacker kept Philigal out of trouble going to the first turn, and on the backstretch drove her to the front. She was never headed thereafter. Morning Flight, in the meantime, was away poorly but Root went to work and finally went into second place. However, in the stretch run his mount weakened while Philigal kept on her way.

Tweeety, with Leon Garrett riding, carried the light weight of the first race to victory. The On Watch filly ran head and head with Boro Poker to the stretch and then drew out gradually to bring a $25.20 mutuel to her scattered backers. Mabel Beyond was third, ahead of Canson, the favorite.

Take Off, an 11-year-old gelding, turned back the opposition in the second race and another good price was displayed. This time $14 was hung out for those who backed the mount of Mannie Berg. Lady Buck was second and Poll Parrot third in the short sprint.

—Jockey Eddie Benham, attempting a comeback at this meeting, rode a good race and scored a remarkable victory on Mrs. V. S. McClintock's Sea Boy in the third race. Sea Boy was a dozen lengths behind the top horse and apparently beaten leaving the backstretch, but he came with one of the fastest moves of the session here to catch Wanocha in the last inches.

Lovely Amelia, under Beverly Hacker's good ride, took the fourth race. Hacker did not hurry the mare in the early running, but she gathered momentum to circle the leaders, and finished a length and a half in front of Easter Herald, with Jack Low a surprise third. The winner was a $5 favorite.

Trainer Everett Brining saddled the first and second horses in The Rumsey, better known as the sixth race. Mrs. G. Hutchins, Aella and Sylvia G., teamed as the favorite, were the winner and runner-up in the field of seven. Third money went to Caidon. The winning entry paid more to place than to win. A $4 first place mutuel was displayed with $4.20 going to those who backed the pair to be second.

*Two-dollar mutuels paid—TAKE OFF, $14.00, $7.20, $3.40; LADY BUCK, $11.80, $4.60; POLL PARROT, $2.60.

TAKE OFF, going in improved form, was hustled to front at once, drew out and held LADY BUCK safe while under strong handling. LADY BUCK was forced hard while closest to pace and showed good effort. POLL PARROT closed with good energy. CAUTIOUS BO raced on outside to stretch and came with good speed in final test.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:37. Off 3:40. Winner, Mrs. V. S. McClintock's ch. c. (3), by Sepoy—Pen. Trained by F. Johnson. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:22 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEA BOY, $23.60, $6.80, $4.20; WANOCHA, $4.80, $3.00; NEEDMORE, $2.60.

SEA BOY, not hurried in early stages, rallied when placed to drive and came with a great rush to nip WANOCHA in final jump. WANOCHA was first away, drew out, shook off NEEDMORE, but tired badly in closing sixteenth. NEEDMORE was hard ridden and had no excuses. FOREIGN SHORE closed with good energy.

Daily Double, Take Off and Sea Boy, Paid $130.20.

FOURTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:06. Off 4:06½. Winner, Mrs. M. Knierlem's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LOVELY AMELIA, $5.00, $3.60, $2.80; EASTER HERALD, $4.20, $3.40; JACK LOW, $13.60.

LOVELY AMELIA was taken into rail to save ground to backstretch, went to outside for racing room, improved position gradually to take command and held away to end. EASTER HERALD set good pace and closed gamely, but was no match for winner. JACK LOW was closest to pace to stretch and weakened. GLOWING COAL had no excuse.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. The Goose Creek Tavern. For 3-year-olds. Start good for all but Morning Flight from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:33. Off 4:36½. Winner, G. T. Strother's b. f. (3), by Philippi—Janedith B. Trained by J. Arthur. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:18 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHILIGAL, $5.20, $3.40, $2.60; MORNING FLIGHT, $3.20, $2.60; SCHLEY BUCK, $3.00.

PHILIGAL, nicely handled, went to front with strong move on backstretch and was not seriously menaced thereafter. MORNING FLIGHT, taken to outside for start and off poorly, moved up steadily, but was held safe in final sixteenth. SCHLEY BUCK was away poorly, was taken up when in close quarters in opening furlongs and rallied mildly upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:01. Off 5:03½. Winner, Mrs. G. Hutchins' ch. m. (6), by Chatterton—Enslaved. Trained by E. Brining. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:17 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AELLA (entry), $4.00, $4.20, $3.40; SYLVIA G. (entry), $4.20, $3.40; CAIDON, $8.60.

AELLA, forwardly placed and closest to pace of CAIDON, forged to front when called on and was not seriously menaced while kept to pressure. SYLVIA G. was eased along while improving position and came with rush in closing sixteenth. CAIDON was used up setting pace under hustling ride. HURDY GURDY showed an even effort.

SEVENTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:27. Off 5:30½. Winner, S. Hall's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MONOLOGUE, $27.20, $14.80, $5.80; KENNER, $16.00, $5.40; TULEYRIES LAD, $2.80.

MONOLOGUE, going in greatly improved form, disposed of KENNER while setting pace, drew out and held away to finish. KENNER tired after forcing pace during early stages. TULEYRIES LAD was carelessly handled and closed gamely. PRINCE KHAYYAM was poorly ridden.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:37. Off 5:39. Winner, P. Selections at Charles Town.

DEAR AL:

Only two more days of the regular meeting here. The horses will get a three-day vacation early next week and then swing back into action at the horse show meeting opening on Thursday and closing with the Fourth of July program on Monday. Jockeys Lou Machado and Joe Brooks, having served their suspensions, return to the saddle for the Fish Day program. Tubby Adams arrived from Delaware Park with his father's Feather Tread and Daisy Petal, a pair of juveniles. The Bond family, of Baltimore, formerly the Whitneys of the small tracks, visited here this week. Maurice Olver is a volunteer fireman in his spare time. He rode a mean hook and ladder at a one-alarm blaze the other morning. C. G. Woolford has purchased Krakatoa at private terms from E. E. Clemson. The final two days of the meeting will decide the jockey championship with Machado, Root, Hacker and Palumbo running neck and neck. Some of the fight fans were disappointed because they traveled long distances and saw only two minutes and four seconds of action in the Louis-Schmeling go. That's a few seconds more than a Kentucky Derby or Santa Anita Handicap. And the preliminaries were just as bad. Now for the winners.

First race—Ladette has had some education and appears ready to step the chalk line with a maiden victory in this field of juveniles. Garrett will do the driving. Home Hunter has given a fair account of himself and should be a threat. On Account for the show end.

Second race—Janstar closed like the

With

Bill Ackerman

We have been instrumental on several occasions in bringing together anglers with transportation and those without, so that the trips that followed were satisfactory to both.

ACKERMAN.

Today we have an angler, who over the telephone sounds like a regular fellow, but who, due to a back sprain, is unable to work. He wants to spend this idle time fishing—has a good car, and an outboard—desires one or two congenial companions to share the slight expense. Cards addressed to this column with name and telephone will be turned over to him.

The Potomac River Power Squadron will assemble at 2:15 tomorrow afternoon off the Corinthian Yacht Club to follow Commander Arthur Hathaway in parade formation to Bellevue, and from there to proceed at will to the Pontoon School anchorage, in Gunston Cove, where a large evening is promised, for just about everything necessary to make a festive evening is on the bill, from eats to dancing and a short wave broadcasting of the program.

Two years ago we reported about the best story ever for the record book—the loss of false teeth some five miles offshore at Miami, their location in a snapper's stomach some two weeks later and the return to the owner.

Now we have another that falls in almost the same category. A Boston seaman fishing on the banks lost his false teeth overboard, and got them back while cleaning his catch, from the stomach of a 10-pound cod. The thought occurs—could it now be said he is in a better position to get another bite?

Pennsylvania Central Air Lines will be host to Washington fishing writers tomorrow evening for the jaunt to lower Chesapeake Bay, where the Hotel Chamberlin will take over for two days with offshore and bluefishing parties.

The trip is Pennsylvania Central's initial effort to popularizze their new terminal point, which is the central location in a fishing area that has produced many sport fish records, and which today, tomorrow and Sunday, will be the locale of the Virginia Saltwater Fishing Association's annual tournament.

The greatest activity will be centered in the bluefishing in the bay, but there are also prizes offered for almost all of the largest of the edible fish caught. On Sunday, before boarding a plane to return to Washington, Capital scribes will be feted at a seafood banquet at the Hotel Chamberlin, with the fish caught during the tourney comprising the main course.

Bottom fishing on the offshore New Jersey gravel beds is at its best. Boats are daily bringing in catches up to 200 and 300 each of mixed fish—mostly porgies, fluke and seabass. At Forked River, Barnegat and Atlantic City, the sea trout are biting outside, but the catches are few in number in the bays. It is still a little early for the summer fish.

Bluefishing might be said to be on the upgrade, although the large ones that were hitting at Messick over ten days ago are gone, and in their place small ones of little more than a pound each. Cabio are continuing to bitet there, but not in proportion to the large catches of last week, when almost a hundred of these gamesters were brought in.

One of 38 pounds was reported from Gloucester Point, very few blues, but plenty of sea trout and hardheads.

The best news comes from Capt. Tippett, at Ridge, who last week reported schools in the vicinity of St. Jeromes Creek, and this week comes back with the report that several weighing better than 4 pounds, had been caught and a cabio weighing 75 pounds. Not much to go for, but the fact that the blues are moving up is what really counts, for in a few more weeks the going is very likely to be good.

Striped bass in schools have been raising along the Maryland side of the Potomac channel from Piney Point to well above Tall Timbers. Several of the boats have been in them for small catches of fish running up to 8 and 9 pounds in weight.

At Solomons the stripers are raising sporadically at Cedar and Point Patience, but the catches as yet are not even interesting.

Capt. Bob Lee's boats at Shadyside have been consistently catching big rock in the area around Bloody Point and Thomas's Light, some sea trout and croakers in plenty.

On the Maryland ocean front, the channel bass are hitting only occasionally. Two only, were reported caught at Fox Hill levels during the last week, and none at Wachaprague. The smaller fish, kings and sea trout are going good, altogether not large—4 pounds about tops the latter.

At Ocean City the blues are running around 3 and 4 pounds, but the catches are small. One boat with 42 was highest of all reports. Twelve to 15 about the general average. Some few bonita, and as yet, no report of any marlin, even though the first catch of the white "dancing masters" had been brought in to the dock by this date last year.

Capt. Lev Raymond is back at Ocean City with his Lev-Lou after a trip to Atlantic City for overhauling. He has made many friends among local anglers in the few weeks he has fished this section. We know him so well, there is no hesitation in saying—keep your eyes on his catches during the next few weeks, for we know they will consistantly rate with the best of them.

The story of the week from Bermuda, is the taking of the largest turtle ever reported from the island. Weighing 750 pounds, it measured 10 feet from flipper to flipper, and was 7 feet 6 inches long. The oddest part about this great loggerhead was, that instead of the usual shell, it had hard speckled skin.

Tommy Shevlin fishing at Cat Cay in the Bahamas, where he still holds the blue marlin record for the 636-pounder he took back in 1935, hooked on to one this last week, that was estimated to weigh in excess of 800 pounds. During the 5-hour fight, it was brought to the boat five different times, and on each one, found to be too "green" to handle. Finally, the rasping of its bill on the heavy stainless steel leader, broke it and gave the huge fish his well-earned freedom.

To L. D. A.—we appreciate your card and news at any time, but in a way do not entirely agree with you. We too, fished Herring Bay on Sunday, looked the Gooses over, as well as Plum Point; and Solomons, Point No Point, and Point Lookout on Saturday. We caught fish at every point we stopped (hardheads, of course), cleaned some for our own use as well as several of the largest to give to friends, and released more than we kept.

Granted that at no place could the fishing be termed good, for at all of them, we found boats that were doing nothing, but also, at most of them we found here and there good catches.

You say the Gooses is usually OK, but that you can't recommend Herring Bay. Again take exception, and think that possibly you are permitting one or two unproductive trips keep you from enjoying what we have found through the years to be one of the best fishing areas on the Chesapeake. Some of our best catches of sea trout have been made on the outer edge of Holland Bar, when we run all the way from Shadyside to fish it. Our hope is that we can change your mind, so that when the sea trout do start running here you will be on hand to get in on it, and thanks again for your interest—next time we might be able to agree with you.

Dodgers Win From Pirates

Brooklyn, June 23 (AP).—Babe Phelps drove in six runs with a homer, double and single, and Rookie Tot Pressnell turned in a six-hit pitching performance today to give the Dodgers an 8-to-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Phelps' homer came with the bags empty in the eighth, and his double cleared the bases in the third. The win was Pressnell's sixth of the season, and snapped the Bucs' winning streak at three straight.

Rookie Rosy Rosen, returning to the lineup as a regular for the first time since June 2, collected four hits and scored three runs.

Since then Baer has married, become a father and staged a comeback. He gave Tommy Farr, British champion, a more decisive licking than did Louis. Many in the big crowd at the Yankee Stadium last night booed the introduction of Baer, prior to the main bout, but he always has been a big drawing card.

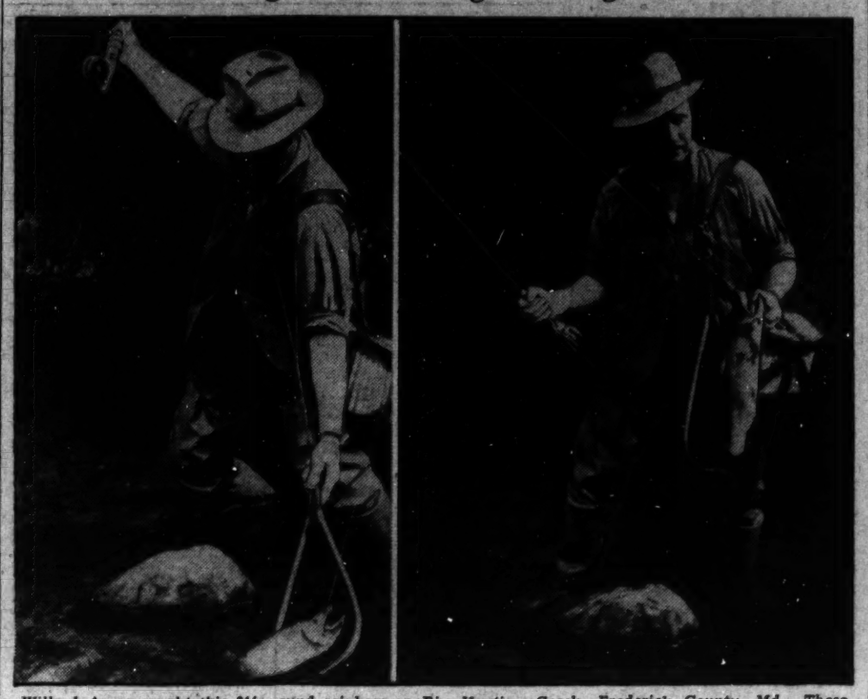
Jacobs will confer tomorrow with a California delegation on a $1,000,000 offer to hold a world heavyweight title fight in June, 1939, in connection with the San Francisco World's Fair. The delegation, headed by George Payne, chairman of the California State boxing commission, and George Traung, San Francisco police commissioner and former chairman of the commission, enlisted the aid of Gene Tunney for the meeting with Jacobs.

The San Franciscans indicated their preference for a Louis-Baer match next year, notwithstanding the promoter's idea of staging it as the climax of his 1938 outdoor campaign.

Fight Pictures Here.

Motion pictures of the Louis-Schmeling fight—shortest title bout on record, will be shown at the State Theater, Bethesda, starting today at noon. The pictures will be shown in addition to the regular feature, and will continue through June 30.

Catching Trout on Big Hunting Creek



Willard Ayres caught this 3¼ pound rainbow on Big Hunting Creek, Frederick County, Md. These two pictures show how Mr. Ayres scooped the fish out of the creek.

Down in Front

With

Richards Vidmer

There was dancing in the streets of Harlem and dull despair in Yorkville, for the word had been handed around the world that Joe Louis had knocked out Max Schmeling in less than a single round and retained his heavyweight championship. So there was dancing in the streets of Harlem, the heart of New York's Negro population, and there was dull despair in Yorkville, where the Teutonic strain prevails.

VIDMER.

But a cross section of public reaction could be better found in the Stork Cub, where the unprejudiced people of our town gathered when the fight was over. They gathered there around the circular bar, two and three deep; they gathered there about the tables in large groups and small, and some overflowed onto the dance floor.

* * * *

And the result of the battle for which these and millions of other people had waited two years, seemed to be quite satisfactory. Not all had picked Louis to win; some even had made a few sporting bets on the German. But after what they had witnessed at the Yankee Stadium a few hours before, even those who had guessed wrong seemed convinced to their own satisfaction that Joe Louis was the better man.

* * * *

Some were disappointed that the fight ended so soon, for, after all, two minutes and four seconds of action is hardly worth the price of a ringside ticket. And some had come from far away places to sit in on the battle that was over almost before it began. Some wished that it had gone at least five or six rounds so they could have taken away a clearer picture of the performance. But not one expressed the idea that the result might have been any different under different circumstances.

"It seems strange that anyone in such wonderful physical condition as Schmeling was supposed to be couldn't stand up any longer than two minutes," observed a bewildered but lovely lady.

* * * *

And the answer is that the finest physical specimen in all the world can't stand up when he has been hit in the head with a lead pipe. Few realize what terrific power there is behind Joe Louis' punches, and physical condition didn't mean a thing the other night at the Yankee Stadium. Physical condition doesn't have anything to do with the case in a fight that lasts only 2 minutes 4 seconds. It's when a battle goes into the seventh, eighth or ninth round and the pace has been fast and furious that condition becomes a major factor.

All those weeks of training that Schmeling put in at Speculator on Lake Pleasant were purposeless in view of the result, yet he had to be prepared for a longer stand.

"It's surprising that a fellow who fought 30 or 40 rounds against Pastor, Farr and Schmeling without being able to floor any of them, should have won so easily," was another thought that someone expressed.

But Louis' wasn't as intent on knocking out either Pastor or Farr—the former ran away and it was just too much trouble to chase him as long as Louis was winning anyway, and Farr was a rock-ribbed target who might cause broken hands or split eyebrows. The danger against the Welshmen lay not in what Farr might do to Louis, but what Louis might do to himself if he became too aggressive.

Nor was Louis so intent in knocking out Schmeling the last time they met—until it was too late and he had nothing left. For three rounds he was boxing easily. There was time enough to put on the crusher. And then suddenly Louis was hit in the head with a terrific right hand and it was too late. Through the remaining eight rounds he was just a man in a dream, fighting through a fog.

But this time Louis had but one purpose. He was never more aggressive in his career, and he came out of his corner at the very first bell with the single idea of crushing the man before him, and doing the job as quickly as possible.

Sandlot Pick-ups

If you are asked and the question has been raised on numerous occasions—who are the noisiest two players on the sandlots?... You don't need three guesses... But answer right up and say that it is Paul Fitzgerald, of the Washington Gas Light Co. nine, and Danny Dansburger, of the Pepco crew... There are some who contend that one is more of a chatter box than the other... But that is left for you to decide after you have seen the two lads in action... We do know that they can make more noise per square inch than any other 10 players performing for sandlot combinations.

O'Donnell's Sea Grill nine won eight games in nine starts to cop first place honors during the first half race in the Industrial League... Bill Flester, president of the league, informs us that no team in his loop has won both the first and second half titles during the past 10 years... It looks as though the record—if it can be termed such—will hold good as the Heurich nine trounced O'Donnells, 13-7, in a tilt last Wednesday.

According to all reports, the Union Printers' aggregation will be watched with unusual interest during the second half race... They have a heady and hard-hitting group of ball players which were hampered by a slow start... But during the last five games they have moved along at a fast clip, taking the best of the league into camp... They can also field but the pitching has been miserable... George Mosedale, the only effective Printer flinger, needs a little more help.

* * * *

Little Kelly Louis, a mite of a youngster with a good throwing arm, achieved that longing ambition of all mound workers... In his first start for the Capital Transit team, he pitched a no-hit tilt but his chums let him down and the Little Eagles squad scored a run on an error... Nevertheless, his nine won the game, 3-1

Profit-Taking At Close Halts Wheat Rise

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 23.—Coincident with arrival from Indiana of this season's first car of new wheat here, Chicago prices reacted late today, and more than lost 1⅞ cents earlier gain. The temporary bulge of Chicago values was chiefly associated with continued buoyant action of securities. Absence of follow-up buying of wheat futures on price advances, however, became conspicuous, and then selling to realize profits broadened in volume, especially at the last.

Contributing to the late setback here was word of good rains in dry sections of Canada. The crop prospect for southeast Alberta, where fields were beginning to burn, was reported as much more promising.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were ⅛@½ cent lower, compared with yesterday's finish, July 75½@75⅝, September 76⅜@76¾, corn unchanged to ½ higher, July 57½@57⅝, September 58¾@58⅞, oats unchanged to ⅛ off, rye ¼@⅜ up, and provisions showing 7 to 20 cents jump.

Cotton Goods, Lead, Zinc Rise

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 23.—The biggest buying movement in unfinished cotton goods since early in the year brought a general advance in print-cloth prices today. Worth street brokers reported buyers willing to pay ⅛ cent a yard overnight boosts in various constructions. Fine goods also were in active demand. The notable improvement in the market started at the beginning of the week, with sales tending to increase on the sharp upturn in securities and commodities.

Metal Prices Advanced.

Lead and zinc prices were advanced today by leading producers following a boost yesterday. Lead was marked up 4.35 cents a pound, New York, from 4.25 cents. Zinc was lifted to 4.40 cents a pound East St. Louis, from 4.25 cents.

Before yesterday's advances both metals had been quoted at the lowest for three years or more.

S. M. Waters to Head Mortgage Bankers

Chicago, June 23.—S. M. Waters, president of the 55-year-old Minneapolis mortgage banking firm of M. R. Waters & Sons, Inc., will be the next president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, the organization's nominating committee, headed by James W. Collins of Salt Lake City., announced here today. Nomination by the committee is tantamount to election by the association at the annual convention in Chicago in October.

Mr. Waters will succeed A. D. Fraser, president of A. D. Fraser, Inc., of Cleveland, and will assume office during the silver anniversary celebration marking the twenty-fifth year of the association's founding.

Bank Clearings 10.5 Per Cent Under Year Ago

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 23.—Bank clearings for 22 leading cities of the United States for the week ended June 22 totaled $5,553,013,000, a decrease of 10.5 per cent under the $6,204,656,000 for the corresponding 1937 week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. In the preceding week clearings had been 5.4 per cent below last year.

The June 22 week's aggregate was $264,762,000 under the revised total for the preceding week.

For New York City alone clearings in the June 22 week amounted to $3,535,942,000, against $3,851,160,-000 a year ago, a loss of 8.2 per cent. For the cities, excluding New York City, the aggregate was $2,017,071,-000, a decline of 14.3 per cent from the $2,353,496,000 of a year before.

Stock Advance Continues Active and Unabated for Fourth Successive Day.

New York, June 23.—The fourth successive day of the big boom in stocks continued today without any sign of a halt. Customers and employes of financial houses, who, only a week ago, wondered what was to become of the financial community, flocked back to the street to witness the gratifying sight of mounting paper profits. And from all sections of the world buying orders poured into the brokerage offices, representative houses reporting an unusual volume today from abroad and from the West Coast.

A measure of the change that has taken place so quickly may be seen in the figure of transactions in the big board. The volume of 2,403,-270 shares today was greater than the entire week's business last week when in six sessions only 1,792,630 shares changed hands. On no day this year has the above volume figure been surpassed.

Equally significant was the fact that 928 individual issues appeared on the tape today, a greater number than for any day since last March 29. Of these issues, 744 showed plus signs and only 66 declined, while 118 were unchanged for the day. There were 61 issues that scored new highs for 1932. Gains among the leading speculative favorites ranged from 1 to 6 points and there were individual cases of even sharper advances. Traders who would not take stock a week ago scrambled to get on the band wagon.

Ticker Outsped.

So furious was the trading at one time that the stock ticker was forced 6 minutes late in its effort to keep pace with quotations and for the first time the stock exchange resorted to its new "flash system" of keeping the street informed on prices. This system involves breaking the ticker's regular run of quotations at 30-second intervals to give the up-to-the-minute floor prices of leading issues.

To the chartists it was significant that rails broke through the tops made in April and May, thus confirming the earlier rise of the industrials. To these technicians this means that the intermediate trend has been reversed for the first time since the bear market got under way. While it is too early for a definite indication, this rise may later prove to be what the chartists call the first leg of a new bull market. The composite average of a hundred representative stocks yesterday closed up 1.41 points and at its close was the highest since March 15.

Cheering the bullish forces on their way was the fact that virtually all commodities yesterday joined in the rise of securities. Wheat was an exception, closing off ⅛ to ½ cent after a late reaction which was partly ascribed to the arrival in Chicago of the season's first car of new wheat.

Cotton was up 5 to 9 points and gains of other futures included rubber 24 to 30 points; hides, 3 to 13; cottonseed oil, 2 to 7; tallow, 10 to 11; copper, 12 to 15; lead, 14 to 16; and cocoa, 18 to 23 points. A Chicago writer, describing the live-stock market, and possibly watching the stock ticker out of the corner of his eye, stated that hogs were active, and lambs weak. He gave no quotation on bulls and bears.

Fostering the advance has been evidence of a firmer tone in the cash markets of a number of commodities. Steel scrap, always a good indicator on conditions within that industry, was boosted again yesterday in Pittsburgh.

Rail Bonds Lead Rise.

Out in front in yesterday's trading was United States Steel, which closed up 2¾ points. Second most active were Chrysler, which added 3⅝; New York Central, up 1⅛, and General Motors, up 1⅛. Among sharps gains were Allied Chemical, 5½; Du Pont, 3½; Union Pacific, 7; Westinghouse, 3½; Bethlehem, 2¾, and American Telephone, 2½.

Keen interest in speculative bonds again was manifested in brisker listed bond trading today, but high grade money market obligations tended to ease slightly. Whether money was being transferred from United States Treasury issues to the stock and speculative bond markets was a question that bankers debated, but no conclusive answer could be given. Railroad bonds were in the van of the upswing, which gained steadily in momentum. Local tractions remained dull. Turnover in all bonds was $10,770,-000, which is just about a normal day's trading.

Carrier bonds of the intermediate and borderline groups made the best showings, with gains ranging from 1 to 6 points. Cheapest issues among the interest-payers were traded most heavily, with little attention apparently paid the prospects for continuance of the payments. The speculative nature of the buying thus stood out, but dealers reported some investment interest in the better grade issues, as well. Default rail issues shared moderately in the advance.

Alleghany Corporation issues were marked sharply higher, and local traction obligations held close to former figures, but failed to join the general upswing. International Telephone bonds reacted slightly. Speculative commodity bonds and convertible issues were further strong groups.

In the money market section, United States Treasury issues drifted slowly downward on moderate offerings and an absence of buying interest. Declines ranged to ¼ point, with some dealers attributing the movement to the spending program now being initiated. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were lower, and in counter trading a modest decline likewise took place in short term Treasury notes and discount bills. Telephone bonds and best-grade power and light operating company issues were inclined to ease by small fractions.

In the foreign dollar division attention turned to the default bonds of Latin-American countries, which showed fractional advances. London rumors that Brazil may soon make an offer of settlement contributed to the improvement. German and other European default issues were dull. Italian and Japanese bonds held close to former levels. High grade foreigns were quiet and almost motionless.

Prize Essay Winner.

Jack Wilhelm, a student at Central High School, has been awarded a prize of $25 in a Nation-wide life insurance essay contest sponsored in high schools throughout the country by the National Association of Life Underwriters as a feature of the annual message of life insurance to the public, it was announced yesterday by Harold D. Krafft, local chairman of the competition.

To win a national award Mr. Wilhelm's paper had to survive two rigorous competitions; first, the local contest, conducted by the District of Columbia Life Underwriters' Association as a qualifying preliminary, and second, the Nation-wide competition itself.

Dry Goods Convention.

Wilcox, Bureau of Labor Statistics, will discuss "Progress on Consumer Purchases Study." Wilford L. White, chief, Marketing Research Division, Department of Commerce, will present the results of its national retail credit survey.

Other speakers include Aldo L. aRffo, director of legislative analysis of the American Retail Federation, who will talk on "Government Spending and Consumer Purchasing Power," Irving C. Cox, National Retail Dry Goods Association, of Washington, will discuss "Credit Legislation—Federal and State." Mark Lansburgh, of Lansburgh & Bro., chairman of the national organization's store management group, will conduct two important forum sessions considering management, traffic and delivery of goods.

Tin Consumption Drops 45% in U. S.

New York, June 23 (AP).—World apparent consumption of tin in the first four months of the year dropped to 32,700 tons from 67,5000 in the comparable 1937 period and world production fell to 57,800 tons from 62,300, the International Tin Research and Development Council reported today.

The consumption drop was most severe in the United States, where use in the first four months fell 45 per cent to 18,187 tons.

Engineering Awards.

New York, June 23 (AP).—Engineering construction awards for the week ended Tuesday amounted to $33,572,000, or 15 per cent more than the previous week but 71 per cent under the corresponding week last year—the 1937 peak week—the Engineering News-Record reported today.

Cotton Climbs As Trade Gains

New York, June 23 (AP).—Cotton quickly rallied today from early declines as heavy sales of cotton textiles continued and Wall Street again advanced. October sold up from 8.48 to 8.74 and closed at 8.67, with final prices 5 to 9 points net higher.

The market opened 4 to 6 points lower and soon eased to net losses of 10 to 11 points under foreign selling, July liquidation and a continuation of yesterday's offerings on a reactionary theory. Early strength and activity in the stock market, however, brought in renewed Wall Street and Western buying and as contracts became scarce, prices easily sold up 23 to 26 points from the lows and to net advances of 12 to 16 points.

Futures Price Range.

	High.	Low.	Last.
July	8.72	8.47	8.67
October	8.74	8.48	8.67-68
December	8.79	8.53	8.71-72
January	8.76	8.55	8.72
March	8.83	8.59	8.75-76
May	8.85	8.62	8.78

Spot, steady; middling, 8.77.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was firm today on more active covering and commission house buying, although after advancing 8 to 13 points there were partial reactions under realizing. Final prices were 2 to 7 points net higher. Sales, 310 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal. July closed 8.18, September 8.19, October and December 8.18 and January, 8.17.

Penn. Road to Sell Equipment Issue

Philadelphia, June 23.—The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. today invited bids for the purchase of $6,330,000 equipment trust certificates to finance the construction of 1,000 gondola cars, eight special type freight cars, two experimental passenger coaches and 20 electric passenger locomotives, the total cost of which will be approximately $8,440,000.

Bids are asked on two interest bases, one with interest at the rate of 2½ per cent and the other at 2¾ per cent. Bids will be received by the company up to noon, daylight saving time, on June 29.

Brokers' Loans Drop $7,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $515,000,000. The week ended yesterday and the total represented a decrease of $7,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,217,000,000.

Idle Bank Funds Gain $50,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The glut of idle money in the Nation's banks has increased to $2,780,-000,000. The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday the total of such money, known as excess reserves, was $50,000,000 higher than a week ago, because of Treasury spending and a decrease of money in circulation.

Federal officers have decided to recommend liberalized bank regulations in an effort to have some of the idle money put to work in the form of loans.

Gen. Motors Closing Extended 3 Weeks

New York, June 23 (AP).—General Motors Corporation, largest automobile producer in the United States, will, because of shut down this summer three weeks longer, on the average, than last summer, William S. Knudsen, president, said today.

Last year's shutdown, on the average two or three weeks, was the shortest changeover period in the company's history. The severe drop in 1938 automobile sales, not experienced in the spring of 1937, was the chief cause blamed by Knudsen.

Advertising Urged as Cure For Inertia

Best Means to Start an Upward Trend, Says Bankers' Organ.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 23.—Aggressive advertising campaigns by business to overcome inertia and start an upward trade trend was advocated today in the new issue of Banking, official publication of the American Bankers Association, by William R. Kuhns, editor, who said:

"Public education through aggressive advertising and selling is the best weapon that business has to combat the prevailing inertia. It is the only means lying completely within the control of business which can be used to counteract the side of the depression that is purely psychological."

The problem of making large reservoirs of existing bank credit available for sound business, he said, "is being attacked from many angles." Discussions at Washington, he went on, "have indicated considerable headway among authorities as to methods by which the flow of credit from banks to industry can be stimulated."

Listing favorable factors "which ought to inspire confidence," he included estimated record grain crops with corresponding European shortage; depleted condition of merchandise stocks; depletion of raw material stocks, and the seeming inevitability of "renewed buying in almost all lines."

Republic Steel Pays Premium for Scrap

Youngstown, Ohio, June 23 (AP).—Scrap dealers here had a new optimism today after learning Republic Steel Corporation had bought 20,000 tons of No. 1 heavy smelting scrap at Pittsburgh yesterday at $12 a ton, about 50 cents above recent market figures.

Joseph Wilkoff, secretary-treasurer of the Wilkoff Co., scrap dealers, predicted $15 a ton within 60 to 90 days. About a year ago, scrap sold at $19 to $20.

Sears, Roebuck Sales 11.4% Under Last Year

Chicago, June 23 (AP).—Sears, Roebuck & Co. today announced gross sales for the fifth period aggregated $39,809,726, compared with $49,097,-436 for the corresponding period in 1937. The decrease for the period, from May 23 to June 18, was $9,287,-710, or 18.9 per cent.

For the five periods from January 31, to June 18, gross sales were $189,084,824, compared with $213,-346,125 for the corresponding period last year, a decrease of $24,261,301, or 11.4 per cent.

NOTICE!

After June 30th the Single Premium Deferred Annuity will not be issued and the yield on new Single Premium Immediate Annuities will be cut about 10%.

'Homey' News Best, Says Top Rural Reporter

Oklahoma Woman Wins $500, Visit to D. C. for Writings.

When an Oklahoma farmwoman discovers a new method of churning golden butter, that's news!

And so are the story of how the hens are laying at Mrs. Smithers' farm, and the condition of the wheat crop over beyond the junction.

For, according to Mrs. Edna Eaton Wilson, 37-year-old mother of four strapping sons, who arrived here yesterday after winning a $500 prize and a trip east as the best country newspaper correspondent of 1938, the human interest value that strikes closest home constitutes news.

She's 'Homesick.'

The award is made annually by Country Home Magazine. Near Ripley, Okla., Mrs. Wilson helps her husband operate their 270-acre dairy farm. Her column of farm and community news appears in the weekly Gazette, of nearby Stillwater. It is devoted completely to farm and community news.

"I'm mighty homesick for my husband and sons and farm and good Oklahoma cooking," said Mrs. Wilson yesterday in her suite at the Mayflower Hotel.

On Job for 20 Years.

On the last lap of her journey, Mrs. Wilson has seen New York, White Sulphur Springs and Washington.

Twenty years ago Mrs. Wilson first began penciling items for the paper. She uses a typewriter now and during her trip she has sent a regular column to daily papers in her State.

Born in the old Creek Indian Nation in 1901, Mrs. Wilson attended Oklahoma A. and M. College, in Stillwater, and then taught school in the Pawnee County.

"I never write scandal," she smiled yesterday.

Writes of "Homey Things."

"I write about the homey things in life—things that interest my neighbors and my readers.

"The duty of the country correspondent, I think, is to sell her neighborhood and not sell it short. "I'll be mighty glad to get back home again. I'm going to take part of the prize money and pay for my kerosene automatic refrigerator, which makes real ice cubes.

"I'm a newspaperwoman without a telephone—but I think we'll have an electric plant put in soon and a telephone, too."

Prelate Observes His Silver Jubilee

New York, June 23.—The Very Rev. Father Terrance S. McDermott, O. P., provincial of the Dominican Fathers east of the Rocky Mountains, celebrated his silver jubilee in the priesthood at a special high mass this morning at the Roman Catholic Church of St. Vincent Ferrer.

Father McDermott formerly was prior of the Dominican House of Studies at Washington.

YA KNOW, BESSIE, I GET FRIGHTENED WHEN I THINK OF OUR SON'S FUTURE. SUPPOSE HE INHERITS YOUR WEAKNESS FOR TAKING YOUR PARTNER OUT OF A BUSINESS DOUBLE?

"The Timid Soul" by Webster Appears in Sunday's Post.

Bob Burns Says—

A person would be a lot more considerate of other people if they had'ta get on the other side of the fence once in a while.

I knew a rich playboy one time who had been caught speeding several times, but on account of his papa's "pull," he was always let off with a warning. Finally one time, when he drove right through the main street at 60 miles an hour, the judge lost his patience and told the playboy he would have'ta give up his driver's license for one year.

The playboy jumped to his feet and says, "Judge, that sentence is cruel and unjust—do you realize that now I will have'ta walk and be at the mercy of those crazy speed idiots!"

Electric 'Police' Are Described To Engineers

Why Electrons in Transit Don't Collide Explained at Conclave.

How nearly 200 sets of red and green traffic lights direct the flow of electrons along 300 miles of transmission lines from Boulder Dam to light the lamps and turn the wheels of distant Los Angeles was described yesterday to the American Institute of Electric Engineers, in session at the Mayflower Hotel.

Reading a paper prepared by Maurice E. Reagan, engineer of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Gennero DeGroce told of the prevention of traffic jams in light and power due to lightning or any other failure in the line.

"This electrical system," said the paper, "sends its danger signals and corrective messages in carrier current 'squad cars,' racing along two parallel transmission lines between the dam and the city. There's never a collision, because the carrier current travels with a different frequency from the normal 60-cycle power current."

Other speakers yesterday included D. C. Prince and E. A. Williams, jr., of General Electric; R. M. Spurck and H. E. Strang, of General Electric; Philip Sporn and H. P. St. Clair, of the American Gas & Electric Service Corporation; R. C. Dickinson, of Westinghouse; Jerome Sandin, of Westinghouse; James B. Smith, of the Associated Factory Mutual Fire Insurance Co.; C. N. Waygandt, of the American Gas & Electric Service Corporation; J. F. Calvert, of Iowa State College; W. P. Appleman, of the Marathon Electric Manufacturing Corporation; E. D. Treanor, of General Electric; R. W. Sorensen, California Tech; J. E. Clem, General Electric; P. L. Bellaschi and C. V. Aggers, of Westinghouse; H. W. Wahlquist, of the Edison Electric Institute; T. A. Taylor, of Bell Telephone; R. W. Porter, of General Electric; F. H. Gulliksen, of Westinghouse; A. J. Williams, jr., of Leeds & Northrup Co.; C. M. Summers, of General Electric; Hillel Poritsky, of General Electric, and L. Alan Hazeltine, of Stevens Institute of Technology.

Three D. C. Boys Injured in Falls, Taken to Hospital

Three young boys were injured yesterday, one seriously, in falls from trees or windows.

Henry J. Miller, jr., 2, of 3120 R street northwest, fell 12 feet from a window in his home when a screen gave way early yesterday. He was taken to Georgetown Hospital by his father. Doctors said he was not seriously injured.

Nick Speleos, 13, of 1207 Fifth street northeast, fractured his left wrist and suffered possible concussion of the brain when he fell from a tree while playing at Fifth street and Florida avenue northeast. He is in Casualty Hospital.

Marvin Stogner, 13, 409 G street northwest, was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a fractured arm after he fell from a tree in front of his home.

Bar Group Fears Law to Rule Press

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, June 23.—Successful attempts by legislation will be made to control the freedom of the press in connection with court trials if it is not otherwise controlled, the American Bar Association's committee on co-operation between press, radio and bar predicts in its annual report, to be presented to the association at the meeting from July 25 to 29 in Cleveland.

The alternative to legislation, the report states, which undoubtedly the "chaos which generally has existed will lead to, is an enlightened accord between those interested, and support for judges who act in accordance with this accord."

D. C. Lawyer Made Harvard Overseer

Cambridge, Mass., June 23 (AP).—Election of five new members of the board of overseers of Harvard University was announced today at the annual meeting of the Alumni Association.

Named to six-year terms were George Rublee, Washington lawyer; Langdon P. Marvin, New York lawyer and a former overseer; Robert Frost, Amherst poet; Harry Parkman, jr., corporation counsel for the City of Boston, and Lloyd K. Garrison, dean of the University of Wisconsin Law School.

Mr. Rublee is a member of the Washington law firm of Covington, Burling, Rublee, Acheson and Shorb. His home is at 2840 Woodland drive northwest.

Fair Treatment Asked For All Transportation

Roanoke, Va., June 23 (AP).—Fair and equal treatment by the Government for all forms of transportation was asked by Robert S. Henry, of Washington, assistant to the president of the Association of American Railroads, in an address before the Roanoke Rotary Club tonight.

Dr. T. H. McMichael Dies.

Monmouth, Ill., June 23 (AP).—Dr. Thomas Hanna McMichael, president emeritus of Monmouth College, died tonight. He was 75 and had retired in 1936 after being president 33 years. He was moderator of the United Presbyterian Church in 1915.

A new decorative wall map devoted to the "Historic and Scenic Reaches of the Nation's Capital" was distributed to members of the National Geographic Society yesterday with the July number of the National Geographic Magazine. Shown with appropriate markings, are the historic cities, forts, battlefields and shrines of Colonial days, the Revolutionary Period, and the Civil War; the birthplaces of noted men and women; historic taverns; famous estates; and the network of highways and minor roads that connects them.

A feature of the map is the depiction in a special color of the National and State Parks, National Forests, and other recreational areas within easy driving distance of Washington.

Portraits Reproduced.

The map is in ten colors and is embellished on the upper and lower margins with colored drawings of some of the most famous buildings and places of interest in the area, and with black-and-white portraits of outstanding men who have made history in the region, including Capt. John Smith, Lord Baltimore, Washington, Jefferson, Edgar Allan Poe and Walter Reed.

The "reaches" included on the map extend northward to include Philadelphia, Valley Forge and Gettysburg; southward beyond Norfolk, Richmond and Roanoke; westward into the mountains of West Virginia; and eastward to include part of New Jersey, and all of Delaware and the eastern shores of Maryland and Virginia. The map will go into a million homes in the United States and to more than a hundred thousand members of the National Georgraphic Society in other parts of the world.

Article Explains Map.

Maj. F. E. Taylor Expires at 52 In Walter Reed

Maj. Frank E. Taylor, 52, Judge Advocate General's Department, United States Army, died Wednesday at Walter Reed Hospital, the War Department announced yesterday.

Maj. Taylor had three tours of duty in the office of the Judge Advocate General here; from 1919 until 1924, from 1927 until 1928, and from October, 1936, until November of last year, when he went to Walter Reed Hospital.

Maj. Taylor is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mona S. Taylor, of 1801 Sixteenth street northwest. Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. today in Fort Myer chapel with Chaplain Alfred C. Oliver, jr., officiating. Interment will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers will be Majs. H. N. Gilbert, Loren F. Parmley, T. D. Joiner, James E. Morrisette and J. F. R. Scott, and Capts. A. R. C. Sander, Henry C. Clark and Neal D. Franklin.

Other wills filed for probate included:

Ice Cream Inquiry Records Ordered

Chicago, June 23 (AP).—Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson today issued a subpoena requiring the International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers and 41 affiliates throughout the Nation to produce records before a Chicago grand jury July 18.

The international association has its headquarters in Washington. The grand jury, scheduled to convene July 5, presumably will hear evidence to determine whether a national dairy trust exists.

Tale of Weakfish Neither Fishy Nor Weak, U. S. Says

By the Associated Press

Uncle Sam swore to the truth of this fish story yesterday:

R. P. Lamborn, of New York, and Frederick Koch, of Woodside, Long Island, fishing recently in Peconic Bay, hooked two weakfish that had been carrying identification tags inside them for 5½ years. Experts said this was unprecedented.

The fish were given the tags to swallow in 1932 so their migration habits might be studied. A total of 1,800 weakfish were tagged in this way at Montauk, Long Island. The two captured by Lamborn and Koch, tend to prove theories of experts that although weakfish may travel as far as 500 miles from their spawning grounds, if they live three or more years afterward they will return to the grounds.

Lawn Party Planned.

Friendship House will hold a lawn party at the settlement, 619 D street southeast, tonight at 7:30 o'clock. An amateur show, Frank Portello's Punch and Judy, and games of skill with prizes will be on the program.

Miner College Graduates 85 At Exercises

Dean Thyra W. Amos, of the University of Pittsburgh, was the principal speaker yesterday at commencement exercises in the Armstrong auditorium of the Miner Teachers College, where Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, Assistant Superintendent of Schools, presented 85 candidates for the degree of bachelor of science. The degree was conferred and diplomas were awarded by Mrs. M. A. McNeill, member of the Board of Education.

Greetings were extended by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, Superintendent of Schools. The invocation and benediction were pronounced by the Rev. Edgar A. Love, district superintendent of the African Methodist Episcopal Church. Musical numbers were furnished by the High School Orchestra and the College Glee Club.
